ADVOCATE OFFICE AND EQUIPMENT TOTALLY DESTROYED BY FIRE FEB. 8

Adjoining Store of W. Russ Partly Saved and Balance of Block Protected by Hillsdale Fire Dept.

NO INSURANCE MAKES ADVOCATE LOSS COMPLETE AND A NEW START NECESSARY

Fire which broke out in the Advocate office about 9:00 a. m. Thursday, Feb. 8, while the editor was at a local garage for repairs on his press, destroyed the entire plant and building. From the Advocate office the flames spread rapidly to the general store of W. Russ on the west. This building was completely gutted on the second floor and the stock on the first floor badly injured by smoke and water. Mr. Russ carried insurance of only $400. The fire was checked in this building and the barber shop of V. McFadden was saved, although some damage was done by water.

The local fire department did what it could and hundreds of people came from the surrounding country. The local pumping engine used in summer for street sprinkling was found to be out of commission and the small chemical outfit was inadequate to cope with the blaze.

Dr. McFarland had forethought in calling the Hillsdale fire department which probably saved most of our town from going up in smoke. We want to thank all the people of this community who worked so hard to save the buildings. We also want to say good words of appreciation for the Hillsdale fire company. They are sure some husky men when it comes to soaking the flames. The whole block would undoubtedly have burned without their assistance. They made the run from Hillsdale in 22 minutes, which is quick enough over such icy roads.

Brother Walter Ford of the Brooklyn Exponent has kindly volunteered to print this issue and such other bulletins as we may need until we can get on our feet.

A SUGGESTION FROM WALTER FORD

The writer, visiting the scene of the Advocate fire on Friday is moved by the complete loss to Mr. Harvey of his building and plant and by the loss to North Adams and community of this newspaper, to make the following suggestions:

First let the reader imagine if he can of having his business on farm or in town completely wiped out in an hour, tools, building, records and very item he depends on for making livelihood. It is hard to imagine and it is far harder to experience.

The writer learned the printing business in North Adams and knows that the people of this locality are as loyal, liberal and as helpful as in any other community on earth.

For immediate and practical aid we suggest that every reader of this item place the price of at least a year's subscription to the Advocate, $1.50, immediately in the hands of Editor Harvey. As now has no office in which to receive such subscriptions, we suggest that each person leave a small amount or more on subscription in the hands of Harold Young or at the North Adams bank. Do it now or mail direct to Mr. Harvey.

To those who have not been regular subscribers to our regular advertisers in their home newspaper, we want to suggest that they bury the hatchet of any unfriendly feeling or indifference. The proof of your value to your community and your own peace of mind is determined by what you do when a man or institution in your community is down and out.

Your patience and your friendliness in the long period which will be necessary to reestablish the Advocate will to the certain knowledge of the writer be keenly appreciated by Mr. Harvey.

Walter L. Ford.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because

BECAUSE—

You get to your job early and stay late?

Haven't you often given these laughers the excuse that you "get up early, anyhow," that "you like to get down before the crowds," "that you like the office when it's quiet?"

Haven't they said that you "wanted to be teacher's pet," that you were trying to get "in strong?" Haven't you hated their taunts?

Suppose all these things that you tell them are true, why not tell them the rest? No one ever amounted to a row of beans that doesn't like his job well enough to come early and stay late. The time clock never yet ticked off a successful man or woman. Working on the clock often interrupts a business bit of work. Let them laugh; it is a jolly accompaniment to your successful flight!

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

Those who have plenty of honey like to use it in cookery as the product keeps moist much longer than that made with sugar.

Honey Cakes.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter and add one cupful of strained honey. Cool and add the grated rind of a lemon, one teaspoonful of lemon juice, two ounces of sweet almonds blanched and chopped fine, one-fourth teaspoonful of mace, one-half teaspoonful of soda, and two and one-half cupfuls of flour. Mix thoroughly, then set aside, covered, in a cool place for twelve hours. Roll in a sheet one-half inch thick, cut in squares and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. When baked brush over the tops with a thick sugar syrup.

Apricot Cakes.—Roll one-fourth of a cake of chocolate, add one-half cupful of milk and the yolk of an egg. Cook together until thick. Allow this to cool, then add a tablespoonful of softened butter, one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one teaspoonful of vanilla, and one-half cupful of flour and a teaspoonful of baking powder. Add one-half teaspoonful of soda to the flour, mix and bake in layer cake pans. Spread with stewed, sifted, dried, or cut up apricots. Cover the cake with a boiled frosting.

Barbecued Ham.—Have the ham cut very thin and broil quickly or pan broil it. Arrange on a hot platter and add to the fat in the pan a teaspoonful of sugar, one teaspoonful of made mustard, a dash of red pepper and four tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Stir and bubbling hot, then pour over the ham and serve.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—Take one cupful of cottage cheese, add one-half cupful of whipped cream to which two tablespoonfuls of any good salad dressing have been added. Stir and mix well into the cheese. Add or press into cone-shaped forms with an ice cream dipper and serve on lettuce with a little of the salad dressing on top.

Eleanor Boardman

The development of Eleanor Boardman as a "movie" star has attracted much attention. From about 2,000 girls she was chosen a very short time ago by a leading producer who was seeking material for film work. Doing her first small part to the satisfaction of the producer she was rapidly given more important parts until she now has reached stardom.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL
Facts about your name; its history; meanings; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day and lucky friend

EFFIE

FROM the quaint old-fashioned Euphemia, so rarely heard in these days, comes the popular name Effie. It is not a diminutive, as is generally supposed, but a full-blown name with an interesting history. Originally Euphemia meant, both fair speech and abstinence from the reverse, so that from an ironical standpoint it signified silence, and was applied to the stillness that prevailed during religious rites.

The first Euphemia who gave vogue to the name was a virgin martyr of Bithynia, whose legend of constancy made her popular in both the East and the West. Russia called her Fevdiya; she was Jena in Serbia, and Donna and Blanche in other lands. Scotland, however, adopted the name and straightaway called her Effie. Effie was also Scottish but did not attain the popularity of the former.

However, neither Effie nor Phemie, which have been prevalent since those early times, can ever be forgotten because of the finest works of Sir Walter Scott. Heroines of fiction, written by the masters of literature, had their names as immortalized as heroines of history and Effie is no exception to this general rule.

It was once thought that the Scottish name Euphemia was one of the Greek names brought from Hungary by Queen Margaret. Others believe that it came from the Keltic Aelfie which has fostered so many of our present-day feminine names. Indeed, those so inclined may take their choice of possible sources, though general credence is more often given to the first derivation, since it concerns a religiousness and in other days it would seem that being martyred was all that was needed to perpetuate one's name through the centuries.

In the Scottish Highlands, Effie is called Olghrich, a name which seems to have no derivation whatever. The Church of Santa Eufemia at Rome gives title to a cantata and through it the name has spread in popularity in Italy and France.

Effie's stone is the topos, which has the power of the sun to put to flight all evil and dark forebodings, but it must be set in gold to accomplish its purpose. It promises that no harm shall befall its wearer. Thursday is her lucky day; 2 her lucky number, and the chrysanthemum is her flower.

Professional Advice.

The long climb by the mountain side was too much for the tenderfoot and he admitted it.
"I can't stand it," he panted, sinking on a rock. "My legs are all in." "Waal," suggested the guide, helpfully, "why don't you hop awhile and rest 'em out at a time?"

DAIRY POINTS

BEST SITE FOR MILK HOUSE

Not Good Plan to Get Them Too Near Cow Barn—Must Be Clean, Airy and Dust-Proof.

Milk houses must be clean, airy, dust-proof places, free from all insects and bad odors. They should not open directly into the barn, but it is equally inadvisable to build them a very great distance away from the barn. Prompt removal and quick cooling are the main points to observe in handling milk. Put the milk house on a well-drained spot and away from rubbish heaps, manure piles and fly-breeding places. The outer walls, if of concrete, should be from 6 to 8 inches thick; if of brick, 10 inches; if of tile, 8 inches; if of stone, 14 to 18 inches; and if of wood frame, 4 inches.

Milk House Suitable for a Ten to Twenty-cow Dairy.

Authorities say that particular care should be exercised in constructing milk house floors. Concrete is by far the best material for this purpose, as it resists moisture, decay and wear. Concrete floors should be built of a base made up of one part cement, three parts sharp, clean sand and five parts stone. This base should be covered with five inches thick and should be covered with a top coat of inch thick made by mixing one part cement and two parts sand. The top coat should be troweled hard and smooth.

SAFEGUARDING MILK SUPPLY

Form of Ordinance Drawn to Guide Communities in Framing Practicable Law.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

In properly safeguarding the milk supply of a community, the enactment of a suitable and enforceable law is usually the first step, according to a reprint of department bulletin 555, "A Guide for Formulating a Milk Ordinance," just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. Milk, in its composition and natural qualities, is a most useful and acceptable food, but may acquire from or another of unsanitary taint on its way from the cow to the consumer; and it is not always possible to require either producers or distributors to observe all the precautions which science has shown to be necessary. Unless there is a law to back them up, the public and officials of a city realizing this need may sometimes, in their zeal to make the new regulations strict enough, go too far and insist on provisions that are not readily enforced or administered. Even health department officials may not be able to enforce the law unless they have already been trained in the enforcement of milk regulations, and in any case, whether the city is just starting milk regulation or is revising its ordinances to bring them up to date, it is desirable to take advantage of the experience of other communities.

The United States Department of Agriculture has drawn up a form of ordinance to guide communities in framing a suitable and enforceable law. Copies of the bulletin may be had free upon application to the department at Washington, D. C.

IRREGULAR MILKING IS BAD

Not Only Lessens Output, but Tends to Disturb Functional Activity of Animal.

Early milking morning or evening one day and later milking morning or evening another day not only lessens the output of milk, but tends to disturb functional activity and prevents a maximum yield for the lactation period.

MIXTURE FOR YOUNG CALVES

Ground Corn, Oats, Bran and Oilmeal Is Recommended for Those Under Six Months.

For calves under six months old in good condition and having a soft, well-milked, a mixture of 30 pounds ground corn, 30 pounds ground oats, 30 pounds bran and 10 pounds oilmeal, fed three to five days daily, is recommended.

Hard to Get Flow Back.

If a cow's milk flow is allowed to go down through neglect, poor feed or any other cause, it is almost impossible to get the flow back up to the first stage.

Milk Only Good Cows.

Milk more cows—but by all that's sensible, milk only good cows.

Cause of Stringy Milk.

Stringy milk does not occur frequently unless the cows drink water from stagnant pools, etc.

IT'S THE WAY THEY DO IT. He's got good-looking young big lady of Burd County.

She: That's jes where yer wrong Mr. Smarty, I've been laying in the barn all day.

WASTE OF TIME AND MONEY

Why One Young Chicago Matron Has Had Her Phone Taken From the Party Line.

The inconvenience of a party line telephone was vividly illustrated in the home of a young couple in the suburbs not long ago, resides the Chicago Journal.

The telephone instrument for some reason was located in a large closet. A hard shower came up suddenly while the six-year-old son was at a kindergarten, and as it was near closing time and Bobby was all unprepared for rain he was sent to the telephone to order a taxi to call for him. Much to her annoyance, when she took down the receiver she heard unmistakable indications of a lengthy conversation: "Take a cup of sugar, two eggs..." but rather than lose her opportunity of putting in her call as soon as the conversation ceased she remained in the closet. Impatiently she waited, taking down the receiver at short intervals, only to hear: "Then take a slice even..." and "No, this recipe never fails. I always use it..." but was finally rewarded by hearing the final "Goodbye, call me up when we can have time for a long visit." After at last giving her order to the taxi man she emerged from the closet hot and cross, only to find that the sum was shining brightly. Ten minutes later up drove Bobby in state, all smiles and enthusiasm at his unexpected ride. That was the last straw. The telephone still remains in the closet, but the party line is no more.

POOR REWARD FOR BRAVERY

Evidently the Police in Some Parts of France Have Queer Notions and Are Not Strong on Common Sense.

Passengers on the Bordeaux-Cette express in France were saved from a holding by a mobbed bandit owing to the pluck of a railroad man who happened to be traveling on the train. Feigning sleep he waited until the bandit was leaning over him. Then suddenly he pulled a revolver and covered the outlaw, who was then disarmed and arrested. That was the last straw. The telephone still remains in the closet, but the party line is no more.

FOR THE TABLE

In using bread crumbs for escalloped dishes, season well with salt and pepper and add a small quantity of melted butter; stir until well mixed. Currants, the dried variety, may be well cleaned by rubbing them well in flour, which will remove any grit, then wash under and dry in a colander and they will be ready for use.

One of the most wholesome of breakfast foods is wheat right from the granary. Soak over night, then cook slowly on the back of the stove until the wheat is a gelatinous mass. Serve with top milk.

Green Soup—Wash two quarts of spinach in several waters. Wash, peel and chop fine three small turnips, onions, a bunch of celery and a bunch of parsley. Fry the vegetables in four tablespoons of butter, add a pint of water and simmer until tender. Mix two tablespoons of flour with a little milk, add it to one and one-half pints of milk, and boil five minutes. Put all the vegetables through a sieve, then add the hot milk and serve with croutons.

Tuna Fish Salad—Take one cupful of tuna fish, shredded, three-fourths of a cupful of boiled sweet dressing, one-half cupful of chopped celery, one-half envelope of gelatin, one-fourth cupful of water, one chopped green pepper, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika. Soak the gelatin in the water five minutes, then add with all the other ingredients to the hot salad dressing. Turn into individual molds dipped in cold water and chill. Turn out on crisp lettuce and serve.

Southern Golden Fleece—Cut fine and soak in a saucpan one-half pound of rich cheese; when soft add one cupful of cream and a dash of cayenne; when thoroughly blended, break in five fresh eggs, cover for two minutes, when the white is set, remove the cover and add a pint of salted milk. It will rise in a yellow foam, tender and delicious. Serve on buttered toasted milk crackers.

DOGS POPULAR IN LONDON

Women Particularly Seem to Have Taken Turn Into Favor—In Dog and in France.

Londoners are very fond of dogs, and more than half the women one meets on the street have them on leash, or running loose. I was discussing this phase of London life with a London policeman when a lady passed with a little dog, of a type and breed that were entirely strange to me.

"What kind of a dog is that?" I asked him.

He turned from nothing a fast-speaking motorist to slow down. "That," he replied, "Oh, there are only two kinds of dogs in London—the quick and the dead."

A part of fashionable Hyde Park is set aside for a "dog cemetery," and the headstones show that many affectionate regard in which many people hold their dog friends.

Good dogs were very scarce in France when a mobbed bandit owing to the pluck of a railroad man who happened to be traveling on the train. Feigning sleep he waited until the bandit was leaning over him. Then suddenly he pulled a revolver and covered the outlaw, who was then disarmed and arrested. That was the last straw. The telephone still remains in the closet, but the party line is no more.

The latter were surprised to learn early that this smart act is being rewarded by a fine of one franc and the confiscation of the revolver. Local police authorities have found nothing better to do than prosecute for the possession of firearms without a license. To this must be added a sum of about fifty francs for the legal costs of the case.

It seems that the local police who could not have any right of the sort a score of years, have few cases in which they can prosecute and are glad to jump at every opportunity to show their zeal.

Mix two tablespoons of flour with a little milk, add it to one and one-half pints of milk, and boil five minutes. Put all the vegetables through a sieve, then add the hot milk and serve with croutons.

Tuna Fish Salad—Take one cupful of tuna fish, shredded, three-fourths of a cupful of boiled sweet dressing, one-half cupful of chopped celery, one-half envelope of gelatin, one-fourth cupful of water, one chopped green pepper, one-half teaspoonful of salt, and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of paprika. TO THE PUBLIC

Owing to the fact that the Advocate has been put out of commission by the fire we are not able to give you a regular edition for a few weeks, but we want you to know that we are on the job every minute trying to check up our business.

All of our books and records were entirely burned up, so we do not know much about how we stand, only as we can recollect.

We figure on putting out some kind of a small Advocate each week showing how the reestablishing of a paper is progressing. As our list of subscribers was destroyed we will have to depend on hearing from each one, and we want to keep every subscriber, whether paid in advance or not.

We cannot promise how soon the regular Advocate will again come into circulation, but we hope before long. We have reason to believe that the machinery that went through the fire is ruined and good for nothing but junk, so we will have to buy some more.

Our loss amounts to about $5000 but we are not going to give up the ghost. As soon as possible we shall resume some kind of a printing business.

We would appreciate a remittance from any subscribers who know themselves to be in arrears up to the time of the fire. We would like new subscribers, of course, and we thoroughly appreciate the aid we are receiving from many sources in getting our list together again. Every little bit helps.

We want to thank business men and others for their kind offers and voluntary helpfulness. We want to thank brother publishers for real aid. It is almost worth misfortune to know that, so many are ready to extend a helping hand. We want to be worthy of your confidence and your friendship.

Before marriage every girl should test her sweetheart's disposition by making him carry a mattress upstairs.

Another country newspaper, the Orland Zenith, has gone the way of hundreds of others printed in towns where there has been a spirit of indifference on the part of merchants to support a home paper. Its subscription list has been taken over by the Bronson Journal, but the plan will be moved out—Parma News.

The blizzard which blew in from the north Wednesday threatens to stay for a few days and has given the local garden planters league an awful set back. Local weather prognosticators around the hot stove are not offering bets that radishes will be ripe before March 15. The roads are lanked with snow and the frost went down another inch in the ground over night.

There is less unemployment throughout the state this winter than there has been for several years, according to a report issued by the state department of labor. Usually just after the holiday period, there is a time of seasonal unemployment, when many concerns shut down for inventory or because orderless slack. The situation this time is entirely different, the officials declare, due largely to the increased prosperity in the automobile and allied industries. The report shows most of the auto plants running full capacity to meet the unusually heavy orders for the spring trade.

BUY A FARM NOW

"Now is the time to hold on if you have a good farm," says Earl Levin, of the Michigan Agricultural College. "Now is the time to buy if you expect to farm in Michigan. Our domestic consumption is in increasing, our population is increasing, the increase being largely in our industrial centers. Especially important is the fact to us who are in the hub of the nation's industrial life. There is no cheap land in the west. A period of intensification for the land close to the large consuming markets is at hand. The high cost of transportation is stimulating the development of food production near those markets. Michigan land values are going up and the one who holds on and conserves his soil fertility will win when we begin moving to the crest of the wave."

HOMIE PHILOSOPHY

Great men use arithmetic to reason. Small fry use it to figure percentages. The big fellows live during and after life. The other gang never lives at all. They just ooze out. Think it over. Simple sum in addition. God is Love. That's a number—One. You are made in God's image. That's another number—One. Very well then, add 'em up. The more you express Love in your daily life, the more you resemble God. Get it? One and one are two. Now then: God is good, and God is Everywhere. Therefore, Good is available everywhere. That's two. Add up again. Two and two make four. So why not love humanity and find good in everything. There's no mistake in the figures. The boy who doesn't like arithmetic doesn't know what it's for. Maybe we need a new curriculum in the little red school house.

PLAY SAFE, SAYS GORMAN

Frank E. Gorman, cashier of the Capital National Bank of Lansing, and treasurer of the state of Michigan, says: "In 1923 Michigan citizens use several millions of dollars investing in too highly speculative stocks or worthless schemes which made money only for the originators. Nobody knows how much of this money went out of the state to fatten the fatter. Everybody should realize now to make an investment of hard earned money until he or she knows exactly where this hard earned money is going. There are hundreds of sound investments which will pay only a rational return. It is true, but the return is sure. Stock in these companies has a bank value because the management has integrity. Before making an investment or listening to some glib stock salesman, investigate. Any banker will advise you. They maintain a department for this very purpose and it has a fund of information relative to stocks and bonds. Keep your hard earned money safe and secure in sound investments and safe places. Resolve this and don't be so greedy that the slick salesman puts it over you on fake propositions. Play safe and keep your money in 1923."

HORSE SENSE

Horse Thief—What's the matter stranger?

Horse Thief—Hard luck. Shall I shoot the bloomin' thing?

Speaking of offensive in the next war, why not let Onions and Limberg lead them?

Learning that Editor Lew Harvey of the North Adams Advocate had been burned out, the Exponent editor made a trip to North Adams last Friday and found it only too true. The Advocate brick building and plant were completely burned last Thursday morning, not the smallest item was saved and not a cent of insurance. An adjoining brick store was partly demolished before the fire was extinguished by the Hillsdale fire department. The fire apparently caught from the stove while Editor Harvey was at a local garage making repairs on a press pulley. The loss will approximate $5000. The Exponent issued a small paper for the Advocate last week to take the place of the issue that was on the press when burned, and will issue other numbers for the Advocate until another plant can be assembled. Mr. Harvey exhibits good pluck for a printer who has been financially cleaned and his home people and surrounding printers are ready to give him a boost in getting another start. The Exponent editor took his first lessons in printing in the old Advocate office, with W. D. Burleson for instructor, and is pleased that the fire should melt up some of the fine old Gothic types that he used to handle and admire.—Brooklyn Exponent.

Deposits in Michigan banks increased $73,363,920 in 1922, according to a statement by Hugh McPherson, the state banking commissioner. The total number of deposits was 1,218,420—$4,844 more than in 1921. Deposits for the year were $874,394,388.

Fourteen new banks have been chartered during the year, making the total in the state 568 banks, 20 Morris plan companies and 11 trust companies with a combined capital of $61,164,892. Bills payable and discounts decreased during the year $26,246,444.

"The end of the year finds the general banking condition in the state good," Mr. McPherson said. "The deposits of our banks are steadily increasing and the banks' liabilities for borrowed money are steadily declining. This means a liquidation of the funds borrowed outside the state and gradually we are approaching a point where the resources of our own banks will be amply sufficient to finance the needs of the people of the state, which will be an ideal situation."

Wouldn't a Sparrow With the Gout be Funny?

That Bay City doctor's reported discovery of a rheumatism virus in sparrows is really a bird of an idea. Now if he could only extend his bump of discovery further into the field of research and find a way to transfer the disease from suffering humans to the sparrows, he would be entitled to the Noble prize. But, then, we fear we are too optimistic. Even if he accomplished this, the chances are that some enterprising Yankee would quickly be on the market with crutches for the suffering poets.—Schoenwald Blade.

WOMAN'S CLUB

The Woman's Club met, at the home of Mrs. Etta Corey with nineteen members and two guests present. After a selection on the victrola the president, Mrs. Fannie Fowler, called the meeting to order. Roll call was answered to by each member giving the name of a historical character and what they did to become so. Mrs. Addie VanAken had a very interesting paper on a book review of historical novel "Man for the Ages." The two readings by Mrs. Eva Wolcott were enjoyed by all. Mrs. Mary Wertz' paper on "The Wireless Age" was very instructive.

PRISON BINDER TWINE

Warden Harry Hulbert, of the Jackson prison, on his trip west, sold 9,750,000 pounds of binder twine North Dakota uses 25,000,000 pounds of binder twine every year and would take all the state prison manufactured, but the warden prefers to sell in several states. As Michigan has no output has now been reached, without making further sales. Of the 7,000,000 pounds now in the Warden's warehouse, 6,000,000 pounds will be shipped to Nebraska and North Dakota.

Common sense is seen in the bill before the state legislature that is calculated to prevent hasty and secret marriages. This bill may appear to be drastic, and it is, but the opinion is ventured anyone intending to enter the vows of matrimony can endure the period of waiting a little while, and in many instances such a course would be the wisest to pursue.—Durand Express.

THE FINE TEXAS WEATHER

The recent cold snap in Texas is figured to have done that state about a billion dollars' worth of good. It froze the ground and killed off all the bugs and other agricultural pests in the soil. The frost bit the heels off all the bugs so they couldn't get away and then just gradually chilled them to death so that they will make the finest kind of fertilizer when they thaw out. Great are the optimistic farm reporters of Texas. Of course the million or two damage to garden truck from the freeze was overlooked in the wonderful benefits of the chill. And here Michiganers have been finding fault with the zero hours of the past few days. What ho, Right-about face. If Texas has been benefitted a billion, Michigan can figure ten thousand times the billion. Michigan bugs are tough, but can they withstand any such temperatures as they have been handed the past week. Methinks not. Michigan bugs are not lazy, but if they didn't dig in below the two foot level they are goners sure enough. The frost has got 'em. The influenza bug has also been abroad in the land. We'll say it has. Probably the recent blizzard blew away most of them and drowned 'em in the big lakes on either side. A blizzard is a fine thing and if we had a Texas constitution, we'd not only like it but be applauding for centuries way into the middle of April. As is, we are ready to admit that we've had a fine winter, although February has handed us a rough package.

Grease the Old Griddle Again

Dainty breakfasts may be all right, for the modern dainty appetite, but potato shavings and evaporated corn, is a device of a way to spoil the morn.—Grapefruit scrambled or on half-shell—Adds insult to the injury as well—Wheat-chaff and coffee—the busy man, eats his newspaper on the efficiency plan—Feasts on the news, and washes it down, with head-lines of breakfast if same can be found.—Comes to me, a memory, ever fond and dear—Daylight dawning, found me yawning—sniffing the atmosphere—Caught a thrill in the coffee-milk, sending a call to me. Followed by fragrance of griddle-cakes, sizzling merrily.

—Appetites differ, I'll grant the fact, but common folks are keen for their snack. Of common folks, there's different kinds, with different ways and different minds—Drop in for breakfast with one of us, Where service is splendid without the fuss—Our ways may be different,—us common folk, But our pancakes sizzle, fry and smoke. A thousand souls—A single thought, on the inspiration the breakfast brought. There is no other luxury, that compares with griddle-cakes—for me.

—Bound to admit—another part of it. Without whom my story is incomplete. The fact that She, bakes the cakes for me, with a skill no French chef can beat—Serves 'em hot—to her man on the spot—A monarch might envy the man—"Batter up!"—is the cry—Why not give it a try?—Go grease the old griddle again.

The ability to wiggle the ears is not only an artistic triumph, but it proves deceiving to the frost as well.

On Jan. 1, 1890 she was united in marriage to Nathaniel Daniels, and to this union were born four children. Two passed away in infancy and two survived, besides the companion, also five brothers, one sister and grandchildren.

The Winter Storage To Keep Vegetables

By Herbert F. Palmer.

In one of your recent papers, there was published a method for winter storage of vegetables. This recommended the use of dry sand. There is another method much easier to handle and accomplishes the purpose so much better that I will tell you of it.

The materials necessary to keep the root crops, like carrots, beets, turnips are simply the boxes or barrels in which to pack them and SAWDUST to use for the packing material. The size of box or barrel is immaterial but the condition of the sawdust seems to be the material thing.

Sawdust as it is usually used for ice storage seems to be the best. Fresh sawdust is not suitable for either ice or vegetable storage. It should be winter and summer over of doors to be in the best condition for either purpose. If the sawdust has been out of doors for some time and is quite wet from recent rains, it is all the better. The dry sawdust from the top should be shoveled off and only the moist sawdust underneath used. Or use the sawdust left from the ice house that is moist, but not heating.

In the box or barrel chosen put a layer of the damp sawdust, then a layer of the carrots or whatever roots you care to store. No attention is paid to have the carrots all laid smooth or otherwise but simply put in the alternate layers of carrots and sawdust with a thin layer of sawdust on top. Store the box in a cellar, preferably in a place just above the freezing point.

As you wish carrots for use in the winter, dig into the sawdust and you will find the carrots as fresh as the day they were dug and stored. A carrots are used out take off some of the sawdust so as to have but a thin layer of the sawdust on top at any time.

For several years I have stored carrots and beets in this manner and had them keep nice and crisp until the new crop the following year was ready to use. In fact at one time I kept some beets over the second winter and had nice sound beets when the second year's crop was growing. I never water or otherwise disturb the sawdust. Only as we want the roots to use is anything ever done to the sawdust.

In preparing your roots to store, sort them so that only sound roots will be stored. In topping them, do not cut the tops too close as it will soon cause a decay in the crown if you do. Leave the roots in the ground as late as you can in the fall without their freezing. It is best to top and put them in the sawdust the same day they are dug from the ground.

Parasites dug in the fall and stored in this manner are as nice to use any time in the winter as though left in the ground and thus have but a limited time in which the crop may be used.

TO FIND LIME NEEDS OF ALL STATE FARMS

Simplified Test Developed at M. A. C.
Makes State-Wide Check a Possibility.

Every farm in Michigan will be tested for lime requirements within a few years. If a campaign being launched by the soils department at the Michigan Agricultural College achieves the results expected of it.

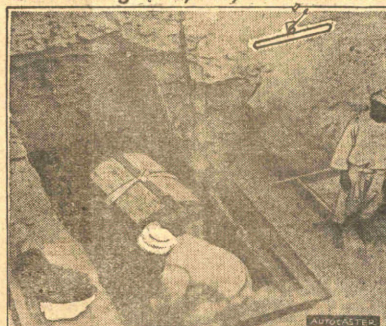

This state-wide check, which will be of tremendous value to Michigan agriculture, has been made possible by the discovery of a simple and easy method of testing soil for acidity. A process developed by Prof. C. H. Spurr, of the college department, tells the story in one short and effective operation, which entails merely passing a few drops of a special solution through a small quantity of soil, which may be placed on a piece of waxed paper. The color of the solution after it passes through the soil shows the soil reaction—whether sweet or sour, and the lime requirement as shown by degree of sourness or acidity.

The proper amount of lime in the soil is the keynote of profitable farming," said Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the M. A. C. soils section, "and the development of the new test will be of great value to Michigan agriculture. It will save the farmer the expense of the simplification of the test, to determine the lime requirement of every farm in the state. In fact, we have adopted the slogan, 'Every Michigan Farm Tested for Lime Requirement.'"

"Where tests are not made, there is a danger that liming will be overdone in the state. There are many farms, especially in the southern half of the state and the northern part of the over peninsula, that contain land not in need of lime, or at least of only a small amount. Some of the land on the other hand, has lime in excess. Farmers cannot afford to estimate the lime requirement of their farms at the same rate to all land, irrespective of its lime requirement, for a great deal of capital invested in the lime and labor will be wasted in this way."

Unearthing $15,000,000 Treasure

World wide interest is focused on the valley of the kings along the Nile in Egypt—where Howard Carter, an American, discovered the tomb of King Tutankhamen for Lord Carnarvon of England. This is last of the family of Egyptian kings who ruled four thousand years ago. The treasure is valued at $15,000,000. Native troops are on guard night and day. Upper photo shows natives emerging from the outer tomb with a large blue cabinet containing valuable fabrics. On it were names of king and queen lettered in gold. Lower photo shows wonderful chair being carried from the tomb under guard. All treasures show little effect of time.

FORMER NORTH ADAMS GIRL WEDS AT FORT WAYNE, IND.

GRIMBERG-TIFFANY.

A beautiful home wedding took place last evening, Feb. 17th at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tiffany of Wagner St., when their daughter, Miss Lucile Kathleen, became the bride of Mr. George Grimberg, son of Mrs. Anna Grimberg of Hammond, Ind. The home was very prettily decorated with spring flowers and smilax, the color scheme of yellow and white being effectively used throughout the rooms. Mrs. Carl Kennedy, close friend of the bride, presided at the piano and played the wedding march from Mendelssohn, as the bridal party entered the living room. The bride was preceded by her sister, Miss Gretta Tiffany, who acted as bridesmaid and Master Junior Hoffman, brother of the bride, who acted as ring bearer. He was dressed in a long Pantulero suit of black velvet with blue trimmings. He wore a white satin blouse, white silk stockings and black patent leather slippers and he carried the wedding ring in the blossom of a calla lily. The bride followed on the arm of her father who later gave her away in marriage. They were met by the groom and his brother, Mr. Fred Grimberg, of Hammond, who acted as groomsmen. The marriage ceremony was performed in the archway between the living and dining room. This had been transformed into a bower of greenery, smilax being very effectively used in the decoration. It was banked on either side with palms and ferns. Here, promptly at 5:30 o'clock, the marriage service was read by Rev. H. C. Harmon, pastor of the Wayne St. Methodist church. During the ceremony, Mrs. Kennedy played very softly, "Hearts and Flowers." The bride was lovely in a gown of white silk velvet, fashioned in drap effect and caught at the waist with an elaborate pearl ornament. Arm straps of pearl bands formed the only sleeves. Her train was fastened at the shoulders and her veil of tulle was held in fan effect by a wreath of pearls and swansonia. She wore long white gloves and a beautiful platinum bracelet, set with diamonds and sapphires, the gift of the groom. Her slippers were of silver with hose to match. She carried a lovely shower bouquet of delicately tinted bride's roses and white fuchsias. Miss Gretta was charming in gown of blue and changeable taffeta, trimmed with silver and folds of pink gerbera. She wore a large pink georgette hat, tied under the chin with silver ribbons, also long gloves and silver slippers. She carried a colonial bouquet of roses in pastel shades. The groom and groomsmen were dressed in the conventional black and wore tuxedos and white gloves.

Following the ceremony a reception was held and later in the evening a delicious three course dinner was served in the dining room which was beautifully decorated for the occasion. The bride's table was most attractive. A large cake led with white and decorated with yellow roses formed the centerpiece. The cake was further adorned with yellow candles in crystal holders which were placed on the four corners of the cake. Sprays of smilax in wreath effect surrounded the cake then extended to the four sides of the table where were placed four lovely yellow crystal bowls filled with yellow jonquils. The nut cups were fashioned like yellow roses. The handles were tied with yellow tulle bows.

Mr. and Mrs. Grimberg left on a late train for Cleveland where they will spend a short time. The bride's going-away gown and coat were of brown duvetain with fur trimmings and hat to match. The couple will return to this city before going to Hammond, where they will make their home. Mr. Grimberg is a waiter at the General American Paint Co. of that city.

The bride is a sweet and attractive young lady and is held in high esteem by all who know her. Previous to the wedding, she was honored by a number of delightful shower parties. Mrs. Carl Kennedy assisted by Miss Gretta Tiffany, entertained with a dinner party and linen shower at her home on Edgewater Avenue on Thursday evening, Feb. 7. On Saturday evening, Feb. 10, Mrs. Ed Bremier of Bangor, Me., entertained on a very valuable party. The honor guest was the recipient of a large bouquet of roses and many lovely gifts. On Feb. 14, Mrs. Carl Hoffman, 806 Chicago Ave., entertained at a miscellaneous shower. Last evening, Miss Hope Bledsoe, entertained with a tea party at the Palace, followed by refreshments at the Aurenz's. Tiny heart-shaped baskets were given the guests as favors. At the close of the repast the bride to be was presented a beautiful gift—Fort Wayne Journal.

We have heard of kids being sent to prison for a good many offenses, but the strangest one to come to our notice is that of the seventeen-year-old Ottawa county youngster received at the Reformatory this week to begin a sentence of six months to one year for wife desertion. Although only seventeen the little cuss has been married four years and has the father of two children. What that kid needs is a paddle—not a prison cell.—Lonia News.

CLUB WORK

Club work for the boys and girls has for its general aim an effort to interest them in the best practices in agriculture and home economics.

Our plan for this year is to have 500 or more club members. In 1922 we had 305 club members, which is only a small proportion of the farm boys and girls of Hillsdale county.

This year we expect that the 1922 Pig Club members will be able to supply the low members with pigs this season.

This does not mean that a boy or girl will be allowed to sell a pig or other stock unless it is of good type, well grown out. They do not necessarily have to sell their surplus stock, but can if they wish, and will be given a chance. A committee will appraise the pigs. The price not to be over $15.00. This gives the boys and girls a chance to make a profit if they want to sell their gift in the fall. The calf proposition is different. The pig, as it is harder to get an established price.

The committee on calves drove to other counties last season, but found that they could not purchase them as cheap as they could be bought in Hillsdale county.

The sheep club is a new project in this county. The boys and girls will be asked to furnish them to other club members when they have them for sale.

Club work in the different projects is not for one season but for four years. In the case of young members, until they have reached their 21st birthday.

The work has increased this year to such an extent that it will be impossible to canvass all sections of the county. Otherwise it does no good to canvass unless the people are interested. It is up to you (that means every parent and child) to get a group of five or more interested in your community. The County Leader will help you do the rest.

What sheep are placed this season must be out not later than March 15. The plans are for each boy and girl to have two registered bred ewes. They will be financed the same in this as in the Pig and Calf Club.

The sheep purchased so far have cost $25 per ewe, registered, which is up to fifteen dollars under any breeder's price outside of Hillsdale county.

Any boy or girl between the ages of 8 and 20, interested in sheep should notify the County Club Leader the breed they wish not later than March 15.

If interested in some other project notify County Club Leader not later than April 1.

Louis H. Mathias, County Club Leader.

Sheriff W. H. Bates and deputies of Hillsdale have been unable to locate a man for whom a Litchfield woman desires to make a complaint for obtaining money under false pretenses. The officers have been watching the hotels of the county, but to no avail. According to the woman's story, the man came to her home, and was selling soldering and aluminum repairs. She asked him to tell her that for $12 he would give her the agency for Litchfield and that he would come back the next day and help her canvass and introduce her. She gave him the $12, but he never returned. She said the man was about 40, wore a brown coat and hat, had brown hair and a blue eyes and that the thumb was off the right hand.—Quincy Herald.

A Crosswell man named Wilder has been sentenced to six months in the Sanilac county jail for selling moonshine. It is said he became indignant when the judge pronounced sentence and now, well—day by day and every way he is growing wilder and wilder.—Seb sawing Blade.

Wanted—To hear from owner having farm for sale in Hillsdale county. Warren McRae, Logansport, Ind. 3914.

PROFESSOR FRIDAY DOING GREAT WORK

Will Materially Better Conditions for Agriculturists, Dairy-men and Horticulturists.

From Clinton County (St. Johns) Re-publican.

Prof. Friday may have startled some of his hearers last week when he said he should ask the legislature for $200,000 to help put the improved dairy cow campaign through in Michigan and for $50,000 to help finish the improving hen campaign. If he can succeed, as he can if given the help of the farmers, in raising the production of milk in Michigan to an average of 6,000 pounds per cow instead of less than 3,000, as at present, the cost would be nothing compared to the great benefits.

Michigan farmers are particularly favored over the farmers of the great northwest, especially in having a market in their own state for all the products they produce at a comparatively short freight haul. Prof. Friday is going to try and have the Agricultural college help them cut the cost of production by more efficient methods—have half the cows produce just as much milk as we are getting from all of them now, and so on through other lines of production. The highest function of the Agricultural college is not to teach a man to plow. The economic factor in farming is the thing that Prof. Friday can do for the farmers and is doing it as rapidly as possible. He should have a free hand and plenty of money to put his theories into effect.

Since he took hold of the Agricultural college he has established relations with the newspapers of Michigan. A great many of the weekly papers print bulletins from the college every week. The Republican generally runs two such letters and sometimes three. The Daily have another line of copy and are using as never before. The purpose of all this is to bring the knowledge and results of experiment, which the farmers are paying their share in producing, back to them so that they can enjoy the benefits of that great institution. No one agency is doing so much to get that information to the farmers as the country newspapers of Michigan.

Prof. Friday carries to the farmer in a most convincing way his aim and the results obtained from scientific study at the college. If he could be heard by every farmer in the state, he could get along with his plan much faster; but that is impossible. If he could speak to about 500 people per day, and his audience probably do not average much more than that, it would take him some 35 years to speak to all of the people in Michigan. If he talked seven days in the week, so the newspapers will have to carry the gospel to the farmers. With little likelihood of war prices for farm products again in a generation, the next best thing is to lessen cost of production.

T. B. ASSOCIATION WOULD AMEND MOTHER'S PENSION

Amendment of the so-called mother's pension law to provide for the dependent children of fathers totally incapacitated by tuberculosis, is foremost on the legislative program of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association this year.

The present law, which was passed in 1917, provides that an allowance of not more than $300 a week per child may be paid to a mother not otherwise able to support her children, in case the father has been declared insane or feeble-minded, epileptic or blind, or if he is serving sentence in a penitentiary.

The tuberculosis workers would add tuberculosis, when it is in a stage such that the consumptive can not pursue a painful occupation, to this list of disabilities.

Approval of the proposed amendment, which is soon to be introduced, was expressed by leading members of several civic and welfare organizations at an informal meeting held in the office of the Michigan Tuberculosis Association this week.

"I shall be for the amendment absolutely," declared Mrs. J. K. Pettigill, chairman of the legislative department of the Michigan Parent-Teacher's Association.

"Such a change would solve the problem in one of our neediest and most deserving cases," said Miss Grace Cone of the Lansing Social Service Bureau. "I should like to work under such a law."

It was pointed out by officers of the state Tuberculosis Association that many states now allow the mother's pension to needy families if the father is incapacitated by tuberculosis. Several Michigan counties have already granted the allowance in such cases. It was also said, The proposed amendment would legalize the practice.

FAMILY CARES MAY RETARD RECOVERY

Many Distressing Cases Reported to State Association.

"I do not think I am fully responsible for the shape I am in today. I have been doing the best I can for the last three years keeping my wife and family but now I am unable to do that. I stand alone if the truth was known."

So Louis, Mackinac woodman, writes to the Michigan Tuberculosis Association. In his difficult hand writing he traces a long history of illness and deprivation. Diagnosed as a tuberculous case in 1920, he established sanatorium treatment for a time at least; but while he was at the sanatorium his wife and two young children were in straits; and Louis soon decided he must return to them.

He was not able to do much for them, however. "My trade is labor," he explains in his letter, "and now I can not do that."

"There is only one thing I wish for and that is to get me enough money to build me a little sleeping porch where I could sleep and do quite well to stay in, in the day and night."

With a little spirit of courage he concludes, "And I will live in honor till the last spark fades away." The problems presented by Louis, case, not the least of which is the constant danger of infection for his children from his presence in the home, are typical, the Tuberculosis Association declares. In a correspondence conducted for the past two months with patients who have left the State Sanatorium, the Association finds that economic pressure, either during the period of treatment or on return home is prominent in more than half the letters received from ex-patients. Aside from the fact that family responsibility may cause many consumptives to refrain from taking advantage of sanatorium treatment, the further fact that worry over home conditions may militate against a cure, even when the head of the family is persuaded to enter a sanatorium.

Asked what the contra-tuberculous Association desires for the wage-earner with family responsibilities who develops tuberculosis, the executive secretary of the association responded:

"There isn't much advice we can give. They ought to have sanatorium treatment, unless the best home treatment is available; unfortunately there is legal provision for the members of children whose father is in prison or in an insane asylum, nothing is said about an allowance for children whose father is in a tuberculosis sanatorium. Louis and others like him are up against a difficult situation."

SOD ORCHARDS NEED MORE FERTILIZATION

Many Factious Govern Rate of Application for Michigan Fruit Trees.

The rate of application of commercial fertilizers in Michigan orchards an important question for state fruit growers, must be determined after consideration of many vital factors according to Prof. R. E. Marshall, of the M. A. C. horticultural department. Fertilizer requirements must be based on the individual orchard, but which can be used as a guide.

"The age and size of the trees, the length of annual twig growth, the amount of color of foliage, the plumpness of spurs and fruit growth, and the yields of fruit must all be considered in planning rates of application," says Professor Marshall.

"Sod orchards should have a plan of rate of application than cultivate vines. Where fruit trees are growing in sod, the nitrogen application should be fully 50 per cent higher if plants are in poor state of vigor. The application should be 50 to 100 per cent greater than those given for average, normal trees and plants.

"One-half pound of nitrate of soda per tree per year should be sufficient for apple trees until they are about two years old when the amounts may be gradually increased until the amount to one-half pound per tree at five or six years of age. At this age, and until the trees come into full fruit production, fertilizers should be used sparingly. If at trees from ten or twelve to twenty years old can gradually use about 3 pounds of nitrate of soda. The rate of application may be gradually increased to about five pounds as the maximum for old trees.

However, it is not uncommon to apply as much as ten pounds to old trees of low productivity which are growing in sod.

"The above rates are for nitrate of soda. If the fertilizer is a mixture used as the carrier of nitrogen, the rate of application would be about 25 per cent less."

So Claims James E. Davis, Federal Director of Michigan.

Jas. E. Davis, federal prohibition director of Michigan, says conditions are rapidly improving, old saloons are being replaced by new, modern banks and office buildings and it is not uncommon to hear the remark, "There used to be a swell bar-room here. Gosh! I can remember when Old Crow was served out at 85 cents a quart and the bar-keep apologized for whiskey under even vases old."

That ancient institution, the open-air conducted saloon, is gone. Now and then some one with more money than brains gets hold of a quart for seven years old."

But fathers aren't worrying about their sons developing alcoholic habits. Homes are happier, with a laughing and joking money and beer. A woman can ride on an owl car without danger of being insulted.

There is a lot of talk, around the sons developing alcoholic habits, much futile argument about bringing back the old saloon and beer. But, at heart, the country is dry. The proof is this, that there's almost no talk of bringing back the old-time saloon.

Federal Prohibition Commissioner, R. H. Burton, has just returned from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Hollywood and El Paso, where a thorough investigation was made of the liquor and narcotic situation, and reports that there is little foundation for the view that rampant violations of the Volstead and Harrison acts.

For the month of December the federal prohibition department, under James H. Davis, director, made cases of 6 automobiles, 2 boats, 4 stills, 103 gallons liquor, 1659 gallons beer, 209 gallons wine, 1100 gallons mash, 6 gallons cider. Fines and taxes collected, $15,141.92. Special taxes assessed, $157,491.92.

James Brown, a prominent chemist of Detroit, declares that the deadliest of poisons are being sold in the city for liquor. He said that not one bottle of real liquor is found in a thousand bottles sold here. Roadhouses, and Mr. Brown, convert beer into imitation of real beer by pouring two or three ounces of ether into a bottle. Six or eight ounces of ether, he said, was enough for an ordinary operation.

William Bernhardt of the Miller garage has what might be called a strange avocation. During the past summer he raised 26 sharks at his home and has just marketed the last of them. Fourteen of these animals have been shipped during the past two weeks to Derwood, Minnesota. After being relieved of their offensive odor they make fine pets and are as playful as kittens, with a much finer coat. The movie actors are buying them as pets—Harbor Beach Times.

They took a vote in three schools in Detroit to ascertain how many children had never seen a cow; there were 1,176 and 1,496 who had never seen a live pig. A prominent citizen has offered to give a Jersey or Holstein cow to the zoo on Belle Isle, so the children who visit the island may know how a cow looks, but no body has offered to give a pig. We are wondering how many of those children ever visited the island, for we know that some poor people never have.—Manchester Enterprise.

Had it not been for the time by aid of Mr. Hill in catching her as she fell the consequences would have proved grave, indeed.

WHERE IT STARTED

The trouble between France and Germany started 1850 years ago. At Verdun, in the year 843, Charlemagne's three grandchildren quarreled over grandfather's will and divided his property. Strongest of the three was Louis the German. He took for his share, land which has become known as Germany. Charles the Bold got the kingdom of France, west of the Rhine—roughly speaking, modern France. The third brother, Lothaire, was a weakling. So he got only the scraps, territory neither of his brothers coveted at the time. These scraps included Switzerland and a strip of northern Italy. Descendants of Charles the Bold and Louis the German began fighting for Lothaire's property. They've been fighting over parts of it ever since, so we can scarcely expect the dispute to be settled quickly.

After Charlemagne's children divided grandfather's estate, the supposedly worthless lands of Lothaire became valuable, powerful. It got so the Netherlands could swing the balance in a way between France and Germany. So the rivals agreed to split the Netherlands into Belgium and Holland. Switzerland won its own independence. Gradually Lothaire's kingdom broke up. Southern Italy joined the confederation of Italian states. Luxembourg was neutralized, with French and Germans both wanting it. Regularly it changes hands back and forth, and now the descendants of Charles the Bold seem to think the Rhine is their natural frontier. Plain old family wrangle.

You wonder when the European mess will be straightened out. It may never be. Europe may be doomed to fall in to the dust, like other civilizations of the past—Egypt, Babylon, China, Arabia. The people of Europe may live of their staggering burdens and flock to countries destined to be world powers within another century—such as Brazil, Australia and parts of Africa. People, like all other forms of animal life, migrate when they find local problems beyond their powers of solution.

HILLSDALE COUNTY MARINE

IN SANTO DOMINGO

Among the U. S. Marines who were recently assigned to duty in the West Indies is Howard Belden Lige, son of Mr. William Lige of Somerset Center Hillsdale county, Mich., who is now on duty with the U. S. Marines in Santo Domingo. He will remain in that republic for an indefinite period, as the Marines will be withdrawn from that country as soon as a permanent government is established.

Howard joined the Marines at Detroit, October 11, 1922. For several months he was stationed at Paris Island, S. C. Later he embarked on a naval vessel for service in the West Indies, and he is now with the Second Brigade of Marines which makes its headquarters in the Dominican capital.

Santo Domingo was troubled with political disturbances prior to 1916, when the Marines occupied that country to maintain order. In subsequent years the country has developed rapidly and outbreaks of lawlessness are now things of the past. The country is famed for its relics of Columbus who landed there on his first voyage to America in 1492, and the Marines find much to interest them in viewing the old fortresses and ruins, reminiscent of the early Spanish occupation.

The HOOVER

It BEATS... as it Sweeps as it Cleans

Even her 18-year-old Rugs are still in good Condition

Once or twice a week for nearly fourteen years, Mrs. Maertz has beaten, swept and suction-cleaned her rugs with The Hoover. She has twenty-four rugs; the newest are twelve years old, while the oldest are eighteen. And she keeps roomers.

"My rugs are frequently admired for their bright and clean appearance, yet I never have to send them out for cleaning—I use The Hoover. People can scarcely believe it when I tell them the age of my rugs, for nothing is harder on rugs than roomers."

And Mrs. Wm. F. Maertz, at 889 First Street, Milwaukee, adds: "I have been told by people who knew nothing about The Hoover that it was injurious to rugs. My own experience causes me to believe that rugs not Hoover-cleaned, wear out twice as fast. I know that The Hoover has paid for itself over and over by making my rugs last many years longer. Besides it makes sweeping a pleasure."

Surely she is qualified to speak with authority!

"Some of my friends," continues Mrs. Maertz, "liked my Hoover so well that they sold their cleaners and bought Hoovers. Others are sorry they didn't know about The Hoover before buying. Many people are satisfied with their cleaners until they see The Hoover work."

"Personally I have tried other cleaners since I have had The Hoover and am convinced I would have no other."

THE TRUTH OF THE MATTER

Represents the Russian Revolution of 1917, the work being done for the farmer of Michigan by the Agricultural College and many farmers, who do not see the time to analyze the program being made by the college, are likely to agree with him.

Let us tell you of just two incidents at the college, which we heard of recent trips to that institution and you be the judge as to whether the college is all theory:

Professor Nelson, a young man sought night and day for three years to find what caused "calico leaf" in clover, beans, etc. He was rewarded by finding the disease was caused by the most minute life known to the animal kingdom, and to find the cause meant that shortly a way will be devised for the cure. That discovery which is heralded as the greatest of the age, alone will save the farmers more in this state in one year than it has cost to run the college for a dozen years.

Professor Friday, in his talk at the Army tomorrow afternoon, will tell you how it took one farmer with 40 cows to produce 120,000 pounds of milk, while another farmer under scientific methods was producing the same amount with ten cows. If Prof. Friday and the college are able to cut off seventy-five per cent of the production costs in producing milk in this state the saving effected will more than pay every cent that is now being levied in taxes for every purpose in this state.

And let us add another: Prof. McCool appeared before the publishers during their session at Lansing and in five minutes pointed by a simple process how every farmer in the state can take a soil test and find out just what his land needs to make it produce as it did when it was virgin in the days of the pioneers. This is another thing worth while, and while enthusiasm may take some of the younger college graduates' faith, we are inclined to believe that for every dollar of taxes we spend in support of the agricultural college, it will be returned to us more than a hundredfold—London News.

SPLENDID TRIBUTE TO A. R. ASSOCIATION

Millions of Lives Saved by Contributions from All Parts of the United States.

Such an article as Sir Philip Gibbs contributes to the Record of the British Save the Christian Fund, shows what Americans have done to relieve famine in Europe, accomplishes more for good feeding than all speakers at Anglo-American banquets. Sir Philip says that when he hears English men and women complain because the United States refuses to join the League of Nations, requires payment of war debts and holds aloof from European affairs he thinks of "the immense generosity, the magnificent efficiency, the untiring and unselfish devotion with which the American government and people have given aid to the starving nations on this side of the Atlantic. He does not ignore the campaign of the Save the Christian Fund under Lord Weardale and of the Quakers in Great Britain, or the individual charity and self-sacrifice of the British people, but "whatever our own satisfaction may be in this work of rescue," he says, "our homage is due to the magnitude and splendor of the American effort." It was doubtless only a lip on the part of Sir Philip Gibbs to fall to recognize the achievement of Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, High Commissioner of the International Committee of Russian Relief, which was feeding 1,000,000 persons, including 400,000 civil men, in Russia and Ukraine in July.

"It is too much to say," testifies the former war correspondent, "that many countries of Europe could have been on great guard, with but haggard remnants of stricken folk, if it had not been for the relief organized and administered by these American folk led by Mr. Hoover. What particularly impressed Sir Philip Gibbs when he visited the scenes of the A. R. A. labor, was the administrative ability of the Americans, their unflagging zeal, their indefatigable energy. They had dedicated themselves to the task, giving their strength to the limit of endurance. They had reorganized transportation systems and defied the elements. No obstacles stopped them. They had prevailed over Soviet hostility which at first threatened to be embarrassing. "I pay a special tribute of admiration and affection," says Sir Philip, "to those young men I met in Russia who risk their lives and health gladly and carelessly. In some instances they died of disease, or incurred serious illness. This generous Englishman maintains that 'not in all the history of the world has there been such an organization of rescue and charity as the American Relief Administration.' At one time it was feeding 10,000,000 people in Russia each day—the most astonishing thing that has ever been done in the story of mankind."

The work of feeding and clothing the Russians is still going on. On December 15 the A. R. A. was taking care of 1,500,000 children. Secretary Hoover predicted that the number would be 3,000,000 before June. Ships leaving New York with millions of yards of "castles" clothes the destitute. Supplies of all kinds are being forwarded. Churches of every creed contribute. Individual gifts are made without stint. Up to the middle of this year 753,000 tons of supplies had been shipped for the Russians alone. The men of the A. R. A. from Colonel Haskell down, have had no dreams of glory to sustain them in their work, but in the hearts of the people they have saved there is a well-spring of gratitude.—New York Times.

POOR POTATO SEED COSTING MILLIONS

Michigan Farmers Lose Chance for Profit on Crop by Planting Low Quality Tubers.

That poor potato seed is costing Michigan growers millions of dollars annually, through resultant low yields of inferior quality, is the contention of H. C. Moore, secretary of the Michigan Potato Producers Association and extension specialist of the Michigan Agricultural College.

"Use of good seed is the keynote of potato growing success," said Mr. Moore, in discussing the state situation. "Good yields of high quality tubers must be secured if growers are to make a profit."

"Certified seed have proved efficient in securing better production, in Michigan, as well as in other states, big increases per acre are being reported where they were planted last year. Michigan growers should make arrangements early for their seed supply, in order that they may secure good stock."

Certified Michigan potatoes are grown under inspection by extension agents with the M. A. C. farm crops department, the work being cooperative between the college and the Michigan Potato Producers Association. The aim is more efficient potato growing in the state.

the aim of Michigan swine raisers in a unique contest which will be thrown open in the state on March 1, to be known as the "Michigan Ton-Liter Club."

The contest, which is being handled jointly by the leading swine breeders' associations of the state and the animal husbandry department at the Michigan Agricultural College, is open to every farmer in the state, provided he follows out the prescribed rules of enrollment, marking, inspection, etc. Owners of all litters which reach a ton weight at six months of age will be awarded certificates in the contest, while prizes will be given in different weight classes that reach 160 pounds or more.

"Large litters are essential for economical production," says V. A. Freeman, extension specialist at M. A. C. and state leader of the ton-liter club. "Good feeding in stures and the use of minerals for rapid gain along with feeding for rapid gain, make for economy of production. Parasites and unsanitary conditions work against economy. These are the things which the ton-liter contest will bring out and emphasize in the state."

Enrollments, which should be sent in at once to Mr. Freeman as leader of the clubs, will not be received after April 1. Detailed instructions and information on the contest will be put out by the college extension division on request.

SNAKES

Only one species of reptile, a lizard, is found in the Azores.

The East Indian python is capable of swallowing a live pig.

Adders are most irritable just after reviving from hibernation.

Snakes rarely die in daylight, but usually between twilight and midnight.

The English adder or viper is the only poisonous snake found in Europe.

Cobras, crocodiles and rattlesnakes are regarded as the most poisonous of snakes.

The common king snake is an enemy of the rattlesnake and often kills a rattler larger than itself.

The rhinoceros, an African snake, is capable of throwing a spray of poison a distance of fifteen feet.

The fer-de-lance, a tropical venomous American snake, of extraordinary virulence, is most conspicuous in the marshes and other islands of the French Antilles.

LINES WORTH KNOWING

Men are most apt to believe what they least understand.

He that I am reading seems always to have more than his force.

Nature forms us for ourselves, not for others; to be, not to seem.

How many worthy men have we seen survive their own reputation!

We are born to inquire after truth; It belongs to a greater power to possess it.

The oldest and best known evil was ever more supportable than one that was new and untold.

Man is certainly stark mad; he cannot make a woman, and yet he will be making gods by dozens.—Exchange.

AS EVE SAID TO ADAM

If the doctor can't help your wife—try the bunker.

If there were no marriages deceit would have no home.

If women possessed as much virtue as vanity no man could corrupt it.

The knowledge of her good looks is often the only sort a girl may boast of.

Husbands have poor memories. They frequently forget that they are married.

It is easy to get a homely husband, but it is just as hard to keep him as a handsome one.

THANK YOU

The North Adams Advocate is again nearly ready to be a reality. With the help of our many friends we have arisen from the ashes of the dead past and will soon endeavor with the limited means at hand to furnish the community with a newspaper. It is heartrending to think that we lost all our data, all the files of back numbers of the Advocate, of which there was one of every issue for 28 years, and every bit of paraphernalia, so that we must build from the bottom. Hundreds of people have asked us how the fire started. We don't know, but we have very serious doubts about the stove being the cause. By interviewing the first ones on the scene we learn nothing except there was smoke near the back end of the office.

Whatever the cause, we know there is a serious criminal negligence in allowing the fire engine to be in such poor condition, because there was plenty of water at hand, but with no saved, the building could not be saved. The fire marshal undoubtedly saw the condition of things, and while he can not do much, he sure ought to take somebody by the ears quite promptly. A village with good brick business blocks as our town owns and no fire protection ought to be put in a glass case as an exhibit for other communities to look at and profit thereby.

We thank you for your kind assistance.

NORTH ADAMS SCHOOL NOTES

Gwendolyn McLaughlin, Ethel Brewer, Sarah Fredericks and Kenneth Holder were High School visitors last week.

Ethel Miller, Ruth McFadden, Richard Barger, Edward Bloomer, and Ethel Rogers were absent from school Monday of this week.

Miss Marian Lane, primary teacher was unable to get back to her school Monday forenoon so the vacancy was filled by her sister, Miss Charlotte.

A group of High School girls entertained the faculty at a potluck dinner in the domestic science room last Wednesday. All enjoyed a well arranged dinner and a rising vote of thanks was extended them.

Don't forget the basket ball game next Friday evening, March 16, North Adams vs. Pittsford at Pittsford. This is the last game scheduled for North Adams. Last Friday night Camden boys played North Adams at North Adams, the score being 17-11 in favor of North Adams. The Camden girls gave up coming so the North Adams girls played an inter-class game which resulted in a score of 10-6 in favor of the Juniors and Seniors.

WOULD SEGREGATE SEXES

"I am convinced that there should be segregation of the sexes in our public schools, especially in our high schools," declared Prof. R. Clyde Ford of the Michigan State Normal college Thursday night when speaking before a local parent-teacher club.

"There are too many powder puff, lip sticks and parties in our American high schools," Prof. Ford maintained.

Discarded Cow is Found to be Winner

"Old Bow" Proves Worth When Checked by Cow Test Association Figures.

From a position of disfavor when she was offered for sale at a fifty dollar price, to rank as one of the high producers of a prosperous herd, is the striking change effected by "Bow," a pure bred Jersey cow owned by Don B. Keeler of Jackson county.

Bow had been a failure in past years as a producer. Her owner couldn't sell her for fifty dollars, and regarded her as an all around losing proposition. Then came the Parma, Jackson county, cow testing association, and with it Bow suddenly developed into a two hundred dollar animal with a high production record. Better feeding and a careful check of records found Bow returning net profit of $128.71 in nine months.

"Bow is ten years old," says A. C. Baltzer, M. A. C. extension specialist who is working with cow test associations in the state. In the past nine months she has produced 10,453 lbs. of milk and 471 lbs. of butterfat at an average price of $42.87 per pound, or $209.46. She has eaten in the nine months 2904 lbs. of corn, costing $52.76, plus $19.19 for roughage, making $72.25, leaving a net profit from butterfat sales of $128.71.

"Bow's ninth month production record is 1008 lbs. milk and 43.3 lbs. butterfat."

State Highway Commissioner Frank Rogers is instructing sheriffs to enforce the spring highway law and no loaded truck will be allowed to travel on the state roads if it carries more than one-half its rated capacity. This means trouble for truckmen, and as few of them understand the law in full, litigation will be the result. As the law was enforced last year it was a botch, but it is hoped the deficiencies can be ironed out.

A meeting of the Methodist ministers of the county was held at Hillsdale last week in the interest of organizing Methodist Brotherhoods in every church. It is thought the Methodist Brotherhood will help to solve some of the serious questions of the day. Rev. Harry Henry of the Hillsdale church is the guiding spirit in the move. The question of too much organization is facing our country churches and too little team work. They should have both.

Back in 1857 railroading in Michigan was a novelty—a joke. In those days the little wood-burning engines looked like toys as they crawled along over the rails, and the engineer was supposed to put in his spare time polishing the brass on his machine. It was a common occurrence for the conductor to visit with the patrons along the line—and the other day we wondered if railroading was not getting back to the old ways. We rode on a New York Central train, or rather, we looked upon it. We were on the point several times of dismounting and going up ahead to see if the cow catcher had caught any thing.

LADY MACCABEES HAD INTERESTING GATHERING

NEW HONOR ROLL FOR DAIRY COWS OF STATE

Actual Profit to be Basis for Rating Under Unique Plan Started by M. A. C.

Michigan dairy cows will have to deliver the goods in actual profit if they are to earn a place on a new register of profit honor roll being established in the state by the Michigan Agricultural college.

The thirty cow testing associations in the state and the dairy extension division of the college will cooperate in handling the new project, which will be considered a branch of the cow testing association work.

"The highest producing cow is not always the one which returns the greatest profit during the year," says A. C. Baltzer, one of the three men who drew up the plan for the register of profit. "Higher feed and handling costs sometimes cut down the net profit on the animal."

"The register of profit is being started to give a practical check on the most profitable cows in state cow testing associations. It will be in the nature of an honor roll for the state."

Rules for entrance in the register call for a profit of not less than $125 for a year, by a cow entered in a regularly organized cow testing association.

Standard feed prices and standard milk prices will be used in computing the profit figures. The average price of existing grade A milk, for 15 per cent milk, on the first of each month during the test in the following cities will be used: Detroit, Grand Rapids, Lansing, Saginaw, Kalamazoo, and Marquette.

The register of profit will be thrown open on March 1, 1923, animals in cow test associations being eligible to start their year's test after that date.

History in a Nutshell.

A boy in a Welsh school essayed to write on Henry VIII, and a London paper reports him as beginning thus: "King Henry VIII was the greatest widower that ever lived. He was born at Anno Domini in the year 1088. He had 510 wives, besides children. The first was beheaded and executed. The second was revoked. She never smiled again. Henry eighth, was succeeded on the throne by Mary Queen of Scots, sometimes known as the Lady of the Lake."

BRILLIANCE AND GREAT VARIETY

Mark Attractions and Talent for Annual May Festival in Ann Arbor.

Brilliance, variety and a wealth of new faces will characterize the programs which are being arranged for the 30th annual May Festival to be held in Hill auditorium, Ann Arbor, May 16, 17, 18, 19. As usual four evening programs will be given with matinees on Friday and Saturday afternoon.

The University Choral Union of 350 voices, under Earl V. Moore, acting conductor, the large children's chorus of more than 500 voices under the leadership of George Oscar Bowen and the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Frederick Stock will participate.

A special feature, and the attraction of which has started these conversations with music affairs over the country, is the bringing from London of the distinguished contralto, Gustav Holst, for the purpose of conducting the American premiere of his own "Hymn of Jesus." Mr. Holst is recognized as one of the pre-eminent present day musicians of Great Britain. His American trip is causing much stir in London and New York circles.

Another innovation will be the appearance for the first time in many years of a great violinist in a stellar festival role. Bruno Seiwitz has been selected for this honor and she will be heard Thursday evening in the same program as Mr. Holst.

Another instrumentalist of magnitude will be Ernest Schelling, pianist, who will also make his first Ann Arbor appearance at the Saturday afternoon concert, playing his own "variations." For the first time in the history of Ann Arbor festivals all the vocal soloists engaged are members of either the Metropolitan Opera Company or the Chicago Opera Association and have been selected with special reference to the roles called for at the festival.

Elorence MacBeth and Suzanne Keener are Ann Arbor Chicago and Metropolitan organizations respectively. Miss MacBeth is well known among music lovers as one of the great coloratura stars and an accurate description of her accomplishments would be superfluous. Miss Keener on the other hand is new to the music world, having just been selected by the great committee of five called upon to pass upon the Metropolitan stars. She is the youngest member of the body, both as to age and term of service. It is claimed that she is one of the most valuable acquisitions of that body.

Jeanne Gordon, the eminent contralto of the Metropolitan Opera Company, has had a wonderful career and in a few years has risen to a great height. It is particularly pleasing that she should have been chosen to sing the role of Delilah at the Saturday evening concert not only because this is her leading role in opera, but because she is a Michigan girl hailing from Detroit. Her wonderful career reflects much credit upon her home city.

Two great tenors will be heard. Beniamino Gigli, great star of the Metropolitan Opera Company, whose work has been so profound and who since the passing away of the great Caruso, has been placed at the head of the list of Metropolitan tenors. His nights are always sold out.

Charles Marshall occupied a singular place with the Chicago segregation. He will sing the role of Samson, which is one in which he excels.

Gustavo Dante, the distinguished baritone, and Clarence Whitehall, alto, are both from the Metropolitan Opera Company. Dante will join with Florence MacBeth of evening concerts and duets at the Friday evening concert. He is of the Amato type and never fails to receive an ovation. Whitehall is acknowledged to be the peer of any in singing the role of the High Priest for which he has been selected.

Henry Scott, who will also appear in the cast of Samson and Delilah, has achieved great success and will be a welcome visitor.

All school boys new to Ann Arbor with the exception of Whitehall, Scott and Marshall, who have been heard before, but not in recent years.

Bank Robbed

On Thursday evening of last week a party forced an entrance to the back door of the Citizens Bank and made a rather unsuccessful attempt to blow the vault door open. From the appearance of things about the building Friday morning, it is believed a charge of nitroglycerine was poured into the jamb of the vault door and exploded, but the mechanism was too strong, and its only effect was to spring the large proof lock, making the door tighter than before. An unexploded charge was found in the crack, and it is thought possible the robbers expected to give a second shot and were frightened away. At any rate nothing in the vault was disturbed, but $14 which had been left outside was taken.

Cashier Hoffman was unable to open the vault and a safe expert accomplished the job sometime Saturday morning. The only clues left are an overcoat and some very faint finger prints upon the walls and fixtures. A couple of experts from the state police force at Lansing came and took copies these finger prints, hoping they might possibly tally with data on hand. General opinion seems to be that the job was pulled off either by local talent or some very inexperienced crooks. It is needless to say the bank officials were most relieved when it was found nothing worth while had been taken.

STATE CROP OUTLOOK SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Michigan Growers Have Good Prospects for Year, as Compared With Conditions in Other States.

The outlook for good returns from crop production for Michigan farmers during the coming year looks good when comparison is made with general conditions in other states.

By choosing the right crops, growing a diversity of crops, planting a good seed of high yielding varieties, and following the best cultural practices, Michigan farmers can undertake their spring planting with assurance that they will not get poor returns, in the opinion of Prof. J. E. Cox, head of the M. A. C. department.

"Michigan has at least three general crops which farmers may plan to plant with much more guarantee of profit than the farmer growing general crops in the corn belt or in the west," says Cox. "Alfalfa, for example, may be greatly increased in acreage with very little danger of overproduction."

"Beans brought an unusual price this year. Even though the Michigan acreage and the acreage in other states will very likely be markedly increased during the coming season, and as high a price as was received this year can hardly be expected; nevertheless, as compared to other staple crops, beans should give favorable returns during the next winter and spring."

"The best acreage of Michigan will undoubtedly return to normal with contracts in the field which are meeting the favor of the best growers in general. Alfalfa, beans, clover, and seed and contract crops give Michigan a great advantage over most other states."

We notice they are advertising a certain preparation to keep the young men's hair combed nice and slick. "We can remember away back when the young fellows used to put hair oil on their heads, some of them to such an extent that the dope ran down and formed a greasy half circle on the backs of their coat collars, making a messy looking outfit. We wouldn't be surprised to find that the new stuff is nothing but old-fashioned hair oil masquerading under a different name."—Davison Index.

LOWERED FERTILIZER USE STATE MISTAKE

Intensive and Adapted Applications Will Aid in Meeting Demand for Efficiency.

A reduction in the use of fertilizers by Michigan farmers in 1923 would be a shortsighted policy, conditions immediately confronting state growers being such as to make this one of the best years for the use of proper fertilizers, according to Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the M. A. C. soils department.

Michigan farmers used only about three-fourths as much fertilizer last year as they did in 1920, statistics compiled by McCool show. Many farmers reduced the acre application last year, or cut it out entirely, because of existing economic conditions, but a continuation of similar policy is considered very unwise by specialists who are studying the state's agricultural situation.

"Efficiency in production is the chief reliance of the Michigan farmer under present conditions," says Dr. McCool, "and proper soil management is essential in bringing this about. If, instead of reducing the per acre fertilizer application, the acreage were somewhat reduced and a higher rate of application made on the cropped acreage than before, the total production could be maintained at reduced cost per unit of crop."

The average yield of beans, potatoes, sugar beets and other crops could be increased profitably for 1923 by proper fertilization. The M. A. C. experiment station, as well as others, has shown conclusively and repeatedly under many conditions that one dollar invested in the right kind of fertilizer will bring a net return of $2, $3, or even $5 in some cases, on mineral soils. Where it is used on such, as has been shown by cooperative tests with farmers the last two years, in several instances the net returns have been much higher than this.

The village of Fenton and the township of Fenton are defendants in a new damage suit brought in the Lenawee County courts to recover $10,000 by the heirs of the late Mrs. Emma Smith. The papers as served in the president of the village and the supervisor of the township set forth all the facts connected with the death of Mrs. Smith. It is stated that the village and township are so responsible for Mrs. Smith's death which occurred last February when she was crossing the East street bridge in that village and then rolled over the embankment.—Brighton Argus.

He was a very potent and long suffering Milan young man, but when at last he arrived at the drug store where they had arranged to meet he returned a remonstrance. "Darling, you are late," he said mildly. "Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone. "I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock and it's twenty minutes past. 'Oh,' sighed the young man, 'then you must have mistaken the day. I've been waiting here since last night.'"

We prefer the good news concerning our friends and neighbors; the bad kind spreads fast enough without newspaper publicity—the gossips take care of that.

Henry slighted, and she died on the throne by Mary Queen of Scots, sometimes known as the Lady of the Lake."

MARKETS WANT WELL

FINISHED YOUNG LAMBS

Lambs in the farm flock are ready for market when about four months old, according to specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. Reasons for pushing the lambs to market as early as possible are as follows:

Average market prices are higher in the spring and early summer.

Lambs will make more rapid and less expensive gains in flesh while young than when they are older.

Less labor and less pasture will be required for the flock.

Lambs marketed in the early part of the season escape the heat of the summer and the ravages of the stomach worm and other internal parasites. This is very important as the specialists, as it has been found that in most instances the weight of lambs remains practically unchanged from mid-summer until fall. If they become infested with stomach worms as is usually the case in the farm flock they will lose weight during this period and a large number of the animals may die.

In order to produce lambs of desirable quality and weight for the market at this early age it is necessary to feed properly both the ewes and lambs. The ewes should be brought to the lambing season in good flesh so that a large milk flow is assured. It has been found that it is not essential to feed grain to ewes suckling lambs if they are on good pasture. If the pasture is short, however, or if the ewes are on dry feed, the addition of 1 to 2 pounds of grain per head to their ration is advisable. The lambs should be taught to eat at an early age as possible. They will usually begin nibbling at feed when they are from 10 to 15 days old. A creep should be prepared so that the lambs can get away from the ewes and the best quality of alfalfa or clover hay should be kept before the lambs. This should be done at once. Even small amounts of such feed as crushed corn, oats or barley with a little wheat bran and oil meal. It is important that the grain be clean and fresh and that the troughs are kept clean. After the lambs have learned to eat they should be given twice daily, as much grain as they will eat within a few minutes time.

If the general practices outlined above are followed by the farm flock owner it will be very easy for him to put his lambs on the market at an early age with sufficient weight and condition to satisfy the buyers and to assure him of good returns.

John Rupe of North Castleton owns the biggest team that comes to this village. They are a fine pair of sorrel geldings 6 and 7 years old, full brothers sired by the Charles York horse, which probably was one of the best stallions ever owned in Barry County. They now weigh 4030 lbs. and are only in good working flesh. They sure are big horses.—Woodland News.

The committee of safety of Wheeling, West Virginia, has adopted a novel method to bring home to motorists the dangers of the road. Along the streets of the city and the country roads in the vicinity it has erected wooden grave markers wherever there has been a motor fatality. Even the most reckless motorist is inclined to pause at those mournful signs and reflect on the folly of careless driving.

One million dollars will be the limit that one person can inherit in Michigan. If a proposed legacy bill becomes a law. They are establishing a limit zone too soon. Country editors have been expecting to be remembered in the wills of some delinquent subscribers.

He-I had a good joke to tell you this evening, but I see you are not in a condition to hear it.

She-Why?

He-Because if your face lights up the powder will go off.

Didn't Know How to Use It.

It happened the other night at the theater. The young couple had disturbed everybody around them by their constant whispering and snoring. Frows frowned and growled but they talked on. Until suddenly the young man stopped and began to dig around on the floor for something.

Then he nudged the man in front of him. "I've lost my muffer some place," he said.

"Let it alone," the man growled back. "You didn't know how to use it when you did have it, judging from the noises I've been hearing back there."—Huronensis News.

CALLS FOR CAREFUL WORK

"Miners' Who Dig for Specimens of Extinct Animals for Museums Must Be Experts."

Few persons contemplating the remarkable specimens of extinct animals to be seen in some museums realize the amount of work which has been entailed in the uncovering and preparation of these specimens. In the first place, a well-equipped expedition is generally sent out to look for these bones, and many miles are traversed in the search of a likely spot for operations. Even then tons of sand are carefully moved often without uncovering the bones that are being sought.

The removal of the soil can be done only by those who are familiar with the work, for an inexperienced hand could readily do much damage by not knowing how to proceed. When a bone has been located it is uncovered slowly by the aid of small brushes and delicate implements. The bones when found are exceedingly brittle and must be handled with the greatest of care. When they are finally brought to light they are given a coat of shellac and then placed in a bath of floor paste. They are then carefully wrapped in strips of fabric and put in boxes. When the latter are placed in crates for shipment the smaller bones are surrounded with cotton and other material to prevent any possibility of damage being done to the specimens.

CASE OF REAL FRIENDSHIP

Old Maid's Philosophy Might Be Disputed, but She Was Undoubtedly a True "Chum."

The young principal of a Hooster school had to borrow some money in a hurry or some of his debtors would notify the school board of his indebtedness to them. He went to a bank and was told it would be all right if one of the teachers of his building could go to his secretary. He went to the oldest and most faithful one in the building.

While they were talking, the principal's young wife happened to be in the room with her best friend, the mayor's wife, came through the room on her way to her husband's office. She gave the teacher a considerable amount of money and told her husband she wished to see him in his office. With an apology on his lips the young fellow followed the young wife.

For a minute the little old maid hesitated, then she signed the note, and started one of the pupils toward his office before another snubbing from his wife would make the matter of indorsing that note harder. "After all, a friend should be more loyal than even a wife," she argued to herself.—Indianapolis News.

BABY CHICK FATE DETERMINED EARLY

Selection and Management of the Breeding Flock, Bee Eggs Are Laid Controls Young Bird Destiny.

The baby chick's chances for success are determined very largely before he is hatched, selection and management of the parent breeding flock being the vital controlling factors, according to Prof. E. C. Purman, head of the poultry department at the Michigan Agricultural college. "Too much care cannot be used by poultrymen in selection, mating and management of their breeding flocks," says Purman. "The future welfare of the baby chicks depends directly upon the breeding flock. In fact, the various problems of breeding, feeding, housing, incubation, and brooding are all involved in combination for successful chick raising."

"Strong, vigorous, well mated parent stock, preferably pure bred, is necessary to produce healthy chicks. Correct feeding is essential in the breeding pen. A good feeding practice is one that will keep the hens in good flesh, thereby indicating that the physical strain of production is in no way interfering with the quality of the eggs produced, and at the same time avoiding all tendency toward sluggishness or fat production."

"Damp and unsanitary housing conditions are ruinous to production, fertility, and health. An abundance of fresh air, combined with dryness and comfort are fundamentally important in the production of vigorous chicks."

"Proper incubation and correct feeding of the baby chicks are, of course, vital factors in rounding out successful chick raising."

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT

Director James J. Davis reports that good progress has been made in enforcing the Volstead law, in fact violations are growing more and more scarce. During the month of January he arrested 65 violators, seized one boat, 5 autos, 6 stills, 102 gallons of whiskey, 1589 gallons of beer, 509 gallons of wine, 785 gallons of mash, 5 gallons of cider, collected $21,630.25 in fines.

Director Davis has warned violators that from now on they are taking much greater risk than heretofore, and that it is his intention to bring cases under such law. There has been a marked decrease in the number of violations during the past year and Director Davis feels that the procedure outlined will have a marked deterrent effect on violators.

FORMER NORTH ADAMS LAD AT GRAYLING

A letter received from John W. Payne of Grayling, came to hand and states he is commissioner of schools of Crawford county, and he can't get along without the Advocate, as he wants to know all about the home folks.

John graduated from North Adams high school some years ago and since that time has been quite busy, as a teacher, school examiner, and in various other positions. He will be re-entitled in the line of speaking, and in the good old debating and spelling school days no meeting was complete without a declamation by "John."

A NOTABLE EXAMPLE FOR HILLSDALE COUNTY

John W. Payne, school commissioner of Crawford county, is in our opinion a pioneer in moral training for school boys. He is sending out the following terse broadside to teachers of his county and the public: "MEN—STOP! LOOK! LISTEN! Cigarettes Are Killing Our School Boys."

Their denigrating effect on mind and body is felt as far down as the intermediate grades in our schools. How long will it be before we shall be able to read the handwriting on the wall?

When boys are smoking cigarettes it means that men are furnishing them either for money or as a gift. We surely know the cigarette law. If we are not familiar with it we had better look it up as ignorance of the law excuses no one.

We cannot expect ministers, teachers, philosophers and statesmen to be furnished by a country whose boys are addicts of this habit. If this thing continues we are responsible for it and our nation will have to pay the price.

Respectfully submitted to the citizens of a Christian country,
John W. Payne,
County Commissioner of Schools.

DAIRY FARMERS FIND ANSWER TO PROBLEMS

Neighbors Keep Records Which Prove Efficient Production Secret of Profits.

That efficient production is the key-note of success in the dairy business, the margin of production above the "average" determining profits, has been proved by two western Michigan farmers.

Frank Adams and Tom Jones are neighbors. Both belonged to the same cow testing association last year, and kept careful check on their costs and receipts for the year on the same mature cows each was milking. They sold their product on the same basis of butterfat. The total of value 4 his product was but $650.41. After a total feed cost of $402.04 was deducted, Jones had a margin left of $248.37 for his entire herd.

Adams, on the other hand, had an average production of 7,471 pounds of milk and 296.8 pounds of butterfat, reaching a total value of $1442.45. Adams's feed costs were $408.62, only slightly above his neighbor's. His sales of product above feed cost was $1,034.83, an average of $114.79 an animal, as against Jones's average of $39.93.

Every dollar Adams spent for feed returned $3.54, while Jones got but $2.79 back for each dollar expended in this way.

Importance of eliminating "boarder" cows from the herd, keeping only relatively high producers, and the need for better breeding if state farmers are to make a success of dairying are reasons pointed out from the experience of Adams and Smith by extension specialists at the Michigan Agricultural college who are sponsoring the rapidly increasing cow testing associations in the state.

George Taylor, of Franklin township exhibited a freak pig to County Agent C. L. Coffeen this week which has two bodies, eight legs and one head. It was one of a brood of fifteen, the others being normal. Bliss field Advance.

The Solar System
The astronomer, Copernicus, who lived from 1473 to 1543, laid down as the foundation of his explanation of the solar system that the sun was fixed and that the earth and all the planets moved around it. Kepler (1571-1630) found that the planets moved in ellipses, not circles, round the sun. Kepler deduced three conclusions, respecting the movements of the planets, known as Kepler's Three Laws, and Sir Isaac Newton, (1642-1727) proved that they are a consequence of a single universal law of gravitation.

IT DOES NOT PAY

Here's a little sermon we found the other day in the Grand Rapids Press, which we wish every boy and young man in North Adams or the surrounding country would read. It is a short sermon, but it is the story of a long but successful life. Not long as a free and happy man measures the years, but more than an ordinary life-time to "Doc" Waterbury.

"Doc" Waterbury, released from Auburn prison, is going home to lead the life of a free man.

His name meant nothing to us, but down New York way he is known as "King of the confidence men."

In his beetle career he has used 15 aliases, was first arrested for swindling 19 years ago, has been in seven different state and federal prisons and all in all has taken $250,000 from his victims, all of which was spent along Broadway or in putting up a front elsewhere.

Now at 49 Doc Waterbury is an old man with white hair and shaking hands, the result of the nervous tension under which he lived as a confidence operator. Nothing he left save his father's little farm near Ithaca, heavily mortgaged to help him out of scrapes.

Doc Waterbury, the king, has found it doesn't pay. He is going back to take what comfort a dishonest, wrecked man can to a dying mother."

"Doc" Waterbury has had at several times that the ordinary man would consider a considerable fortune, but he got it dishonestly and it never did him any good. The honest dollar is the only dollar worth anything at all, and the man with a few of them is richer than the man who has a million dishonest ones, because he can be rich in honor, in contentment, in the respect of his fellows none of which is ever attained by the rich man who gets his wealth by questionable means.—Nashville News.

LOW PRODUCING COST

MEANS CROP PROFITS

Use of High Yielding Varieties and Proper Cultural Methods Bring Greater Returns.

"That returns from all crops can be made greater by cheapening production costs is an important farm fact," before emphasized this spring by Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the Michigan Agricultural college farm crops department.

"Cultural crops—beans, corn, and potatoes are all benefited by early and thorough preparation of the seed bed," says Professor Cox. "The last of cost of cultivation is greatly lessened if the seed bed is well worked and thoroughly fitted. Also, high yielding varieties give larger returns per acre and less cost per bushel. The robust beans, for instance, will frequently be good for five or ten bushels more than ordinary pea beans."

"The use of from 200 to 300 pounds of acid phosphate on grain and cultivated crops, or of a complete fertilizer high in phosphorus, pays a good return in nearly all cases and improves the quality of the crop."

"Oats and barley should be planted as early as possible in the spring in order to secure large yields of best quality. Corn in general gives better returns for the man who has his ground ready for planting early in the corn planting season rather than late. There is an unusually large supply of high grade seed corn of high yielding varieties available this year."

"Beans as a rule will yield more and give a better quality if planted on good seed beds during the first half of June, rather than the last

PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT LAWS HAVE SHARP TEETH

Marked Decrease in Number of Violations During the Past Year.

The federal prohibition department for Michigan, under Director James R. Davis, during the month of January made 68 cases, arrested 55 violators, seized one boat, five automobiles, eight stills, 102 gallons of whiskey, 1599 gallons beer, 509 gallons of wine, 785 gallons of mash, five gallons of cider, collected $21,630.25 in fines and taxes and assessed special tax amounting to $11,632.25.

Group Chief Shamp of the Bay City district reports to Director Davis the seizure of two large stills which were being operated in the woods about 17 miles from Bay City. 50 gallons of moonshine, which was buried in the ground, were sold to the federal agents.

The week of March 13 Commissioner Haynes, accompanied by Chief Counsel J. J. Britt, of the prohibition department, Washington, made a tour of the state, covering Detroit, Flint, Grand Rapids, Saginaw and Bay City. Commissioner Haynes was well received at all meetings in above places. At Lansing he spoke to the joint session of the legislature and senate and is sure it will have a very beneficial effect. He laid special stress on the problem of cooperation between the local, state and federal enforcement bodies, and a better understanding will be had by all the departments interested in law enforcement. The commissioner brought a message that covered the entire United States. It was full of optimism. This is substantiated by positive proof, that strikes made now in the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment are so rapid that before many years it will be enforced as well as any other law on our statute books.

A recent decision of the United States supreme court held that the old internal revenue laws are still in force and provide much heavier penalties than may be given under the Volstead Act.

Director Davis has warned violators that from now on they are taking much greater risk than heretofore, and that it is his intention to bring cases under such law. There has been a marked decrease in the number of violations during the past year and Director Davis feels that the procedure outlined will have a marked deterrent effect on violators.

CERTIFIED POTATOES

PAY INGHAM FARMER

Selected Tubers Yield 556 Bushels to Acre—M. B. Clark Gives Up Cheap Seed.

It pays to plant high grade seed potatoes in place of the "any old thing" seed stocks so often used on Michigan farms. If the experience of M. B. Clark, a farmer living near Williamston in Ingham county, holds good for the rest of the state's potato growers.

"I have always been like a lot of other farmers, planting any old thing in the line of potatoes," said Clark the other day in discussing his venture with certified tubers. "Something the boys wouldn't eat was good enough for seed. Sometimes we didn't raise enough for our use."

"Last spring I heard of certified seed potatoes and purchased seven and one-half bushels of Golden Tulets from a farmer in the northern part of the state. I didn't really believe that the certified seed would pay for the extra cost but decided to give it a trial."

"Now I'm just an ordinary hayseed, and don't pretend to be an expert potato grower, but I raised 556 bushels to the acre with the certified stock I planted. As a result of this experience, I say now that the best and purest seed is none too good. What these Russets did for me ought to produce a big yield for any other farmer in the state."

The certified seed Clark planted is raised by members of the Michigan Potato Producers Association, under field inspection by members of the extension staff at the Michigan Agricultural college.

Because of three students getting boozed while at a basketball game at Port Huron and the consequent mix-up over the matter, Supt. Angoroff of the Sandusky schools was arrested for assault and battery on a charge preferred by Ted Dawson. Dawson, it seems was one of the three and when spoken to about it became snappy and the superintendent stapped him with a newspaper. The school board is standing firmly behind the superintendent and will defend him. After it is all over they should reprimand the teacher for not giving the young man a thorough, kicking both for his share in the drinking and for being impudent, and the parents of the boy should assist in making it unbecomingly for their offspring.—Crownell Jefferies.

The Solar System.
The astronomer, Copernicus, who lived from 1473 to 1543, laid down as the foundation of his explanation of the solar system that the sun was fixed and that the earth and all the planets moved around it. Kepler (1571-1630) found that the planets moved in ellipses, not circles, round the sun. Kepler deduced three conclusions, respecting the movements of the planets, known as Kepler's Three Laws, and Sir Isaac Newton, (1642-1727) proved that they are a consequence of a single universal law of gravitation.

GRAFTING WILL SAVE GIBBLED FRUIT TREES

Damaged by Mice and Rabbits Can Be Remedied by Simple Operation.

The only way to save a fruit tree which has been girdled by mice or rabbits, by orchard tools, or by disease is through bridge grafting, an operation which is not difficult, according to H. M. Wells of the M. A. C. horticultural department.

It is easier and more economical to take necessary precautions against such damage to the trees, but the injured can be repaired effectively by grafting. The work may be done over or three weeks before growth starts, but there is less chance for the scions to dry out if the grafting is done just as the buds begin to swell.

"Two fundamental points must be observed," says Wells, "if the grafting work is to be successful. First, the scions which form the bridge should be selected from dormant wood of the previous season's growth, which may be cut at any time during the dormant period and stored in a moist sand or sphagnum moss in a cool cellar. Second, the cambium layer of the scion must unite with the corresponding layer of cells on the tree.

"The tools required for the work are a sharp knife, small wire nails, hammer, grafting wax. A pocket knife with a quarter round blade may be useful in starting the bridge previous to the inserting of the scions.

"When preparing the wood to receive the graft, the ragged bark at the upper and lower margin of the wound should be cut back evenly to the live tissues. The scion is beveled on each end with a straight cut about an inch long which will permit the scion being inserted well under the bark without separating it unduly from the cambium. As each end of the scions are inserted they are held in place by means of small nails.

"The number of scions to insert will depend upon the size of the trunk. However, they should not be more than two inches apart to insure complete healing of the wound. After the scions have been set, the operation is completed by covering the area occupied by the end of the scion with grafting wax. It is well to mound dirt up around the girdled area after the grafting is completed, thus preventing the drying out of the scions."

L. H. Logan's hardware store, in the village of Doerfield, was entered by burglars about 1:30 Monday morning through a window from the stairway that leads to the hall over the store. They ransacked the money drawer, getting about $10, also took some watches and flashlights and then helped themselves to some goods from Mr. Logan's filing station. From there they went to Chas. Ambreth's store and broke a pane of glass out of the door. Mr. Ambreth, who lives in the rooms above the store, heard the noise, but thought the wind had blown down something, and started down stairs to investigate. The burglars heard him coming and hastily departed—Petersburg Sun.

Beware of Carelessness.
The unsmart man is sometimes careless; the average man is frequently careless; the southern man is heartlessly careless. Don't indulge in carelessness; it breeds ruin and disaster.

Explains Old Belief.
The belief in "southern man" is an old one, when a small, dark race of aborigines inhabited the country.

ARTHUR D. SMITH
Arthur DeForish Smith was born in Moscow, Mich., May 26, 1883. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Smith.

On October 23, 1912 he was united in marriage to Jennie L. Haight, at Hillsdale.

He departed this life Friday, April 13 at the age of 40 years. His death was sudden but to the faithful heart such an experience is but the coronation.

His wife and three beautiful children, Robert, Richard and Dorothy, survive. Together with these are his mother, Mrs. Willard Smith, one brother, Edward M. Smith of Scipio township, and one sister, Mrs. Seth Arnold of Milan, Mich. With these, other relatives and a host of friends mourn the loss of a good man.

The Solar System.
The astronomer, Copernicus, who lived from 1473 to 1543, laid down as the foundation of his explanation of the solar system that the sun was fixed and that the earth and all the planets moved around it. Kepler (1571-1630) found that the planets moved in ellipses, not circles, round the sun. Kepler deduced three conclusions, respecting the movements of the planets, known as Kepler's Three Laws, and Sir Isaac Newton, (1642-1727) proved that they are a consequence of a single universal law of gravitation.

High School Notes

Mr. R. C. Young, superintendent of schools of North Adams, is extending an invitation to the teachers of the district schools in the vicinity of North Adams, and their eighth grade students, to meet with him at the North Adams High School, Saturday, April 14 at 10 a. m. for a conference.

At this conference topics and questions bearing upon the coming eighth grade examination will be discussed and samples of written work examined and criticized for the purpose of rendering assistance to the pupils.

Through his experience as commissioner of schools, Mr. Young understands why it is that many boys and girls fail in their attempts to pass the examination, and for this reason all should take advantage of this opportunity to secure help.

It is pleasing to the people of North Adams and vicinity to note that their High School has again been placed upon the diploma list of the University of Michigan. This entitles graduates to enter the University without examination.

Mr. R. C. Young, who resigned as Commissioner of Schools of Hillsdale county last fall to accept the superintendency of North Adams schools has been retained and given a three year contract at a good increase in salary.

Singing Structure of Jalpure.

If you stand in the vicinity of one of the leading buildings of Jalpure, Indiana, you will hear a strange sound, like singing in the distance, but the noise is made by the action of the air currents blowing across the surface of the structure and sweeping its niches and eaves. It is particularly puzzling to the stranger for the reason that one does not seem to be able to locate the source of the sound. The porous character of the stone is said to contribute to the phenomenon.

95,000 RECEIVE A NAME

If all the Dodds and Great Auk and Blood Sweating Hippopotami in the world were counted up, their total number might be less than 10,000. Yet for all their scarcity these creatures have well known names. But there is on the earth a breed of animals numbering over 95,000, which for three years has been deprived of the use of its name by a Court Injunction.

And to make it worse this particular beast is a frequent guest in our homes. It is big enough to shake hands with a man whose name you do not know and have to merely smile foolishly at him; but to sit at the table and carve large juicy slices from one of God's own creatures and yet not be permitted to call it by its proper name—that is unthinkable. This unhappy situation has been at last relieved by a recent momentous decision of the United States Court of Appeals. After years of litigation the Court has decided that more than 95,000 Ohio Improved Chesters which live, so speak, right in our back yards have a right to use their true names on their calling cards, and to use their initials O. I. C. on their monogrammed jewelry, if they so desire.

The row started several years ago when two rival Swine Breeder Associations got into a dispute as to whether or not the Ohio Improved Chesters are the same breed of hogs as the Chester Whites. The United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the Sixth Circuit says they are not the same breed; and in so doing the Court establishes a real precedent.

As long as the scientific breeding of animals has been practiced there has never before been a case tried relative to the identity of a breed, so the judges and jurors really had to do some original thinking this time, and there are several thousand O. I. C. breeders in the country who are very happy over the decision.

H. L. Fry of this village specializes in these hogs.

The Soya Bean.

The soya bean is largely used by the Chinese. The white chews they see at Chinese stores are made of soya bean curd. In France, a liquid made from the soya bean has been used as a milk substitute. It is not good for that purpose, because, like all beans, it is largely starch. The soya bean is a valuable food, but it is inferior to peanuts. It contains much fat, which beans lack.

Really Striking at the Farmer

Everybody has been clamoring for conditions which would benefit the farmer and bring him a greater return for his efforts.

The price of sugar has gone up a few cents a pound and the western beet sugar industry has been virtually saved from destruction.

Part-Time Employment

One of the most vicious features of business depressions is part-time and short-time work, or under-employment, in all its various forms. This fact, President Harding's Conference on unemployment stressed early in its recent investigations. So, when the committee on unemployment and business cycles was directed to prepare an exhaustive report and invited the National bureau of economic research to make the preliminary investigation, the subject was made part of the studies of their economic experts.

Dr. Paul F. Brissenden pulls together the widely scattered and fragmentary data on under-employment and discusses them and what they show; especially the relation between normal full-time, as compared with actual time worked.

Conclusions reached from his study are that there is a good deal of under-employment of a cyclical character because under-employment fluctuates with the peaks and the depressions of the business cycle in much the same manner as unemployment. Overtime employment thus naturally rises when under-employment falls, but as it probably does not fluctuate as widely as under-employment, overtime even in the long run probably does not compensate for short time.

He makes clear that the best figures of unemployment in this country, whether they show the number of men unemployed or the shrinkage of the numbers on the payrolls, are a totally inadequate measure of unemployment because they do not take into account the loss of time due to under-employment.

Obituary

Charles Addison Corbett was born at Palmyra, Michigan July 27, 1856, and died in the Hillsdale hospital March 31, 1923, following a very serious surgical operation.

The funeral was held from the residence in North Adams, April 2 Rev. Robert Gordon officiating, assisted by Rev. E. A. S. Allen, pastor of the North Adams Congregational church. Interment was in North Adams cemetery.

On November 16, 1877 Mr. Corbett was married to Hattie J. Bromley and to this union were born two sons and four daughters. The wife and children all survive him. The children are Mildred Corbett of New York City, Hugh B. Corbett of Detroit, Mrs. Grace Barker of North Adams, Clara Bess Corbett of Everett, Minnesota, Mrs. Jessie Houghtaling of Hillsdale, and John H. Corbett of Putnam, Connecticut. There are two grandchildren, Cessie Jeannette Houghtaling and Raymond A. Barker Jr.

Mr. Corbett is also survived by three brothers and one sister—Lucius E. Corbett and Rev. Fred W. Corbett of Lansing, Arthur P. Corbett of Cleveland and Mrs. Hattie Scrivens of North Adams.

He has been a member of the community of North Adams for practically all of his life. His parents lived on a farm in the vicinity when he was a small child and he began his school days at the John L. Buck school. Afterwards though his paternal home was in Palmyra, he lived and worked and went to school much of the time in and around North Adams, and during the whole of his married life this community has been his home.

Forty-six years ago Mr. Corbett joined the Congregational church in which he has always been a faithful worker, serving in various capacities and occupying a position as deacon at the time of his death. He was a member of the Modern Woodmen of America.

The family mourn a loving husband and father. The community has lost a respected citizen.

Card of Thanks

We wish to thank our friends and neighbors, the church and various societies for the kindness and sympathy shown to us at the time of the illness and death of our husband, father, and for the beautiful flowers.

We wish also to thank Rev. Gordon and Rev. Allen for their words of comfort and cheer. Mrs. C. A. Corbett and family

Might it not be well to let industry and the farmer recover before any more Congressional investigations are started for the "benefit" of the party whom the investigation would be intended to destroy? It is laughable to watch the politicians demand higher prices for farm products and minimum prices for all manufactured goods. It can't be done.

Pre-Pink Spray is Apple Orchard Need

That the so-called pre-pink spray application is necessary in the control of apple scab in Michigan orchards is shown by results of recent experiments. This early application would have helped materially in the control of the disastrous epidemic of apple scab which developed in many Michigan orchards during 1922, according to W. A. Dutton, specialist with the M. A. C. horticultural department, who is advising the pre-pink spray this spring.

Experimental work in 1921 at the M. A. C. station showed a reduction of 27 per cent in the amount of scabby apples where the pre-pink spray was used in addition to the regular spray schedule. The results in 1922 were also strikingly conclusive.

"The pre-pink application should be made about the time the small leaves begin to turn back from the blossom clusters and when the tips of the buds may be seen, but before they have begun to separate," says Dutton. "The next application should be made as soon as the blossom buds have opened in the clusters. During 1921 and 1922 there was a period of from 10 to 18 days between these two applications and it was during this time that the first infection period occurred."

Summer strength lime sulphur (1½ gallons in 50) has given satisfactory results for this spray. The addition of lead arsenate at this time is usually not necessary but will do no harm. Bordeaux mixture may also be used at this time, and should be made in the proportions of 3 pounds of copper sulphate 5 to 6 pounds of stone or lump, lime, and 50 gallons of water. If hydrated lime is used the amount should be increased to 8 or 9 pounds. The pre-pink application is not recommended as a "cure-all" for scab control, but simply as one of the steps necessary to insure satisfactory results.

The money that has been paid in advance on the Advocate has proven very acceptable, and we intend the donors shall receive full value therefrom. At present we are thinking how best to adapt the extremely cramped quarters we occupy to our needs.

Flood Daniels made a drive to Camp Custer, Battle Creek Sunday. He says the government is tearing out many of the original wood barracks and officers quarters, which can be bought ready built for a song. The large general hospital for decrepit soldiers is located there and it is the intention of the government to make this camp one of the permanent institutions.

We are in receipt of a letter of thanks from Sidney Walden of Detroit for the roofing we have done to discourage the gas tax law, and we are as much surprised as anyone to know it has helped the cause.

Grover Cleveland is a man who can't be hornsogged into passing laws unless he knows what they are for, and it is noticeable he has cut out some of the things which made expense for the taxpayers, but, of course, the other members of the legislature manage to put on something else which pulls the coin.

The Advocate Is Delayed We had intended to get back to the old size of the paper which we maintained before the fire but the fact is, it will be possibly two or three weeks yet until we can get a full sized sheet. The building where we are located is so dilapidated and so much changing is necessary, that we are delaying this until later. Under no circumstances will we try to publish in full until everything is as near ready as possible.

We hope no one will grow impatient with us because of this. Difficulties are cropping out every day, and it is a problem how best to meet the circumstances.

MORTGAGE SALE

Whereas default has been made in the payment of certain money secured by a certain mortgage dated the first day of March, A. D. 1916, executed by Guy Sprague an unmarried man, of the Village of North Adams, Hillsdale County, Michigan to Fred Denning and Mina Denning of the same place, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Hillsdale, Michigan in Liber 136 of mortgages at page 10, on the third day of March, A. D. 1916, at one-thirty o'clock, P. M. And whereas the amount claimed to have been due eight hundred fifty-two dollars and forty cents ($852.40) of principal and interest and the further sum of thirty dollars ($30) as attorney fee stipulated in said mortgage, which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage, and no suit or proceedings in law or in equity have been instituted to recover debt now remaining secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

The Rain Making Job

For many years the scientific men of the country have been putting out the chimera that in times of great drought rain could be produced by artificial processes, and in technical journals have even gone so far as to give the modus operandi of such work.

At last after years of flimflaming the U. S. agricultural department has come out with a statement that the whole business is a myth, principally for the reason that no less great quantities of moisture can be drawn into the air by some means it can not be precipitated—the best reason in the world.

Very few people realize what this means, but for instance to produce one inch of rain over one acre of land approximately 113 tons of moisture will have to be drawn above it in the form of vapor, and a cloud to contain this amount of moisture would be a monster. Nothing but natural conditions will make rain and anyone who believes that a squad of men armed with explosives can make an oasis where they see fit, should get their bumps of credulity repaired. It can't be done.

Mothers' Day Proclamation

In compliance with our beautiful custom, which in a few years has come to be universally observed throughout the land, the time has come to set apart a day in honor of American motherhood.

Therefore, by virtue of the authority vested in me as Governor of the State of Michigan, I do hereby by designate and proclaim Sunday, May thirtieth, 1923, as Mothers' Day, and I call upon our people, both young and old, to gather, in their several places of worship and take part in services appropriate to the day.

In accordance with a resolution of the Congress of the United States, I further request the people of Michigan on the day, aforesaid to display the United States flag in their homes and in other suitable places, as a fitting expression of their desire to pay homage to American motherhood.

Given under my hand and the Great Seal of the State this twenty-seventh day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and twenty-three, and of the Commonwealth the eighty-seventh.
Alex J. Groesbeck, Governor

Governor Groesbeck in vetoing his gas tax bill, sets forth some of his reasons for so doing as follows: "It is futile to contend that the farmer will be benefited by this measure. He, in common with other owners of light cars, will then be paying from six to ten dollars a year in addition to the present license fee. The whole plan of taxing motor vehicles on the basis of weight, horse power and gas consumption is indefensible, and has crystallized a sentiment in opposition to the proposal, which makes it certain that it will be immediately submitted to a referendum vote. This constitutional procedure means that no revenue whatever from this source could be realized, if at all, for a period of two years."

An examination of the bill itself reveals it to be a strangely worded document. It is not a privilege tax for the use of the highways, but a plain property tax on liquids used for developing heat or power, regardless of whether they are used for vehicle propulsion or not. It contains no exemptions whatever except to corporations who ship their product out of the state. The farmer, manufacturer and others who utilize these liquids for other than transportation purposes are not included in this favored class.

The Winter term graduation exercises of The Moody Bible Institute of Chicago, was held April 18. The fifty-eight graduates of the Day Classes, together with two hundred and nine graduates from the correspondence department, The Society of the Union, Panama, England, Scotland, Denmark, Egypt, India and the Philippines. The enrollment in the day classes is now the largest in the history of the Institute. The graduation address was given by R. E. Vale, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Oak Park.

By request he repeated an address on "Ambassadors for Christ", which was recently given, with much acceptance, before a body of Christian workers of the Presbyterian church of Chicago.

We May Be Easy
There is a suspicion that the politicians of the country consider country editors "easy" otherwise the dope they send out for free publication would have to be much briefer. In the five years we have published a paper we have had many bids for free publicity and have of course been obliged to decline the honors.

The political program of the candidate at Battle Creek, Mr. A. B. Williams, certainly exceeds the speed limit for handouts. Before we are publishing his letter, and hope none will take it seriously.

"Battle Creek, Michigan, April 19, 1923.
Mr. Lewis W. Harvey,
North Adams, Michigan.
Dear Sir:—The friends of Mr. A. B. Williams, who will seek the republican nomination for Congress in this district of Michigan, have prepared the enclosed information concerning him which may be of interest to you.

We feel that it is to the interest of all citizens to send an experienced able man to Congress and we can say sincerely that Mr. Williams is such a man.

The Williams for Congress Club
S. A. Howes, Secretary
Howes also sends us a cut of his candidate, but as yet we have not seen fit to use it. Political dope such as the above, finds its way into the waste basket in most small newspaper offices as it is hardly a square toed proposition.

An Epidemic of Fires
There seems to be a large number of blazes in all parts of the country and the insurance companies must be hard hit. It is rather an unusual circumstance to find so many disastrous fires occurring within such a short period of time.

The Jonesville high school building is about the heaviest loss in this vicinity, and the origin of the fire is very uncertain. Many valuable farm buildings in this county have also gone up in smoke. Hillsdale county is very unlucky.

We are planning to install running water thru all pens at the Stockyards. When completed we will have the best equipped yards in Hillsdale County. Tell Central to give you 63 and list your stock with a growing concern.

The Democrats are seriously considering the addition of a "wine and beer" plank in their platform. Such a plank is demanded by the wet members of the party. The Democrats used to be called a wet party but when Richmond P. Hobson came to the front with his temperance policies the old Colonels had to get off the leadership for so prominent a man as the hero of Santiago Harbor had to be condoned, but it didn't signify that the Colonels have given up and quit. They are merely waiting for the wind to change.

The pretty entertainment, a Tom Thumb wedding was presented Tuesday evening in the Congregational church. Although given for the second time in our city everybody seemed to enjoy it. The little childish movements keep up interest to the highest pitch. The affair was a genuine wedding with all the accessories of bridesmaids, best man and invited guests. The little misses in their long skirts and trains were evidently much more at ease than their companions in their conventional black coats but they certainly were no more dignified.

At the Methodist church Sunday evening, Supt. F. H. Clapp of Albion gave a splendid illustrated address on the conditions in India, China, and Corea where Methodist Missionaries are being supported by various charities of the church. The stereopticon views were especially fine and Rev. Clapp brought out the need of funds, especially in India, where the native preachers travel largely by bicycle and by this means can reach large numbers of outlying districts in a comparatively short time while by the old native system of travel with an ox team, the possibilities are very limited. $50 laid down here places a bicycle in the hands of a preacher in India, and this means great results to the people of India. Roman scenes were also shown and the famous Methodist stronghold, Mount Mario overlooking the Vatican was described.

Don't Miss The Lector
Bishop W. F. Oldham of the Methodist church for many years located in South America, with headquarters at Buenos Aires in the Argentine, will speak at the Hillsdale Methodist church Monday evening May 14 at 8:00 sharp. Bishop Oldham is reported to be a world famous man, and the lecture which he will give is along educational lines. His experiences in South America form the nucleus of a thoroughly entertaining topic well worth giving a distance to hear. The Hillsdale quartette will furnish a half hour song service preceding the lecture. No admission charged. Don't forget the time and place.

Clean Up—Paint Up
The season of springtime with its annual housecleaning spasms, is upon us, and we are supposed to be in the midst of flowers and balmy airs; instead we are encompassed roundabout with snow banks. However this fact does not prevent us from renovating our premises. Lets get ourselves astir because back yards need cleaning, lawns want furnishing, outbuildings need painting and repairing, fences must be fixed, surplus litter taken from the streets, old winter's hoary earmarks removed, windows washed, and a hundred necessary acts performed, so that when the warm spring days arrive they'll not catch us napping.

How delightful to wander down the concrete walks of Slicktown on a brilliant morning in June when all nature is in tune with the Infinite, and buildings look as though they had absorbed share of nature's awakening. Golden frets of sunshine sift through the foliage and create mosaics of strange pattern; robins, thrushes and wrens swell the chorus of the heavens.

You can't enjoy all these blessings unless your garden is planted and every spring task attended to.

The old Omega Cement plant at Mosherville which is the graveyard of so many moneyed men's hopes, is now being completely razed to the foundations, and after many years the machinery is being taken away. A. B. Williams For CONGRESS

In endorsing the name of Arthur B. Williams for the Republican nomination for Congress at the Third District primaries,
May 21, the acquaintances of Mr.
Williams feel that they are presented a candidate who is exceptionally well qualified to serve the people of the Third district in the important post of Congressman.

Mr. Williams was raised on a farm in Eaton county and had a practical experience as a dirt-farmer. He attended country school and made his way through Olivet College securing his admission to the bar by study in Charlotte and Detroit. He attained a high position in the practice of law in Battle Creek. For more than ten years he occupied most responsible positions as a business executive in control of large affairs. He is recognized as one of the most prominent attorneys and business men of the state.

He is an able and convincing public speaker.
He is a leading advocate of taxation reform and for some years past has been engaged in a state-wide inquiry in demand for economy in taxation and efficiency in public expenditure, speaking upon this and other leading public questions before audiences throughout the State. Mr. Williams has laid special emphasis upon the necessity that the farmer be relieved from his unequal burdens arising from the situation in which the farmer was left by the after-war re-adjustment.

Mr. Williams has been a close student of public affairs, both state and National. During the war he was one of the leading members of the financial and other organizations in support of war causes in his home territory.

He was chosen by the Counties of Southern Michigan to be president of the Michigan Detroit-Chicago Highway Association when the organization was formed some ten years ago to promote an improved highway across the state. He has been an active factor in promoting rational campaigns for highway betterment in Michigan.
Mr. Williams is recognized as a man of the highest integrity, of exceptional ability, and sound and sober judgment. If chosen to Congress he will render distinguished service there, and will represent all classes fairly and impartially, and with an insight and understanding that will prove valuable to the district, the state and the nation.

The following among his many acquaintances in his home city who enthusiastically endorse his candidacy as offering the kind of service which the state and nation need, take this means of attesting their belief in his high qualifications.

The most sensational bill now before the Michigan solons is the "sterilization" measure, which provides that all mentally defective persons in the state shall be rendered im potent. The problem of taking care of these people is a serious one, and Laper is already filled to overflowing. Some opponents of the bill claim it is the intention of the state to sterilize about 100 of these defectives now at Laper and turn them loose to infect the populace. As a matter of fact there are large numbers of these folks now at liberty who cannot be received at Laper.

We notice the legislators at Lansing are as yet showing no inclination to place a limit on taxation in Michigan. This means that high taxes can go on and on, that every year they can be a little higher, if the officers see fit. The Senate re-

Chas. Fowle was kicked by a horse Monday, breaking two ribs.
Allen Kies and wife of Jackson visited his parents, Chas. Kies and wife Sunday.

Fred Carpenter is sick with pneumonia, also Virginia. Both are better at this writing.
Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hackett of Hudson visited her sister, Mrs.
Fred Carpenter, one day last week.
Mr. and Mrs. Lee Lockwood and son and her mother, Mrs. Sharp visited their aunt, Mrs. John Adams Sunday.

One hundred and ninety million cubic feet of gas roars into the air daily from the oil wells of Long Beach, California. Fifty million cubic feet is being wasted daily at Santa Fe Springs oil field, and 15-20,000,000 cubic feet at Huntington Beach.

Roads in Southern Counties Excellent

Roads generally throughout south Michigan now are in good condition, due to recent favorable weather, according to the weekly highway bulletin of the U. S. weather bureau here.

The weather recently has been warm and the sunshine has permitted the thoroughfares to become dry and settled.

In northern Michigan the roads, although open, still are in poor condition. A few snow drifts remain and the frost is not entirely out of the ground. The warm sunshine, however is improving them rapidly.

Gravel sections of the Dixie highways in Oakland county are good, but they are only fair in Genesee and Saginaw counties. The route is open to automobiles as far as Alpena but north of there it is in poor condition because of frost and snow.

The West Michigan Pike is open from the state line to Mackinaw City with the exception of detours north of Manistee and east of Isham, west of Petoskey and south of Mackinaw City. The detours are only fair. The bridge at Pelston is out.

The Mackinaw Trail is rough but passable from the state line to Constantine. From Constantine to Grand Rapids it is good with the exception of a few rough spots. Gravel sections in Montcalm and Mecosta counties are somewhat rough. The route is open to Mackinaw City except for detours south of Boardman and north of Boyne Falls.

The Meridian road, number fourteen, is good from the state line to Hudson and fair from Hudson to the intersection with trunk line number 23. From that point to Lansing the road is in good condition. North of St. Johns there are rough places but the road is open to Cheboygan.

Number sixteen is good from Detroit to Birmingham but is impassable for trucks between Birmingham and Novi. Although somewhat rough in places the remainder of the route is fairly good.

Number seventeen is good from Detroit to Albion and fair to Kalamazoo. Except for a few rough spots it is good the remainder of the distance.

KIES FOR CONGRESS

Brewster E. Kies of Bankers, an old war horse in politics, has again consented to run for the office of Representative to Washington from the third district of Michigan and his friends are already circulating petitions in his behalf, throughout the county.
Kies states that over 40 years ago he advocated rural free delivery, parcels post and postal savings systems. He says "I am unalterably opposed to the Esch-Cummings law and present high tariff which is causing a rapid rise in sugar, woolen goods and nearly everything the consumer has to buy."

Kies is a progressive Republican in every sense of the word and if sent to Washington would undoubtedly do more real execution for the good of the farming population than any man in the race. This much we know: Mr.
Kies is a man who never violated his pledges to his party and what he promises to his constituency, in this county you can depend upon so far as he is concerned.—Advertisement.

The state authorities are investigating the violent death of a negro convict at the State prison on Sunday evening. It appears 9 negro convicts occupy quarters in a dormitory at the institution and during the night hours this man was stabbed to the heart with a thrust cut. Warden Hurst but was absent at the time and little is known of how the murder occurred. It is more than likely that an investigation and a general shake-up will follow.

The snow storm of Wednesday is certainly a record breaker for this vicinity as at no time within the past ten years has there been so much snow fallen in a volume so late in the season. On the Hillsdale road drifts are reported as being 30 inches deep and in some cases autos were stalled in them.

There is no reason why you do not take your home paper other than neglect. Find the reason in your category and abolish it.

"You cannot select good seed stock from the ordinary bin," says Moore in speaking of the state potato seed situation. "Leaf Roll Mosaic and Spindling Sprout are likely to be present without being detected in the tubers. All three show up later in the growing plant, however, and cut down yields every year 20 per cent or more. The certified seed is comparatively free from these diseases, in addition to its higher yielding quality."

The certified tubers are grown by members of the Michigan potato producers' association, under field inspection by extension men from the agricultural college.

Governor Groesbeck, fixed the date of election for the third congressional district as May 21, with the final election, June 19. He also fixed the final date for filing petitions, May 9. The election is held for the purpose of selecting a successor to the late U. S. Representative J. M. C. Smith.

It is more than likely that bootlegging and rum running on the Michigan border has seen its last days. The Canadian government has asked England to make a clean up of the sources of Canadian liquor and soon it will not be possible to procure liquor of any kind, for export across the border. When this is accomplished the supply of "home brew" will be the only alternative and that is mighty unreliable.

Our remark's last week concerning the candidacy of A. B. Williams of Battle Creek, for representative from this district to succeed J. M. C.
Smith perhaps were a little premature as Mr. Williams manager has come forward with a substantial aid for this week's paper and we presume he intends to use printer ink and pay advertising rates for it.

The "Red Man" Is Not a Paoor

We used to hear that old familiar song about "Lo, the Poor Indian", but it don't go any more. Down in Oklahoma the Osage Indians are so rich they don't know what to do with their money. It is quite common for an Indian attired in fancy blanket to drive a limousine six or an eight, and believe me, he gets fully as much enjoyment and excitement out of it as did his naked ancestors when they chased the wild buffalo and potted him with a flint pointed arrow, on the plains.
It has all come from the rich deposits of oil recently struck in Oklahoma. The Osage reservation seems to be particularly rich in the fluid and the red men enjoy a royalty from every barrel of oil on their lands. Some of these oil wells are gushers, and they yield a golden stream to the owners.

While it is true the red men have been beaten in the pioneer days in their dealings in land, it is also true that modern Indians have all the sharp tactics of the whites added to their own and are able to drive a good bargain. In Washington, Oregon, New Mexico, California and Minnesota valuable lands have been disposed of to the whites and in many tribes the per capita wealth of the Indian is from $2,000 to $2,400.

Dynamite Proves to be Handy Farm Tool

That the use of dynamite on Michigan farms is not confined to land clearing operations in new country, was shown graphically the other day before groups of Jackson and Kalamazoo county farmers who witnessed a series of demonstrations put on by members of the Michigan Agricultural College extension staff.
Rocks were loosened and broken up, ditches were dug, stumps were removed cleanly, pot holes were "shot" for drainage, and other operations showing the surprising range and adaptability of properly handled explosives in clean up work on the farm were carried out.

"Most of the farmers we met at these meetings showed a surprising lack of knowledge of the use of dynamite," said A. J. McAdams, college extension man who was in charge of the demonstration tour.
The general impression that explosives are of value only in land clearing work on new farms is wrong, and the demonstrations in Jackson and Kalamazoo counties showed the possibilities of increasing the efficiency of older farms by clearing up the land.

"Every stump or rock removed from a field which is under cultivation means increased efficiency in the handling of that field, while ditch and pot hole blasting and work of the kind is of great value."
Further demonstrations will be put on in the fall by the college experts, who are working in the northern part of the state during the summer months. N. K.
Kessler is in charge of a branch office of the work at Bay City, cooperating with the northeastern Michigan development bureau, while McAdams is located at Marquette with the main "land clearing office."

Wide Range Shown in Corn Varieties

The adaptability of Michigan's leading corn varieties to the different sections of the state affords an interesting study of conditions which are vitally important to the farmer who is raising the crop. Great variability in the state's climatic conditions is responsible for a series of zones or sections, each with its own "best adapted" corn varieties.

The list of growers of certified seed corn, under the M. A. C. inspection service, affords a very workable guide for variety adaptation, according to H. C. Ralther, extension specialist at the college and secretary of the Michigan crop improvement association.

Foremost among the corns for southern Michigan stands the Duncan, a strain of yellow dent corn originally developed by J. R. Duncan at Vicksburg and later improved by Duncan in his corn breeding work at M. A. C. This variety has stood first in tests carried out by the college staff on southern Michigan farms.

The M. A. C. Yellow Dent is a new variety which is playing an important part in moving the borders of the corn belt northward. In the result of cross-breeding work with Duncan corn and Golden Glow an early variety and it fits in that section of the state between the northern limits of Duncan and the section where the Early Golden Glow holds sway. Pickett corn, a variety of long-standing, takes its place in the Saginaw valley and Thumb districts, while Laughlin's Yellow Dent, a new variety carried on the improvement association lists for the first time, is an excellent producer for southern Michigan.

Samples from all these varieties took high honors at the International at Hay and Grain Show last fall, an indication that Michigan is rapidly qualifying as a corn state.

Certified Potatoes Not Expensive Seed

The fact that certified potato seed of guaranteed producing ability is comparatively cheap this year makes it an excellent time for Michigan growers to get rid of their old seed stocks and plant the pedigreed tubers, according to H. C.
Moore, extension specialist in pota-tes at M. A. C.

Old potatoes are also bringing a pretty good price on the market, another factor for which helps to make this spring a favorable time to switch to pure-bred seed stocks.
An increased production of about 45 bushels to the acre was marked up to the credit of certified seed potatoes grown on 1,015 farms of 1915 the state last year. In addition, many instances where as high as 90 per cent of the certified crop was of marketable quality, as against 60 to 65 per cent of the yield grown from common stocks, were recorded. This meant that nearly twice as many marketable tubers were raised from the certified seed.

Turkey Lays a Heavy Hand on all Bachelors

Turkey is henceforth no place for bachelors. It has now a sort of Volstead act for the prohibition of celibacy. For the rehabilitation of the empire and the development of Turkish power men are needed.
There must be no race suicide, and therefore everybody must get married.

The Angora National Assembly has enacted a stringent marriage law, which no citizen is permitted to evade. The lowest age at which marriage can be contracted is fixed at 18. Those who at 20 have not voluntarily married are compelled to do so by the state. He who tries to get off by pretending sickness has to have himself examined by a physician appointed by the government. If his state of health proves him unfit for marriage he gets a certificate that exempts him. But if there is any prospect that he still may become fit, he is then treated at the expense of the state and is kept under close observation until he is able to comply.

He who without sufficient reason refuses to marry loses all civic right and has to pay the state a quarter of his income in order that the poor may receive dowries.

The Turkish bachelor accordingly becomes a disfranchised member of society, and only very rich people who renounce any position in the state, can indulge this luxury. But the solicitude of the state goes much further; it also sees to it that a husband does not abandon his wife by going on a journey for too long a time. In case one sets out on a journey without taking with him his wife he must have the special permission of the authorities.

A widower must marry again, but if he has passed his 50th year he may choose between taking a new wife or supporting a few orphans.

Dead Drug Stores

Half the drug stores in the United States are run by men who are not entirely familiar with the fact that in order to increase business they must appeal to the general buying public through the columns of the local paper. The drug business is something rather tied up at present because most doctors have dipped into more or less, and that is probably the fault of the chemical firms in the field who are constantly sending their representatives to urge more goods upon the doctor who really is cutting out the drug store's legitimate business.

What this amounts to in the course of a year would surprise the novice. In years gone it was a practice for the customer who desired some little drug or an emetic to call on the nearest druggist, secure a free diagnosis of his ailment purchase some castor oil, rhubarb or extract of wahoo, and go home feeling better though he had not taken a smell of any of these medicines, but today it is different.

If you hop off the bed in the morning after a marathon dance, feeling sort of puffy under the eyes and your right lumbar region rattles like you had been eating glass, your only salvation is to see a diagnosti-cian. Now a diagnostician is a doctor who has outgrown his hat. After he has sounded your duodenum and thumped your solar plexus a while, finding numerous deficiencies in your cardiac and epigastric localities, he has demonstrated a rupture of the antennae you verily believe your time has come and anything he says for dope goes. So where does the poor druggist come in? And echo answers, empty where!

They've Quit

Again the legislatur- of Michigan has closed without doing anything about the road tax law, and it is probable that road building by the state will be held up for at least two years, and it is well so, for taxation has nearly eaten the automobile public lock, stock and barrel.

Defeat of the Smith automobile weight tax bill by a vote of 41 yeas to 56 nays marked the climax of the closing hours of the 52nd session of the Michigan state legislature. The final vote was preceded by one of the most intense and dramatic debates in the history of Michigan's law-making bodies.

Acting under a "call of the House which prevented any members from leaving the chamber, the fight was waged back and forth for two hours while the members and spectators who packed the galleries and side lines to capacity went without their dinner until 2:30, when the final roll call was taken. Our representative from this district, Mr.
Rowe, voted against the weight tax bill, but it is doubtful if he knows what the majority of his constituents in this county want.

Co-operate With Carriers

Carrying mail daily to patrons on the rural routes is attended with enough difficulty under best conditions. But now with bad roads and heavy mail it is worse than usual. In fact the carriers stand very much in need of the help of the people to whom they are de-living mail. Several suggestions have been made by the carriers which they believe would greatly facilitate the work. First the road in front of the box should be kept in good condition. In many places the ruts are so deep that it is difficult to get up to the box and away from it. Second the boxes should be uniform height from the ground.

The ruling from the postoffice department is that the box should be four and a half feet high, but it is reported that some are as low as three feet and others as high as six.
A little co-operation will help a lot.
The carriers will surely appreciate it.—Reading Hustler.

Don't pay any attention to the fellow who knocks this town. He didn't make it, and he can't bust it.
The town was here before he showed up, and it will still be here after he shuffles off. He is like a blank charge of powder in a shotgun. He makes a lot of noise but doesn't hit anything.

A Rochester, New York, physician says the natural position of the arms is downward and to hold both or even one arm, above one's head is very injurious to both the arms and the heart. He deplores strap-hanging in street cars and warns those whose hearts are in a precarious condition to avoid strap-hanging whenever possible by waiting for the next car instead of crowding into one filled beyond its seating capacity. Those who are weakened by strap-hanging should lie down immediately upon arriving home, and in doing so lie either on the back, or face down, or on the right side.

A silver tag attached to the dorsal fin of a salmon before its release after the eggs have been removed is resorted to by the Fisheries department of the Canadian government to trace the life history of fish.
A reward of $1.00 is paid for the return of the tags, together with scales from side of the fish and particulars regarding weight, length and place of capture.

Visiting on the telephone must stop in New England. That is the edict of the New England telephone companies and it has received official approval of the Massachusetts public utilities commission. Five minutes will be the limit. When a man calls his home he snorts a few monosyllables and hangs up, investigators report, but when a woman calls a woman friend she talks indefinitely. Business men are the chief complainants.

Elton R. Eaton Republican Candidate for Congress Third Congressional District

VOTERS of the Third Congressional District will Monday, May 21, have an opportunity to nominate on the Republican ticket for Congress, Elton R.
Eaton, of Kalamazoo, a candidate thoroughly equipped for the place he is seeking.

Practically all his life a newspaper writer and managing editor of two of the leading daily newspapers of this district, he knows the problems and needs of the public.
His work as a newspaper legislative correspondent gives him a knowledge of legislative matters and procedure that is highly essential to a congressional career.

He is seeking your vote as THE REPRESENTATIVE of ALL THE VOTERS of the district and if he is elected he will fight for the interests of the people he represents. He stands opposed to class legislation and all legislative action which is for the benefit of a certain few.

He strongly favors a MOST RIGID ECONOMY in governmental affairs, and believes that at this time every effort should be made to reduce the burden that has been forced upon the taxpayers. He does not believe that the tax burden should be shifted from one class to another, but that ALL should bear their just portion of the responsibility.

He is a tireless worker, a man thoroughly equipped and competent to assume the responsibility he seeks.

Put a mark in front of his name and send to Congress a man who will ever be on the alert in your behalf.

BORN July 30, 1881.

Argus.

For over a year political writer on St. Louis, Mo.,

of the Kalamazoo Gazette and the old Telegraph-Press.
For three years was a director of the Kalamazoo County Press club.

Member of the Belgian Relief Commission for Kalamazoo county.

President of the Michigan Association of Sheriffs, Police Chiefs and Prosecuting Attorneys.

Chairman of the Kalamazoo county Republican Committee.

for re-election being the largest any candidate ever received up to that time and ever received in Kalamazoo county.

Member of Press committee for Michigan Association of Lincoln clubs.

Has acted as legislative correspondent for a number of newspapers.

Burglars entered the Duguid department store at Fremont one night last week and carried off $3000 worth of goods, mostly suits, coats, dresses, silks and neckwear. The goods were taken from the back door which is locked from the inside by a bolt, the side and front doors were locked. There were no marks of tampering with the doors.

"But how do we eat?" someone may ask. Really it is a simple matter. To the right in the rear is a kitchen cabinet. On top of this is a 3-burner stove. Other cabinets contain provisions and tableware packed in such a way there is no rattle. A bed with springs is let down from the left hand side and can be raised and the car is illuminated by electric light and a radio outfit brings concerts from the city to the camper in the woods.—Advertisement.

THE REPUBLICANS PICK EATON TO WIN

Voters Monday, May 21 See in Kalamazoo Man their choice for Congress; His Career Meets with Approval All over District

Give Your Vote Monday to a Candidate who will be YOUR Congressman—Elton R. Eaton—A Man You Can Elect if Nominated

THE CANDIDATES

How Marshall Chronicle views Third district political situation.
This is what the Chronicle said Wednesday about the contest:
"GEORGE S. BARNES, COUNTY CHAIRMAN OF REPUBLICANS, GOES OVER TO EATON."

"The Republican organization in Calhoun county and in the district has split up and gone its several ways. Certain it is that the expected line-up for A. B. Williams for the Republican Congressional nomination has not panned out. George S. Barnes, chairman of the Calhoun Republican county committee, a thorough organization man, has climbed up the Eaton band wagon. This took the wind out of the Williams boomers' sails.

"Furthermore it appears now that a good many Republicans are asked when and where A. B. Williams became a Republican and what he ever did for the party. He was a Democrat so it is said, at least up to 1900, and so far as anyone knows has never attended a Republican county convention or been active in Republican county councils.

"Political dopesters in Battle Creek say Williams will not be able to carry his own bailiwick at the primary although this hardly seems possible.

"Elton R. Eaton is hoped to carry Kalamazoo county about 4 to 1 and if Williams doesn't do as well in Calhoun, Eaton is going to carry off the prize.

"Williams' record as a corporation attorney is not helping him any more. The drift in the Republican primary is very decidedly toward Eaton. If the election were held tomorrow he would be an easy winner. Williams' campaign is being managed by politicians who know the game. They have a candidate with plenty of money who will probably spend it. When the primary election day comes they'll have the money to hire automobiles to get their people to the polls. Eaton has no money so he can't get the votes to the polls unless there is popular sentiment enough among the people to elect a poor man in place of a rich man.

"The farmers and laboring men are counted on to win for Eaton
He is normally their candidate."

What Those who Know Elton R. Eaton Say About Him

"Mr. Eaton is of the honest, sturdy, out-and-out school of manhood; sincere, honorable and kindly in all his dealings."—This is what the Kalamazoo Gazette said when Mr. Eaton resigned as managing editor of that paper after having been employed on the Gazette for nearly ten years.

"To be a good editor and at the same time retain the friendship of the community requires talent of a high order. E. R. Eaton has accomplished this."—The old Battle Creek Journal.

"Mr. Eaton made a splendid record as a county official. He has been on the job every minute and has conducted his office in a high grade manner."—Augusta Beacon.

"Kalamazoo never had a better official than Elton R. Eaton. He gave the county the best he had in shop. The office was conducted along high grade lines. Mr. Eaton may not be a politician and he may not be backed up by a 'machine,' but he is making good and every promise he made to the voters was fulfilled to the limit."— Old Kalamazoo Advocate.

No experience better fits a man for Congress than a long, successful newspaper career.

Take time Monday to go to the polls and give your friend and YOUR candidate—Elton R. Eaton—a vote.

Price Survey Shows How Tariff is Hurting Farmers

Reports covering increases in the wholesale prices of consumers' commodities between March 1922, and March, 1923, disclose that the farmer has been hurt and not helped by the Fordney-McCumber Profiteers' tariff. The department of labor's latest figures show that while agricultural products have advanced slightly in the last thirteen months everything the farmer buys has risen quite as much or a good deal more, and almost nothing he uses has grown cheaper.

Compared with March, 1922, the average wholesale price of farm products has increased 12 points, according to the official statistics of the department of labor. At the same time the prices of various necessaries which the farmer consumes have risen two or three times higher. Some of the increases registered during the year were:
clothing, 27 points; building materials, 45 points; metals, 40 points;
fuel, 15 points; furniture, 10 points;
drugs, medicines and chemicals, 10 points; and all other commodities, 17 points.

The survey reveals that of these seven principal groups of commodities, in which are included practically everything that the farmer needs in the way of food, clothing, fuel, shelter, and health, and for the cultivation and harvesting of his crops and the maintenance and improvement of his building and equipment, only to show declines when the prices are contrasted with those of a year ago. And the average price of these commodities—furniture, and drugs, medicines, and chemicals—is only 2 points below the average wholesale price of farm products.

The heavy duties imposed by the Fordney-McCumber law on manufacturers enabled certain big interests, like the Steel Trust, the Chemical Trust, the Wool Trust, the Sugar Trust, the Pottery Trust, etc., to add the tariff and a big profit to the prices of their products, which the Republican tax on foreign manufactures really protected from competition. But the prices of agricultural products were fixed not by an American law, which had no force or effect beyond the confines of the United States, but by conditions in the markets of the world.

The farmer is now buying in a market which the Republican tariff restricts and controls for the special behoof of big interests and he is selling in a market which is governed by the law of supply and demand; operating without artificial restraint or influence of any kind. In short, the farmer has to buy from those who have the advantage of "protection" and yet must sell to those who have the benefit of competition.

There is no reason why you do not take your home paper other than neglect. Find the reason
in your category and abolish it.

It is perhaps not generally known that a good coat of lime sowed on the garden or potato patch just before planting is a splendid mulch.
Land for the production of tree and bush fruits does not need lime except when unusually sour or for the production of legumes for cover crops. The strawberry is very tolerant of soil acidity. It is generally conceded that lime should be applied to the land following potatoes, rather than just previous because the potato scab producing organisms thrive in a sweet soil.

The vegetables not sensitive to acid soils are watermelon, radish, squash, turnip, potato and parley.
The vegetables slightly sensitive to acid soils are corn, rhubarb, endive, Brussels sprouts and beans.
The vegetables moderately sensitive to acid soils are carrots, tomatoes, cumpers, pepper, cabbage, peppercorns and peas. The vegetables highly sensitive to acid soils are cauliflower, muskmelon, parsnips, eggplant, asparagus, onion, beets, celery, spinach and lettuce.

Finely ground limestone is more profitable than coarse. Marl and sugar beet refuse lime, where available, are usually profitable forms of lime to use. If one is unable to purchase a carload of lime or cannot do so jointly with his neighbor or neighbors, and is too far away from marl to obtain this material cheaply, it may be advisable to use hydrated lime.

The Historical Pageant

June 13th has been set for the Historical Pageant and County Historical Day. It will also be the Eighth Grade Commencement and we hope that every boy and girl who is entitled to an eighth grade diploma will be there to receive it.

We are planning to have this an open-air affair and the faculty of Hillsdale College have invited us to come to the College Campus for our exercises. We hope every teacher will cooperate in making this a success and want every school to have a part in it. Those who do not take part in the Pageant are requested to send floats suggesting some Historical or Patriotic idea. Prizes of twenty and ten dollars will be given to the best floats (which will come from the rural schools only).

Every school that takes part in the Pageant or sends a float will be presented with a Michigan flag, and I hope to find one of these flags displayed in every one-room school next year.

There will be a basket picnic-dinner, a parade of the floats from the Fair Grounds to the College Campus where the Pageant will be given, followed by addresses and presentation of diplomas.

The people of Hillsdale and faculty of the College are expressing a great interest in the boys and girls of the rural schools and extend to all a cordial invitation to be here June 13, and I feel sure you will receive a hearty welcome.

I am also glad to take this opportunity to extend to all patrons of the Hillsdale County schools a cordial invitation to be present on that occasion.

Our Dignified Law Makers

The other day a party of newspaper men from Detroit, visited the Capitol at Lansing and if what these gentlemen say is true, sessions of the Senate and the House must be conducted considerably like the old "deestrick skule". During the consideration of important bills the legislators threw paper wads at each other, they also used a rubber ball to pelt speakers on the floor, and the whole business was taken as a regular occurrence. The news paper naively remarks "There are some good men in the House but they were seldom in evidence that day."

Death of Prominent Michigan General

Taps have sounded for Brigadier General Frank Baldwin, his death occurring at Denver, Colorado, April 22, at the ripe old age of 81 years. He was born June 16 at Manchester, Mich. and at the youthful age of 19 years joined the Union army of the Civil war. In less than three years time he had risen to the rank of Captain and received a medal from Congress for conspicuous bravery at the battle of Peach Tree Creek, Georgia which took place June 10, 1864. In 1865 he was mustered out of service with the rank of Lieut. Colonel at the age of 22 years. He then entered the regular army, as a lieutenant and soon rose to the rank of Captain. During the Indian wars that followed he distinguished himself in many battles soon becoming Major-General. In the Spanish war he served in the Philippines where he succeeded in wounding the natives in a desperate battle on the island of Mindanao in which 300 Filipinos were killed, only 30 of them escaping to tell the story. Other skirmishes marked his career in the islands and Congress promoted him to the rank of Brigadier-General, which he has since held in the United States army. Before his retirement he was Department Commander of Colorado. It is said of Brigadier Baldwin that he won the largest number of medals and citations for bravery in service of any living officer. He should rank with Captain Griddle of Manila fame.

Notwithstanding the Chinese nation is the oldest and most substantial of those who know mechanical arts, yet there is practically no window glass used in the interior of the country but in its stead they utilize a thin kind of paper which is oiled and rendered both transparent and waterproof. Some glass is shipped to China from this country but very little of it ever finds its way into the densely inhabited interior. Likewise the interior farmer used a crooked stick for a plow for his rice fields and usually it is drawn by an ox or sometimes his wife.

About 100,000 people in France are partly dependent on the making of hand-made lace for a livelihood, says Commercial Attache C. L. Jones. The development of machine-made lace, with increasing similarity to the hand-made article, he states, has created competition with the historical industry and it is difficult to meet. A part of this competition results from incomplete protection from fraud, there being no law requiring that machine-made lace be plainly marked as such, and the historical industry finds it so clever that even dealers have difficulty in detecting them. The hand-made lace interests are asking the passage of a law requiring that all mechanically made lace be marked with a card or tag on which "machine-made lace" shall appear.

The Hillsdale Daily says in a recent editorial that the people are demanding that the high priced roads be built right along, the same as in the past. This depends upon who the people are.

Lewis Wright and son of Kalamazoo spent a few hours in North Adams and attended church on Sunday. He reports his sister Mary Wright Johnson of Hillsdale as quite seriously-afflicted with rheumatism.

The season is at hand when the annual clean-up is in order. Old rubbish which is the accumulation of years should be taken away and lots cleared for action. All leaves etc. should be burned, and if possible on the garden or some plot that is to be planted, as the ashes certainly help the soil.

You will notice we have published some of Pastor Russell's stuff in this issue, not because we believe in Russellism but because we don't wish to appear narrow. There are creeds and creeds and Russellism has followers in this village and the surrounding country. Russell sets forth his side of the spiritual question and we don't want the Advocate called narrow. As for ourselves the good old fashioned gospel from the Methodist standpoint, is well enough, and we never have cared for anything different. Had we been born a Catholic or a Russellite we should so remain.

Notwithstanding the rain on Monday evening twenty-one from this vicinity went to Hillsdale to hear the address which was to have been given by Bishop Oldham of South America. Imagine their disappointment when Rev. Harry Henry announced he had received word from Chicago that the Bishop had met with an accident and broken his collar bone therefore a management had substituted a young preacher. Mr. Rugg, Rev. Paul Rugg preached a splendid sermon but he could hardly be expected to fill the appointment. The men's chorus under direction of Rev. Nixon of Jonesville, rendered some very creditable vocal work. Rev. Ford of this place pronounced the invocation.

The resort season of southern Michigan at our local lakes promises to be of more than passing interest this summer. All through the chain of lakes on the territorial road including Long Lake, Sand Lake, Wampplers Lake, Evans Lake, Vandercook Lake, Round Lake and a lot of others, decided improvements are being made, and water frontage is selling at good prices. Cottages are going up at all these places. George Durgo and Robert Greenshaw at Farewell are adding to their cottages. The Van Schoic properties at Round Lake are being improved and several houses put up. Hayes Wheel Co. have bought frontage on Round Lake and will erect a summer hotel. All through the Irish Hills region activity is noticeable. Parties from Jackson and Detroit are pushing real estate adjoining Pleasant Lake north east of Somerset Centre and so it goes. Southern Michigan as a resort section is gaining notoriety all over the north central states.

by Zane Grey

OUT under the wonderful western stars, near the turbulent Mexican border of the present day, most of the action in this thrilling story takes place.

While replete with the atmosphere, romance, exciting events and human elements so characteristic of its author's work, it strikes a note that is different from the average of western fiction; indeed, it is quite different from any of Zane Grey's other stories and has been acclaimed in various quarters as the best he has yet written.

TROUBLE IS OVER, STATES FOREMAN

Declares Tanlac Ended Long Sweep of Rheumatism.

"Tanalac gave me such quick and splendid results that it has made a lifetime friend of me," says Edward F. Stelner, 1744 2nd St., N. E., Canton, Ohio, foreman for the Gilliam Mfg. Co. "I was experiencing my first attack of rheumatism, and it ached and pained me all over, but was especially bad in the shoulders and muscles of my legs. This had me crippled and lying around, and suffering and worrying to beat the band."

"The Tanlac treatment did a quick job. A course of three bottles drove out every ache and pain, and the muscles were as free as they ever were. Besides, Tanlac has given me a good appetite and digestion and plenty of strength and energy. I always recommend it in the highest terms."

Tanalac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 87 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Chinese Take to Frozen Meat.
Argentina is giving Australia a run for her money in supplying China and the Far East with frozen meat. While the Chinese have in the past preferred the taste and smell of fresh-killed meat, they are gradually being educated to eat the frozen variety, says Consul General Thomas Sammons, Melbourne, in a report just received by the Department of Commerce, and there is a general belief that they will ultimately become accustomed to using frozen meat freely. On the other hand, Australian butter is selling well in China and Japan, while canned fruits and jams from the island continent are being taken in increasing quantities.

Wrap-Around Coat-Frocks;

Ultra-Chic Knitted Frocks

A STYLE idea which occupies a conspicuous niche in Fashion's hall of fame is the wrap-around coat-dress. Styled of the most elegant materials, with enrichment of embroidery, braiding and color superb, the spirit of luxury fairly radiates from this handsome garment.

Among other of its winning qualities, the wrap-around street dress has the gift of slenderizing the figure, for point of serving the season through, but when it comes to this, they answer to the cupies of the moment. In the collection of fashionable bonnet ideas presented, the lace draped model is of oriental influence. There is no lessening of interest in lace, rather is it that lace appears in a more impressive way. Tiny straw hats now bear long lace scarfs attached the straight, slim silhouette is its characteristic feature. Add to this that it is a frock ready at the moment to slip on, void of complicated fastenings, just a mere tying or buckling to one side and one readily understands why this garment is so popular.

Model in Lightweight Duvelty.

The model in the picture is lightweight duvelty, a fabric which has made its reappearance this season. The upper portion is elaborately designed with gray braid. The squirrel collar is detachable.

In many instances the straight coat-dress is entirely all-over-braided in self-color. This type is built along with a pin or a cord of two edges. Another charming item is ruche ribbon, which is a very narrow strip in rainbow colorings. It is this dainty ribbon which is shirred and twisted into curls on the close-fitting bonnet to the left, until the entire shape looks as if it were made of crinkled silk.

Oriental colorings are everywhere present in millinery and especially are they featured in printed silks such as are used to drape across the front of the helmet-shaped hat to the right, which is topped with genuine haircloth. A tiara brim with Egyptian motif is simplest possible lines, departing from severity only when it comes to the huge ribbon tie at the left front hipline.

Every type and mood millinery responds most graciously this season. There are no arbitrary rules. Becomingness is the watchword. When one comes to think of it one's hat is wonderfully expressive of its wearer. Our coats and dresses we take as a matter of fact bought from the stand-carried out with a fancy silk straw braid in the model to the left. The little hat with rolled rim is covered with maize colored chenille cloth and a golden yellow plums with deep green foliage.

HOMEMADE SPATS

The material for a pair of spats costs very little and with one ready-made pair for a model it was not difficult to spot the family and the high cost of leather at the same time. Straps of the heavy cloth used for men's clothing can sometimes be secured from the tailors and they make excellent garters. Or the broadcloth from a worn suit or coat will answer the purpose just as well and even more economically.

NEW SHOULDER KNOTS

Many of the smart dressmakers in Paris are introducing a new variation of the silver blouse and dress which eliminates the little slash down the back. They are introducing the slash on one or both shoulders, which are tied up with perky ribbons. This new treatment offers unlimited opportunities for introducing new fashion touches. The change from a tailors ribbon to a dressy ribbon rosette will transform the costume.

Roman Remains in Britain.

Excavating for the foundation of a new factory to be erected at Keston, near Bristol, England, workmen recently unearthed Roman remains. The Daily Chronicle of London reports the discovery of coins containing skeletons, a Roman needle about six inches long, a spoon and a brooch. The brooch is believed to have put the finishing touch upon the toga of a Roman gallant.

HOUSES SPOILED HER SOLO

Impression Made by Young Songstress Quite Different From the One Intended.

I was spending the week-end with a friend of my mother's, who lived with her neighbor on a large country estate. I was taking vocal lessons and took myself quite seriously.

The morning after my arrival, seeing my host on the vicinity of the stables, I decked myself in my best bib and tucker and sauntered to the garden, accompanied by two big hounds. From the corner of a watchful eye I saw my audience approaching, and I burst forth in my most wonderful soprano. Simultaneously the hounds lifted their faces to heaven, even as I, and joined me in a most hideous cry.

My sense of humor came to my rescue, and I joined the master in his laughter, but I could have cried much more easily.—Chicago Tribune.

Harsh Criticism.

Senator Ashurst of New Mexico tells this story:

"The best story I know of is on my mind. It happened several years ago, when I was making a speech in a little town in New Mexico and the crowd, of course, was made up of women as well as men. Up in the front row was an old lady, and I noticed her following intently every word I said.

"I launched into a defense of my policies, and, naturally, made the pledges I might be expected to make in the political campaign. Along toward the end of the speech, the old lady in front got up and started to leave.

"Sweetened wind," was all she said as she stalked out. The crowd roared."—New York Herald.

Protecting Alaskan Game.

New regulations for the protection of game in certain localities in Alaska have been approved by the secretary of agriculture, effective April 1, 1923. The only important change made was that eliminating certain islands in southeastern Alaska on which the killing of deer was prohibited in the past. Kruzof island, however, is still retained as a deer preserve. The killing of mountain sheep and mountain goats in the eastern part of the Kenai peninsula is prohibited until April 1, 1925. There still remains a closed season on deer west of longitude 141 degrees.

98 OUT OF EVERY 100 WOMEN BENEFITED

An Absolutely Reliable Statement Important to Every Woman

Remarkable Results Shown by a Nation Wide Canvass of Women Purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. 50,000 Women Answer

For some time a circular has been enclosed with each bottle of our medicine bearing this question: "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

Reply, to date, have been received from over 50,000 women answering that question.

98 per cent of which say YES. That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take the medicine for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This is a most remarkable record of efficiency. We doubt if any other medicine in the world equals it.

Think of it—only two women out of 100 received no benefit—98 successes out of a possible 100.

Did you ever hear anything like it? We must admit that we, ourselves, are astonished.

Such evidence should induce every woman suffering from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see if she can't be one of the 98. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Of course we know that our medicine does benefit the large majority of women who take it. But that only two out of 100 received no benefit is most astonishing.

It only goes to prove, however, that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure-all—one that is made by the most scientific process; not from drugs, but from a combination of nature's roots and herbs, can and does more good than hastily prepared prescriptions.

You see, we have been making, improving and refining this medicine for over 60 years until it is so perfect and so well adapted to women's needs that it actually has the virtue to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who take it.

Its reliability and recognized efficiency has made it for it a sale in almost every country in the world—leading all others.

WHY DRUGGISTS RECOMMEND SWAMP-ROOT

For many years druggists have watched with much interest the remarkable record maintained by Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder medicine.

Swamp-Root has stood the test of years. It is sold by all druggists on its merit and it should help you. No other kidney medicine has many friends.

Be sure to get Swamp-Root and start treatment at once.

An Appeal Suggested.

The eminent lawyer came back from court in something of a buff. There had been some row with the judge. Upon entering his office the attorney took up his brief, rushed to the big dictionary and began a search. Finally he turned to his partner.

"The latter awaited developments. "The dictionary," stated the eminent lawyer solemnly, "disagrees with my opinion of the word."

"In that case," suggested the equally eminent colleague, "take an appeal to the encyclopedia."—From the Green Bag.

Another Early One.

The wild ginger has large, broad heart-shaped leaves which are most conspicuous objects on the rocky hillsides in early April, says Nature Magazine. Their thick stems rise some six or ten inches above the ground, but the dull, purple, cup-shaped blossoms must be searched for at the roots, well hidden among the dead leaves.

QUITE A "PROMINENT FELLER"

Fact That "A Lover" Was Very Much in Evidence in Paris Impressed Jay Gould.

Mrs. Barton French, who had taken a villa on the sea near Monte Carlo for the winter, said at a dinner party: "We Americans are poor linguists as a rule. I remember a story that Lord Dunsen once told me about Jay Gould."

"Jay Gould was visiting Paris, and Lord Dunsen devoted a day to driving him over the city. They happened to be in a good many apartments to let at the time, and to let signs—A Lover—were stuck up everywhere. Jay Gould didn't seem to notice the Arc de Triomphe, or Notre Dame, or anything. A queer, silent chap, Lord Dunsen said."

"But at the end of the day's sight-seeing Mr. Gould displayed a little interest at last."

"Who's this here A. Lover, Mr. Dunsen?" he said. "Seems a pretty prominent fellow."

Why divide the family at breakfast?

WHY take coffee for yourself, while saying "No" to the children? It is true, as most parents are careful to explain, that little folks should not endanger health and growth through the drug element in coffee and tea, but—

Your health is valuable, too—and their desire for a hot drink with breakfast may be as great as yours.

Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either is about one-half cent a cup.

There's complete satisfaction in Postum, and safety alike for young and old. Postum is a pure cereal beverage. It is coffee-like in color and flavor, but free from any element that can harm. Thousands who are now saying "No" to themselves as well as to the children, as a safeguard against colic, have found better comfort and better health in Postum.

Real American Story By Typical American

The Light of Western Stars

By Zane Grey

THE color of the Southwest, the exhilarating freedom of wide and adventure-filled spaces, dangers of border life, and the lure of woman's beauty.

Zane Grey has done nothing in this story to imperil the popularity he has gained as a talented exponent of the romance, charm and vivacity of western fiction; on the other hand, he has done much in this tale to increase that popularity.

As an American story it is all that could be desired; as a western story it is second to no other.

Night Officer Slain

William Kemp of Hillsdale Murdered by a Crook

Around 11:00 Tuesday evening a crook drove into Hillsdale from Reading and gassed his auto at the Bentz Brothers' garage. About that time Night Watchman Kemp appeared on the scene and arrested the stranger. It seems that the crook had been at Reading where he held up and robbed a fruit store proprietor and Sheriff Bates had been sent for, but arriving at Reading, failed to locate the bandit, and surmising he was headed for Hillsdale, the Sheriff telephoned Policeman Kemp to be on the lookout, with the above result.

Kemp took the fellow in custody without the formality of searching him, something very unusual, and later paid the penalty with his life. On the way to jail while walking south, about east of the courthouse the desperado suddenly pulled a gun and shot the officer through the head killing Kemp instantly. He then ran rapidly down Broad Street to the garage, obtained his car and drove away up McCollum street, going within a few hundred feet from the scene of the murder, and passed out of the city south. Albert Bentz chased the robber with his Ford but soon fell behind as the robber was driving a high powered Stutz, Sheriff Bates at once got in communication with the officers at Fort Wayne Indiana, and learned a doctor's car had been stolen there and later he received word that a man answering the description had been picked up. Twenty-four hours after the murder, the culprit was landed inside the county jail. Excitement ran high and threats of lynching could be heard. The murderer gives the name of Loren Galloway and age as 22. He at one time was a resident of Hillsdale and is supposed to have relatives there. The officers were much amazed at the youthful appearance and slight boyish build of the man, as they had believed they were on the trail of a far more mature and hardened criminal.

Great sympathy is expressed for the family of the murdered officer, a subscription having already been made for them.

Examination of the prisoner is set for an early date.

The House Files Work

Many of you who read about the methods taken to destroy the flies are apt to think it silly in the extreme that so much ado should be made concerning a common insect which has been with us since the beginning of man and will be with us when man is no more, but as science makes new discoveries, it becomes more evident every day that much of the misery and sickness of this world could be prevented by curbing these insect pests.

We are publishing the biography of a fly for the benefit of those who think it a necessary evil.

"She was now fairly launched upon a life that was to last from six to eight weeks, during which, she spent the greater part of each day feeding upon filth, however, she found time to visit many places.

One day she discovered a splotch of spit upon the side walk. It was fresh from a tuberculosis person and loaded with the germs of that disease, but it was very attractive to her. She slipped it with great gusto. She waded through it. Her sticky feet and hairy legs were coated with its slime. Then, attracted by the odor of fruit on the stand at the corner of the street, she advanced her front and hurried away to gratify her appetite for sweets. As she walked over a bright red apple, hunting for a broken spot in the skin, she left a trail of germs of tuberculosis that it would number hundreds of thousands, and this was just before the lady bought the apple and gave it to her little daughter.

Another time, after a refreshing meal from the privy vault, she flew in the nursery window and found a most delicious dessert. It was from the nipple of the baby's nursing bottle. It was sweet and quite the opposite of dissolving the sugar, then sucked back the solution through her proboscis. Again and again she repeated this disgusting performance. What mattered it to her that her filthy crop contained thousands of Typhoid germs and that she was befouling the baby's nipple with the very "Seeds of Death."

She was a fly and that was her way. She walked across the baby's face and even kissed him upon the lips.

She used to make regular trips from the privy vault to the dining room, where her chief delight was to moisten the white shiny cubes of sugar, with the liquid contents of her crop and then suck up the sweetened mass. She was seldom able to get it all. Some of it would soak into the sugar beyond her reach. Sometimes she was disturbed and flew away leaving her vomit upon the sugar. Her expecta which she deposited about every five minutes almost always contained disease germs.

In all her life there never was a time when she did not have disease germs in her crop, on her body, her hairy legs, her sticky feet and her filthy proboscis.

Wherever she went she carried a hazard against human life. Typhoid fever followed in her wake, little babies sickened and died and communicable diseases multiplied.

During her life she found time to lay perhaps 300 eggs and having accomplished her full share of harm in the world, she died, leaving 300 children, 35,000 grand children and several million great grand children, each one equally as dangerous as its ancestor."

Uncle Sam Offers Booklets Free

A Government booklet called "How Other Peop Get Ahead" has been issued by the U. S. Treasury department. This booklet, designed particularly for persons with modest incomes, shows the necessity of exercising care in the management of resources, the beneficial effects of saving, how to differentiate between good and bad investments, the danger signs of fraudulent schemes, and the essentials of sound investment. "Why am I not as prosperous as my neighbor, whose income is less than mine is one question answered by the booklet. Copies may be obtained upon request to W. B. Bosworth, Government Savings Director, 230 So. LaSalle St., Chicago, Illinois.

A Symposium

It takes a horse to draw a wagon, an artist to draw a picture, a good looking girl to draw remarks, a free lunch to draw a crowd and it takes people's money to run the Advocate.

Signs

There are many things that are called signs. Some signs signify more than others. The signs that signify the most are those that we see on the side of the street and all along the roads in the country. They advertise—soda-fountain coughdrops and soda-fountain drinks to typewriters and automobiles.

Then there are signs that say "Keep Out" "No Admittance" and so forth. None of them mean what they say, and many of them are broken. The one most seen and most broken is the sign "No Smoking." No one ever takes any notice of the sign "Please Keep Out the Grass."

But people are always careful when they see the sign "Government Property—Keep Out." There are signs for autos such as "Don't Park Here," "Dangerous Curve" and "Go Slow" but none of them mean anything.

A diamond ring on a girl's finger is usually a sign that she is engaged.

A man walking along a country road with a gun and a dog usually signifies that he is going hunting. If a man wears a baseball uniform and carries a baseball mitt it usually is a sign that he is a baseball player.

Some signs you can believe and others you can't. One that you can always believe is the sign "The Advocate," a good advertising medium because signs indicate that people read it.

Basic Rules Govern Potato Production

More profitable potato production in Michigan hinges upon observance of a few basic principles in the handling of the crop, according to J. Weston, extension specialist with the M. A. C. crop department. A "boiled down" set of rules, covering the most fundamental points, has been prepared by Weston.

First—Use certified seed, which is selected from hills producing a large number of good type, marketable, free from diseases.

Second—Prepare the seed bed properly. Having the best of the limiting factors in securing large yields of potatoes. Moisture is controlled largely by the organic content properly incorporated. This regulates heat, because it takes as much heat to raise a pound of water one degree as it does five pounds of soil. Practice level cultivation. Cultivate deep when plants are small, then a shallow or mulch cultivation is best when feeder roots are developed.

Third—Treat all seed with corrosive sublimate. Black scurf, scab and organisms that cause black leg wilt or blight may be on the outside of the healthy potato and carry over to new fields on the seed. This would result in an uneven stand, later infection, decreased yield, or actual loss. Seed treatment is "safety first" insurance. Cut seed should be kept cool, in shallow piles or crates, so as to prevent drying, rotting, or heating.

Fourth—Spray with Bordeaux mixture plus arsenate poisoning for potato bugs. By applying Bordeaux at a pressure of 175 to 200 pounds, with three nozzles to the row, at 100 to 150 gallons per acre, the potato plant is given a "copper armor" that fully protects it against the leaf hopper and flea beetle injury, as well as against any of the fungus diseases. Thorough spraying is necessary if one expects to grow early potatoes successfully.

Care Given Sow Sets Little Pigs Health

That a little pig's chances for a successful start in life are determined largely by the feeding and general care of the sow before the litter is born is shown by records on spring pigs this year in connection with the Michigan Ton Litter contest, fostered by the Michigan Agricultural College.

The unusually cold weather during March and the first part of April is being blamed for heavy losses of young pigs this year," says V. A. Freeman of the college staff in commenting on the situation. "This condition is true not only in Michigan but also throughout the entire corn belt. While the cold weather did have a great influence the fact remains that many farmers raised litters of good average size in spite of the weather, an indication that other factors affected the condition of the pigs at farrowing time.

There have been plenty of illustrations this spring to show that the sow which was fed on a well balanced ration and got plenty of exercise had a far better chance of producing a litter of healthy young pigs, able to make a strong start, than did the sow that received a heavy fattening ration, went short on exercise, and was handled poorly in other ways.

Proper feeding is ineffective without good housing, management so that the sows are required to exercise every day, and proper attention at farrowing time, but with such weather as predominated throughout most of the farrowing time in the state, strong vitality at birth was a big factor in reducing losses of young pigs. In combination with corn, rye, or barley for the main winter feed, supplementary amounts of alfalfa hay, skimmed milk, tankage, or other sources of protein and minerals proved their value in feeding brood sows this spring."

Warm endorsement of the Michigan Health Exposition

Warm endorsement of the Michigan Health Exposition which will be held in the General Motor Building, from June 7th to 16, inclusive, was received by Dr. Wm. M. Donald, its president, today from Dr. R. M. Olin, Michigan Commissioner of health and from Alfredo Serratos, Mexican consul in Detroit.

Dr. Olin telegraphed Dr. Donald

as follows: "The state department of health assures the officers of the Michigan health exposition that we will extend to them all the assistance possible to make it the biggest and best health education meeting ever held in America. You can count on us to do everything in our power to help put it over."

Leading pens in the contest are closely grouped, with the exception of the first place birds. The ten white leghorns performing under the colors of E. E. Shaw, of South Haven, boast a six months' mark of 1,120 eggs, or high honors. Northland Farm, Grand Rapids, with a Leghorn pen showing 993 eggs; and O. S. Thompson, of Allen, whose Leghorns have produced 966 eggs hold down second and third places.

Plymouth Rocks entered by the Bruinier Poultry Farm of Holland, Michigan, top their breed and stand fourth in the whole contest, while the first place is held by a pen of Wyandottes, carrying the name of the Evergreen Poultry Farm, Greenville.

One of Mr. Shaw's Leghorns leads among individuals with 142 eggs for the first six months of the run.

Spray Dollar Earns Big Potato Interest

With an increased yield of eighty bushels of potatoes to the acre as a result of treating the seed with corrosive sublimate, Clint Lehman, of Mason County, holds a near-record for cheap potato production in the state last year, according to county agricultural agent, K. H. Bemis.

It cost Lehman about a dollar an acre to treat his seed, and at this rate the eighty bushel yield increase cost but little more than a cent a bushel, plus, of course, the small amount of time required in the process.

Lehman planted five bushels of certified seed last spring, half of which was treated with corrosive sublimate to prevent the black scurf disease. The quarter acre which was not treated yielded 37 bushels; the quarter acre which was treated yielded 88 bushels at the rate of more than eighty bushels increase to the acre. This Mason county farmer at least will treat all his seed potatoes this year.

Prohibition in Congress

Charles H. Randall, ex-Congressman, more than any other person, was responsible for the passage in Congress of the measure placing the 18th Amendment before the states for approval. He secured the passage in the House of the "Reed Ione Dry" law. He has a record as a consistent, courageous advocate of prohibition, so his warning contained in an article in World Today is worth deep consideration. Read and digest this:

"Individuals as members of Congress amount to little, so far as shaping and presentation of measures in the House of Representatives goes. This is particularly true of members who are partisan, as distinguished from independent members, the latter being free from the dictation of party leaders who furnish 'program' to the purely party members.

"Every one is aware that the business of Congress is performed in committees. It is pretty well known that the speaker, the floor leader of the dominant party, and the chairman of the committee on rules absolutely control the procedure in the House of Representatives. Nothing can get the House except by their consent. In addition, the matter which it is desired to have adopted by Congress must first have favorable action by a committee.

"There are fifty-seven standing committees in the House. All proposals relating to prohibition are referred to one of these committees, the judiciary committee.

"Therefore, to favor a prohibition enactment favorably acted upon by the House of Representatives, it must first be approved by this committee and then it must run the gauntlet of the rules committee and the floor leader, who is the program maker for that body. The speaker is not so important if there is smooth sailing up to this point.

"Now then, what happened to prohibition in the last election of House of Representatives? Simply this, the drys lost everything. I say when you have lost leadership in Congress you have lost everything.

"We did not lose the Speaker, for we were wet before. But we lost the floor leader, the program maker. He was Mondell, dry, now he will be Nicholas Longworth, very wet.

"We lost a chairman of the powerful rules committee. He was Campbell of Kansas, dry, now he is Snell of New York, very wet.

"We lost the chairman of the judiciary committee, where prohibition acts have first consideration when introduced. He was Volstead, dry, now he will be Graham of Philadelphia, very wet, and a keen and resourceful lawyer and parliamentarian. He is a dangerous enemy of our cause.

"So you can see the drys are at sea in a leaky boat with a wet crew in the engine-room and on the bridge. It is not a pleasing prospect."

This is not an alarmist report. It is an analysis of a political situation that needs to be watched. If the public speaks its mind loud enough, even the "wet" leaders will hear the voice.—Christian Herald.

University Students buy Magazines Freely

"University students buy more magazines than any other single class of readers in Ann Arbor," says Mr. Brown of Brown Bookstore, on South Main Street, who keeps one of the largest magazine assortments in the city and constant tab on the tastes of the reading public.

"Shop clerks are the second largest group, and though I sell many magazines to other people, the students and shop clerks buy the most," he continued.

When asked what magazine sold the best he unhesitatingly replied:

"The Red Book. I sell two hundred and fifty copies every month and they usually are gone long before the next issue is out. The American Magazine is my next best seller and the Cosmopolitan is third."

A question as to what caused taste for this kind of reading matter elicited the following reply:

"Relaxation. They get fagged out from studying deep subjects during school hours and this loosens up their minds again."

OUT under the wonderful western stars, near the turbulent Mexican border of the present day, most of the action in this thrilling story takes place.

While replete with the atmosphere, romance, exciting events and human elements so characteristic of its author's work, it strikes a note that is different from the average of western fiction; indeed, it is quite different from any of Zane Grey's other stories and has been acclaimed in various quarters as the best he has yet written.

Women Blaming that Grocer is not to Blame for Sugar Gouge

Agitation against the indefensible price of sugar—especially the campaign being waged by women—is helping to exonerate the grocer from any part in the orgy of profiteering that has already taken nearly $100,000,000 from the pockets of consumers. Housewives are learning through their investigations and the information that is coming to them that the Sugar Barons give the grocer and small dealer very little margin of profit in selling their wares. The proceeds of the "gouge" go almost wholly to the Sugar Barons.

The women of the country are learning that the duty on sugar accounts for about 2.07 cents of the average price of 10 cents a pound, for which it is sold in the groceries. The retailer is not to blame for the tariff nor the pyramiding of the duty by the refiners, brokers, and wholesalers. For the most part the retail grocer sells his sugar practically at cost, when the time he spends and the bags' band twine he uses in wrapping it are taken into account.

Collins & Durga have the old Travis Blacksmith shop nearly filled with wool, this season's clip. Wool is well up in price this season and the prospects are good for clothing to be much higher next fall.

This firm report the best batch of wool received from E. A. Bauman. We looked at this and will say that it is the longest fibre we have seen.

The K-K oil well, five miles north east of this village, was pumped last Sunday and the prospects are good for financial success. Fifteen barrels of crude oil were pumped in few minutes, the flow shooting into the air several feet above the pump. The Jackson well, a few rods west, that has been bored to a depth of over 2,000 feet, and is owned by Jackson business men, will soon be torped and pumped—Blissfield Advance.

At last North Adams is going to have a system of public parks. We are glad to chronicle the fact that this week the village has graded down the old Russ lot, west of the Advocate office with the intention of making a beautiful green lawn and later a splendid park. The municipality of the village is to be congratulated upon such matters as a nice cool park right in the heart of any town is a very desirable thing. If we could realize what the villages of the old world have done in such matters in places where they have beautiful Commons, no one would begrudge the small amount of taxes necessary to maintain such parks. We like to believe North Adams officials are among the most progressive in such matters.

Miss Marjorie Hayhoe closed a very successful term of school in the Mud Lake district last Friday, with exercises and a picnic at the lake. She has been engaged to teach next year at the same place.

William Fuller of Napoleon, Jackson county, was here to spend Decoration day. He is an uncle of Elmer Fuller and is 82 years of age. He was a member of the Old 4th Michigan Infantry in the Civil war.

Mrs. Alvin Parish and daughter, Velma, and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Reed of Detroit visited over Sunday with relatives here. All returned home except Mrs. Reed who is visiting her parents, the Swartwouts for a few days.

The W. C. T. U. will be entertained by Mrs. Harriet Kempton Friday, June 8 at 2:00 p. m. The topic is "Medical Temperance and Anti-Narcotics" and the leader Ethel Clement. Roll call Flower Mission and Relief Incidents. All interested in our work are invited.

In days past we used to hear of pike planted in the local water but it has been years since a fish of any size has been taken from Mud lake. It remained for Geo. Vreeland to redeem this record which he did on Monday by taking two of the largest pike, weighing respectively 14 1/2 and 15 1/2 pounds. Some fish, we should say. General opinion is that this lake is well stocked with big fellows but they are pretty shy.

Graduation days are at hand nearly, and it is with glad joyous feeling we welcome them because at this particular season of the year (which is altogether too short) everything has the balmy smell of spring airs and the invigorating smell of blossoming fruit trees and flowers. The Seniors of our High schools and colleges look forward with pleasure but backward with regrets. It means a separation from companions which in some instances is final. Each must go his or her way, and the graduation period is one of the main turning points in careers.

New Street Work.

Operations were begun Tuesday on the new main street road which is to be constructed through the entire corporation of the town. A large steam shovel is in use to tear up the surface dirt. A. J. Hoffman has the contract. Work will be pushed right through to completion and gravel will be brought from the Fry pit 4 miles east of North Adams.

Memorial Day Program

Memorial Day in North Adams was well observed and the propitious weather made the day a success. During the forenoon hundreds visited the local cemetery and carried flowers, and at 2:30 a fine program of music and speaking was carried out. Pupils of the High school furnished the entertainment and the speech of the day was given by Rev. E. A. S. Allen of the Congregational church. "The Thin Blue Line" has diminished very rapidly in the past few years and only six of the old veterans were in attendance. Levi Rickard, Hiram Cole, J. S. Blackmer, Geo. Taylor, Lucius Corbett and William Fuller of Napoleon.

One good thing was accomplished this year; the grave of every soldier of all wars was charted so that in years to come there will be no guess work. In all 69 graves were located including one soldier of the War of 1812, and three of the World war.

Drew Yet Bureau

Up to date the U. S. Veterans' Bureau has received the applications of 171,059 men who have declared themselves incalculably active by reason of their services in the World War. Out of this number the bureau has cleared up 15,000 men who are eligible for vocational training under the U. S. Veterans' Bureau Act 323,340. The total number of men put into training up to the present time is 159,764. There are in training today 93,019. These 93,016 trainees are divided up as follows: 47,887 are in institutional training, that is, in universities, colleges and schools, other than strictly Bureau schools; 35,733 are in placement training, that is, "training on the job," in industry; 4,913 are in schools operated by the bureau; 4,236 are pursuing correspondence school instruction; and 170 are receiving tutorial instruction.

The United States Government is trying, through the Vocational Rehabilitation Act of Congress, to discharge in a more efficient fashion its obligations to the veterans who were in some way injured by reason of their service in the war so that they could not carry on profitably in their pre-war occupation. It also recognizes the fact that if these men are given suitable vocational training they will become productive factors in the country's up-building rather than governmental dependents. In inducting these men into training an earnest endeavor is made by the bureau to so weigh their capacities and incapacities that they will be able to obtain a length of time, through their training, to equip themselves for carrying on in a normal and competitive way with others engaged in the occupation for which they are being trained.

The training that these men get is, so far as the bureau can determine, of the very highest grade available. The very best universities, colleges and schools of the country are utilized for all of those who are desirous of attending them, and who at the same time, are capable of profitably pursuing courses in them. For special cases the bureau has seen fit to set up special schools wherein instruction could be particularly fashioned to suit the particular needs of the students sent to them.

As stated in the aforementioned statistics, 35,733 men are in placement training, or "training on the job," in thousands of factories, shops, on the farms, and scattered over every state in the United States.

The U. S. Veterans' Bureau has rehabilitated, up to the present date, 30,647 of these men, practically all of whom are now "carrying on" in employment, in line with their course of training. That the training which these men have received is wise training, and that these men are now carrying on profitably for themselves, profitably for industry, and profitably for the country as a whole, is evidenced by the fact that all the statistics available in the Central Office at Washington and in various District offices where concrete studies have been made of the economic status of the men following their rehabilitation by the bureau, show that these rehabilitated veterans are receiving remuneration for their work to the amount of at least 20 per cent in excess of their pre-war income. In other words, the handicap received by these men in the war has been overcome by reason of the efforts put forth in connection with their rehabilitation through the Veterans' Bureau. In addition, their earning power already shows an increase of 20 per cent. It is more than fair to presume that the percentage of gain in income will increase as the years go by.

Therefore, the Government has, in the main, done its work well. It is true that in some cases it has failed. These failures have appeared large, naturally, in the minds of those particularly affected by these failures. Due to the Country's commendable interest of the cases of each and every one of these veterans a ready ear has been given to their complaints. Due to the too ready inclination of some people to seize upon the "exceptional case to prove the rule" it is safe to say that great injustice has been done the country as a whole and its duly organized Government in making it appear that it has not carried on ably, wisely and sympathetically in the way of attempting to rehabilitate its obligation to those in whom it has such a deep interest.

The Government is now at the point in its work with these men where it must necessarily call up on industry and the people at large to take up the burden, or the privilege, as they see it, in connection with further obligations to these men. Many thousands of these men are being rehabilitated or made ready for employment, during the next few months. It is the earnest desire of the Government to rehabilitate all of the men as soon as possible. At the same time it is the desire of the Government to rehabilitate them wisely and well, so they will be able to carry on profitably for themselves and for industry. So it is this trained and finished product of the rehabilitated man that the United States Government asks industry to employ.

He Explains Why

A farmer was asked Wednesday about conditions, as to the general complaint that farmers are not doing as well as they should.

"What is the matter with farmers and farmers?" We put in. "The automobile, that's what ails the farmer, if you want to know," he said.

"In the old days, there were two kinds of farmers, those who tended to their business and those who hung around the saloons. You could tell which was which by looking at their farms—or their children or their dogs."

"You can't run a farm without work. You have to be up early in the morning and to do that you have to be early to bed. Before we had automobiles the farmer would feel that his team was too tired to drive to town at night. Now he quits early, gets into his machine, and drives all over the belt and creation and doesn't feel like getting up in the morning."

"Henry Ford has us working for him. We mortgage our personal belongings to buy his machines, and howl for him for President, thinking he is going to get us something for nothing."

"It's fertilizer this and nitrates that, until you wonder where you are at."

"We have got too many contraptions on the farms and too many schemes making a rich living for themselves by making the farmers believe they are going to show them how to live without work."—Pipp's Weekly.

The great Eiffel Tower of Paris which has long been one of the wonders of the world is soon to come down as it is believed to be unsafe. The immense amount of steel in it will be utilized for building purposes in the war devastated regions of France where the most of the buildings were razed to the ground in great. 1,000 pound shells. For some years the vital interest in the Eiffel has waned and it has been useful principally for wireless telegraphy but now, at wireless receiver has been put up at Saint Assaise, which is better.

Ford Repudiates Wall Street

Wall Street money sharks are down and out at their own game, not long since the city of Detroit wanted the loan of a few thousands for improving the street car service. They found the Wall Street, New York crowd all ready to lend these dollars, but the interest was prodigious. Henry Ford calmly told the commonwealth of Detroit to go down to his strong box, and the result was one million five hundred thousand dollars loaned the city of Detroit at 4 per cent interest.

Now Wall Street is in a pickle, and Detroit has all the funds she needs. The only money power on this earth outside the great banking interests is Henry Ford. He has succeeded in raising $5 million more automobiles to raise another million with which to fleece Wall Street at their own game.

Roads are Nix

As a result of the row on between Governor Groesbeck and the state highway department all the work done by the common council in the past two years and the state department in drawing up the plans and specifications, fall by the wayside and Hillsdale will not get the proposed pavements on Bacon, Howell and Railroad Streets, but will have to get along with the old roads until some future day.

Mayor Hugh F. French of Hillsdale received a letter from State Highway Commissioner, Frank F. Rogers in which he announced the cancellation of the bids on the three highways owing to the critical financial condition of the department funds due to the attack by Governor Groesbeck.

Hillsdale, however, is not the only city to suffer for the announcement carries with it the cancellation of bids upon eighteen roads. The letter is a copy of one sent to paving contractors and reads as follows:

"To contractors who have bid on recent road projects:

In view of the continued uncertainty of highway finances, I find it necessary to reject all bids, which have been received on Trunk Line and Federal Aid construction. This includes the bids received on the following projects:

11-25 AB Oceana, 11 32 B Oceana 11-47 VanBuren, 13-38 Kalkaska, 13-39 Antrim, 27-16 A St. Clair, 11-12 Huron, 34-2 A St. Ignace, 63-1 B Lake, 34-6 Hillsdale, 42-1 A West, 64-1 Hillsdale, 65-6 A Monroe, 66-1 Missaukee, F. A. 52 C Kalamazoo, F. A. 61 A Charlevoix, F. A. 7 ABC Macomb, F. A. 118 Muskegon.

Yours very truly,
Frank F. Rogers,
State Highway Commissioner."

All this money will have to go back into the bank to await more favorable circumstances. Of course there is a wave of indignation all over the country directed at Governor Groesbeck. As the highway question was handled every tax payee in Hillsdale county had to help finance Hillsdale City's pavements. Naturally this kept the cost to the city down quite low, and now that they must pay the whole expense of course they can't stand it. The severe criticism to which Governor Groesbeck has been subjected will turn to admiration in our opinion because of these rabid kickers will hold their horses they will learn what it is in due season.

He's Afraid of Losing His Job

The latest dribble being sent out by men in the United States Congress is to the effect that General Leonard Wood is publishing articles in the Philippine newspapers calculated to place members of Congress in a questionable light before the country. Gen. Wood was appointed Philippine governor by Harding which is supposed to be a very desirable job. These political wire pullers evidently have some serious objections to the modus operandi of the office over there are taking the opportunity to roast Leonard Wood who in our opinion is one of the best officials at present connected with the Philippine job. Not so long ago we received a splendidly printed sheet sent out from Washington probably by these same propagandists, calling the attention of the masses to the need of freeing the islands from a (galling?) oppression which is exercised by America.

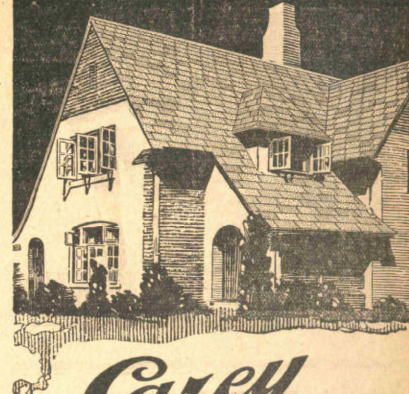

The article in question stated that American congressmen in Washington were receiving large bribes for trying to put the law over which would eventually free the islands. Coming from a Governor-General this statement would indict 435 Representatives and 96 Senators. This of course is getting personal and we can see why it cuts.

The article goes on to say: "Congress has a duty to perform in determining the motive for General Woods remarkable charges that Senators and Representatives have received in individual cases 'four figures' for their support of Philippine independence. But it should be remembered that 'seven figures' were contributed to 'Wood's' campaign three years ago or a thousand the alleged Philippine figure, so it appears by way of comparison that Senators and Representatives are merely pickers in the business, if Wood's statement is true instead of reckless slander. How many Senators or Representatives have received money for supporting Philippine independence? Why was one million dollars contributed toward Wood's independence campaign and for what ultimate purpose? The country is entitled to know.

Three years ago when the Wood campaign fund was being exposed, I was in the Philippines where a raid of alleged secret and open anti-Philippine independence propaganda by American hemp, tobacco, sugar, rubber, oil and regular army interests then, as now, drowned out all the alleged Philippine figure, so it is not surprising that the American residents then on the islands numbered less than 8,000 persons, whereas the Philippines were over one thousand times that number or about 10,500,000 according to the latest census. Thousands of these are cultured, highly educated, and able men and women.

Apart from the questionable fitness of military men to take a position, measured by such reckless utterances, the American people seem to have wished onto the Philippine people a modern Mussolini dictatorship that is opposed in every way to the views expressed by Dewey, McKinley, Taft, Roosevelt and Wilson and is against the public pledge given to Philipinos by the American Congress in the Jones law. The Philipinos have a greater provocation by far than the stamp tax which a century ago had formed the basis of our own struggle for independence.

Next session Congress must determine the facts regarding alleged efforts to force legislation on the Philipinos favorable to outside business interests; also whether independence solemnly made to Philipinos by Congress and by different presidents in the past have not been kept, and why General Wood, a prominent candidate for president three short years ago, now finds the hot tropics so attractive he cannot be pried loose from his job. Congress may well ascertain what part, if any, the persistent anti-Philippine independence propaganda plays in his residence there, and whether libelous charges against Senators and Representatives are made primarily to frighten them and thus prevent their support for independence measures."

Millions in It

"Buy at once; there are millions in it for the prompt investor. The quicker you invest the sooner you begin to receive your dividends." From advertisement in Metropolitan Daily News paper.

Your money is well invested, bringing you good returns in interest. You may receive an equally good return from the careful investment of your time, your talents—yourself.

You invested in the church for the benefit of your spiritual life, you invested in the home for returns in happiness, now comes the call to protect your home investment—the demand to justify your church investment by service to your community, your state your country. Let us open the way for you to this greatest of investments—yourself. We will put you in touch with those who have blazed the trail toward world service.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union is the great medium through which you can influence millions for good. It offers millions of opportunities for helpful service. Its service gives millions of satisfaction in return.

Invest yourself as carefully as you do your money. Study the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

Is it a reliable company? Most assuredly. It is perfectly organized, economically administered, every member a voting stockholder.

Is it new and untried? No. For almost half a century it has been a powerful and constantly growing concern.

Has it many friends? Yes. In the church, Congressional and legislative halls and among all movements for national and world uplift it is welcomed as a powerful force for good.

Has it enemies? It has. The forces of evil have been arrayed against the Woman's Christian Temperance Union since it was organized in 1874.

What returns will it give on the investment of myself as a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union? A satisfaction of mind and soul not to be measured by percents; a joy of service boundless and continued, beyond the power of words to express.

Is the small investor welcome? All are welcomed on an equal basis. Each one can invest equally—herself.

When does the interest on the investment begin? At once. You immediately "become an inheritor of its radiant past, a participant in its luminous present and a builder in its brightening future."

Invest today by becoming a member of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

The Fire Murderer

A request at the National Board of Fire Underwriters' headquarters in New York City to be shown the records in the incendiary and arson department, would open one's eyes to danger never before dreamed of.

If you saw a man arranging a bomb or a rifle, so it would kill unsuspecting persons you would not be satisfied until the man was put in a place of safekeeping where he could not further endanger the lives of the public.

And yet day after day the National Board officials find arson "plants" arranged for starting a quick fire in factory buildings, work shops, store rooms, etc., in the most congested districts in cities. The fact that the "plant" was discovered before the fire started or the fire was put out without causing death, or destruction of property does not lessen the criminal intent or responsibility that attaches to the person who sets such a death trap. Yet the public pays scant attention to this class of criminals and conviction for arson is most difficult to secure.

If a man carelessly or wilfully runs over you with his automobile, you immediately demand damage. Yet if he carelessly or wilfully burns up your property he causes the death of your family from fire, you never think of attaching responsibility to him. It is this lack of public interest that causes American fire losses to amount to $500,000,000 a year with an annual death total of 15,000 persons.

THE LIGHT OF WESTERN STARS by Zane Grey

OUT under the wonderful western stars, near the turbulent Mexican border of the present day, most of the action in this thrilling story takes place.

While replete with the atmosphere, romance, exciting events and human elements so characteristic of its author's work, it strikes a note that is different from the average of western fiction; indeed, it is quite different from any of Zane Grey's other stories and has been acclaimed in various quarters as the best he has yet written.

The wets have at last got some kind of a decision from the Supreme court which looks good to them. It is to the effect that no search and seizure warrants can be issued for a private dwelling unless it is used for public purposes and manufactures or keeps to sell spirituous or malt liquors. This may help a little but in view of the fact that nobody cares a whoop how much bug juice a man keeps on hand for himself, it don't much matter. The birds officers are after the men or women who make home "hothead" and do it for profit, and they're the ones who'll get caught just as the Volstead law provides.

Pyrex and not Pyrox, is the watchword in thousands of homes to-day. The other day we picked up the Farm Bureau Bulletin and among other things we noticed an article praising up Pyrex glass ware as a baking utensil. Pyrox, which sounds just like it, is entirely different, being an insect poison and fully as useful about the garden. Who has not heard of potato bug dope? Please do not confuse Pyrex with Pyrox.

North Adams Annual Commencement

Knowles Opera House again has welcomed a large gathering of sisters, brothers, fathers, mothers and friends to witness the annual commencement held on Thursday evening June 7th, 1923, thus closing a very successful year of school.

This year fourteen graduates finished their school course and judging by the array of talent North Adams schools are not depreciating in the least as years go by. The Class of 1923 has a personnel of nine young ladies as follows: Geraldine Cox, Edith Fry, Edna Fry, Bernice Doty, Dorothy Angler, Ethel Casey, Pauline and Geraldine Windahl Edna morehead, and five young men as follows: Lloyd McLaughlin, Marion Pierce, Herbert Holkins, Richard Barger and George A. Lynch. The program was carried out successfully, the class march to their places where Rev. Ford pronounced the invocation; Miss Edith Fry, salutatorian, chose as her subject "Ideals" and her part was very creditably taken; Lloyd McLaughlin gave in a pleasing manner the class history; Marion Pierce pronounced the class prophecy and Dorothy Ambler executed the class will.

Miss Geraldine Cox as Valedictorian, chose as her subject the class motto "Dig," probably the shortest and most meaty sentence of the season. To say her oration was well delivered is entirely unnecessary. The speech of the valedictorian was delivered by J. M. Kurtz, Professor of Sciences, Goshen College, Indiana. R. C. Young superintendent of the school with a few well chosen remarks, presented the diplomas.

Rev. Allen delivered the baccalaureate Sunday evening at the Cong church to a large audience and the music was furnished by the Cong choir. Rev. Allen's remarks were very much to the point and the main thought we caught was "set your mark high and always aim above it."

What Of It?

The Jonesville Independent expresses itself as follows on the murder of Officer Kemp at Hillsdale "The jail at Hillsdale holds a self-confessed murderer. He broke a law when he took a human life, and must pay the penalty. The law, however, no matter how severe, does not stop the crime, as is easily seen by the court records every day. Law does not put a stop, although without question it holds in check."

We have said before that it is a pity the law of capital punishment in Michigan was passed up at Lansing instead of putting it in the statute. We believe that patience and saintly God-forgiveness for crime has become a superfluity in this state, and we believe it is time we laid aside the petticoat government which sentimentalizes our law making bodies, and put the iron fist to the nose of crime. Hand out a couple of necktie parties at Jackson and see if it don't jar the crooks.

Big Fire at Hague Park

The resort at Vandercrook's Lake known as Hague Park near Jackson was visited by fire Wednesday morning and almost completely wiped out, the main dance hall, merry-ground, roller coaster, and lunch room being burned. Manager Odell reports his loss at $175,000, and not much insurance. How the fire started is not yet determined but arson is suspected. Disturbance was heard during the early hours of the night. A peculiar circumstance of the calamity is that Jackson fire department absolutely refused to come to Odell's aid although he repeatedly plead with them to save his property. As no fire fighting apparatus was kept at the lake except what was stationary, nothing could be done. However, the fire has not interfered with activities at the Park as dancing will be carried on as before. State fire marshals are investigating the circumstances and will no doubt clear up the mystery.

Week Day Religious Instruction

This organization has many departments of work besides the Temperance cause for which it was originally founded. One of these is the promotion of Bible Study and inasmuch as a large number of our children do not attend Sunday school and many have no religious instruction at home it has seemed advisable in many places to take part of the regular school time for this work. The following clippings explain how the study is being conducted in some places.

About a year ago a week-day school was begun in the West End of Cincinnati, with two Presbyterian one Reformed and one Methodist church cooperating. Twenty-one pupils were charter members. Today the school has grown to almost three hundred in enrollment and includes all the six grades of the Sand Street public school. The first and second grades have their instruction in religion at nine o'clock on Thursdays, followed by the third and fourth grades at ten and the fifth and sixth grades at eleven. The use of the church building nearest the public school, with four teachers from the cooperating churches, makes for efficient and economical work.
An interesting fact is that the school includes a practically equal number of boys and girls, with the boys in the majority in one of the sections.

A similar experiment is being conducted in the McKinley Grade School in Oklahoma City, Okla., where each child whose parents so request is given two thirty minute periods of religious instruction each week by the public school teachers themselves. Various lesson materials are used including some of the Ainings Week-day texts. Credit is given toward the regular school work.

The second year's work in weekday religious instruction at Mansfield, Ohio, is nearing its close with very gratifying results. The Van Wert plan is followed with the use of the public school building, as allowed by Ohio law. More than 2,100 pupils in the first four grades of the public schools and seventy pupils in the high school have been receiving systematic instruction the past year.
Credit is granted by the board of education for this work. The two sections for high school pupils were limited to seventy for this year, the senior section receiving two hours, and the freshman three hours of classroom work each week. The teacher of the grade pupils has her master's degree in religious education from Columbia and gives her entire time to the instruction working on the schedule of half-hour sessions for the different grades and buildings. Special texts were used, and the Standard of work is held to a high level. Practically all the churches of the city are cooperating in the movement, apportioning the annual budget of $2200 among themselves. A remarkable feature of the work is that with the hearty cooperation of the superintendent and teachers, the tact of the special teacher, and the broad, nonsectarian character of the teaching, only two out of more than 2100 pupils in the first four grades have declined to receive the instruction.

The plans for next year include provision for a larger number of the interested high-school students.
Young people from the high school or college find the outer world cold and fleshless—a mere skeleton—waiting to be clothed originality in some chosen line.
John Burroughs spent his life trying to find a bird species of which he had never before known when at the ripe old age of 80 years he succeeded.
This modest old philosopher loved to tell how he found such a bird while walking alone in the fields
one day. That's a concrete example of staying with his vocation.

"Should I Buy a Tractor?" Discussed in New Movie

The sometimes puzzling question "Should I buy a tractor?" is discussed pro and con in a new film just completed by United States Department of agriculture and now released for distribution. This picture weighs the relative advantages of the various forms of farm power and summarizes briefly the conditions under which each is likely to be most desirable.

It is pointed out that size of farm and lay of the land are fundamental considerations, and that the man with a small farm, or very rough land, would certainly better stick to the horse or mule power, while the man with a large area of level or rolling land may find it desirable to use the tractor for much of his work. Other things taken into consideration are the farmer's hand-iness with machinery, his love for horses, and the cropping system best adapted to his conditions.

Scenes photographed in various parts of the country are used to illustrate the different points discussed. Of especial interest are scenes showing the use of a source of power so old as to be a novelty now in many sections, namely the ox, which is shown in every-day and economical use in certain parts of the South.

The new film will be circulated through the department's distribution system. Prints may be obtained by authorized purchasers at the laboratory cost.

Vocation Means Success

"Young man, find your vocation and stay with it" so spoke the sober, staid business man to his applicant, a clean-cut vivacious athlete who had graduated from the Academy but a few days before.

To one who might have overheard such a remark it seemed curiously unsympathetic, more than that—it bore earmarks of cold indifference.

But we'll investigate: Forty-two years of life had the speaker spent before that desk; he had seen a small one-horse shop grow to become the largest of its kind in a city of 75,000 inhabitants.
It's line of manufacture found great competition—not the tenderfoot half-hearted kind but vindictive, underhanded, strong-arm knock which threatened to put out the industrial lights of a brother craftsman with malice aforethought.

The astute manufacturer spoke the truth. It is not our forte to relate the circumstances of human wrecks along the highway of endeavor in industrial lines.
God Almighty takes care of the results, yet it is more than ever apparent that few succeed who do not stay with their chosen vocation. Double purposed men never get anywhere.

Young people from the high school or college find the outer world cold and fleshless—a mere skeleton—waiting to be clothed originality in some chosen line.
John Burroughs spent his life
trying to find a bird species of which he had never before known when at the ripe old age of 80 years he succeeded.
This modest old philosopher loved to tell how he found such a bird
while walking alone in the fields
one day. That's a concrete example of staying with his vocation.

While it is perhaps true that John Burroughs was a failure from a business standpoint, this much of his characteristics are worthy of emulation.

The philosopher has told us in strong language that the only young man who gets his life history before the people of this great nation is a red-blooded up-and-doing fellow, something of an optimist perhaps, who takes the happenings of the old world just as they are and moulds himself to fit the cavity calculated for him. In other words no young man wants to be a square peg in a round hole or viceversa.
He hews straight to the line never allowing that cackles of a flip-pant society to interfere with his upward climb. Temperance in all things, athletics in moderation, religion in deeds not words, and a strong long pull for the right must lead to the goal.

Find Poultry to be Most Popular Crop

That the farm poultry flock is still the most popular and widely distributed "crop" in Michigan is shown by statistics just released at the Michigan Agricultural College which indicate that 180-000 of the state's 1,000,000 farms, or 92 per cent, maintain a poultry flock.

The fact that the average number of birds per flock, is given as 82 is further indication that poultry subjects are of almost universal interest among the farmers of the state.

Estimates place the value of Michigan poultry at the surprising total of $11,600,000, while the value of poultry buildings and equipment is placed at almost the same total, according to H. M. Elliot, farm management specialist at M. A. C., who has been making a detailed study of the state's poultry industry. This brings the total investment to more than $20,000,000.

Produce from this investment in 1919 totaled $34,000,000 divided into $23,500,000 worth of eggs and $11,400,000 worth of poultry perenn, according to the 1920 census.

A feature which adds to the universal interest in poultry raising in Michigan is the fact that thousands of people in the small towns and cities, who do not class as full-fledged farmers, keep at least a small flock of poultry in the back yard.

Rubber is now being transported to this country from the East Indies in the form of latex, instead of in the block and sheet form the trade since the beginning of its history. Tank cars for latex will soon be a familiar sight on the railroads. Latex is the white sap of the rubber tree from which rubber is made. By the use of ammonia the product is handled without risk of hardening.

ARTHUR B. WILLIAMS FOR CONGRESS

Mr. Williams stands squarely on the Republican platform for 1920.

He supports the administration record made during the past three years in turning depression stagnation and idleness into business activity and universal employment.

He is in thorough sympathy with the legislation enacted for the relief of the farmer.

He proposes to help the program at Washington instead of hindering it.

He favors deeds and accomplishments, rather than theories and promises.

He is fair-minded toward all interests; he is against special privilege to any interest.

Mr. Williams is exceptionally qualified for service. He is an able lawyer and business man. He knows public affairs.
He came from the farm; He knows the problem of labor.

He was nominated by a splendid majority of the Republican vote cast at the primary. His majorities were particularly strong in the communities where he has lived and is intimately known.

He will keep the Third district in high place of influence at Washington.

He will be a prominent factor in representing Michigan as a whole at Washington.

He will be an able assistant in the Republican party program for economy, efficiency and prosperity.

A new idea has developed in railroad riding since the fatal accident at Durand where 5 people lost their lives. According to testimony of experts the engine was entirely too large for the small train it was dragging and as the result the momentum caused it to sway from side to side until it jumped the track. If this be true it seems as if railroad officials should have become acquainted with such facts long ago, and would use better judgment than to hook a monster Mallet engine to such a light train and send it at a perilous speed down the right of way just to show the Templars what they could do. It is said the train had not at the time of accident gained much headway. Probably if the train had stuck to the track a terrific speed would have been attained. Thus we learn day by day in every way.

He's Got Them Guessing

Your Uncle Hank Ford is not so slow in politics after all, since he has learned a thing or two. Brother Pipp, over at Detroit, who is in again, out again, gone again, Fian again—on Ford's popularity, says so and he knows. When such re-servists as Mr. Pipp begin to get scared about Ford's chances for the presidency then you may know that there is something in it. In a recent straw vote which the publishers of Collier's Weekly put on it has been ascertained that Henry Ford could today carry the East Central states, the West North Central states, the East South Central states, the West South Central states, the South Atlantic states and the Pacific states, and not one time Ford actually had Harding beat in Ohio, the president's own territory. They talk about Ford's propaganda put out in his Dearborn Independent, but as a matter of fact all of his propaganda put together would not amount to one-eighth of that put over by General Leonard Wood who wanted the presidency so bad a short time ago. It is out of the province of the novice to realize the enormous sums that went into the grab bag of Leonard's budget, and it is pretty safe to presume that Mr. Ford will gain his victory, if he gets it, simply by the will of the people without money and without price, and if he don't get it that way he won't have it—that's all. People sometimes wonder where Ford does get his advertising—well that's simple enough—it comes mostly from people who use his little back action self cocking gas savers, literal greyhounds of the highways, machines that run two-thirds upon pure God-given air which don't cost one red cent, which monopolists can't steal and bottle up, and dealers can't sell (and they would if they could). And you can guess that every day in every way Mr. Ford's popularity is rising upon a sudden would like a full harvest moon. It takes the American people about 20 years to discover a real honest man, then after they have him lamed, another twenty years to learn before they can educate their various flipperies and bickerings to pull together. Unless Mr. Ford gets ambitious and gathers in something more to himself in the years to come, he can't crafty and attempts the old, old game of political steal, which every other man who has gone after anything so big, has slipped into, he's going to win.

What's Interesting in Temperance Truths

Prohibition of alcoholic liquors has not removed the necessity of teaching boys and girls now in the public schools the reasons for total abstinence or the reasons why these drinks were prohibited. The next generation of citizens should thoroughly understand the facts that led to radical action against alcoholic beverages. There are children in the schools who have come to America too recently to understand at all American prohibition. Domestic manufacture and use of alcoholic drinks persists in many homes. The schools in the United States for at least a generation must continue to teach the facts about alcohol. The problem will be one of presenting them in a way that will be both interesting and convincing.

More than ever the keynote of such instruction must be, "Teach by facts not by exhortation." Successful teachers will have at command ready knowledge of the facts which the science of the past quarter century affords, showing not only that many old beliefs about alcoholic drinks are untrue, but why they are untrue. The physiological lesson should always be deftly woven in with the concrete example.

First are what may be called the practical facts of every-day life.

THE APPEAL OF SPORTS
There is no quicker way of winning the attention of the average boy than through his interest in athletics. Baseball and football, running, walking, swimming and shooting all afford splendid illustrations from noted athletes as to the value of abstinence and the growing recognition of its importance. Gather into an "athletic envelope" all that the daily, weekly, and temperance press and magazines have to relate on the abstinence of athletes in all branches of sport.

THE APPEAL TO EFFICIENCY
Every normal young person wants to be strong and able to do things well. Youth can be taught how alcohol impairs the very qualities required—physical strength and endurance, ability to think quickly and accurately; how it makes hard work harder requiring more energy and a long time to do a given piece of work. Draw from the industrial history of the years preceding prohibition showing how more and more drink habits stood in the way of employment and of promotion.

Illustrate the effects of alcohol by the proofs from marching, climbing, lifting tests. Use experiments showing how alcohol slows mental activity, impairs eyesight and nerve control, destroys fine co-ordination of nerves and muscles needed for skilled handwork.

THE APPEAL TO SAFETY
In connection with these industrial facts should be taught those bearing upon accidents. The history of the railroads affords a supreme illustration of the effort to prevent accidents due to alcohol. The engineers required abstinence in their brotherhoods even before the managements insisted upon it, because they knew the responsibility was so great that they must always have undull brains. The increase of motor traffic with high speed cars or heavily loaded trucks makes increasingly imperative strict sobriety on the part of all who drive. Here is one important place to emphasize the fact that the effect of alcohol may last for several hours after a drink is taken.

Future employers responsible for the safety of their men, future employers responsible for their own safety and the success of the business, need to know what employers of today know—that alcohol dulls perception of danger, and judgment as to how to avoid it; that the drinker is more liable to accidents and fatal results, and longer in recovering; that the sober workman, even, is always in danger from the drinking workman.

Republican National Committee Turns Poison Gas Attacks on Harding

In analyzing the attack of the Republican National Committee upon the allied governments couched in the language of Billingsgate, one reason for the outbreak was pointed out by Cordell Hull, chairman of the Democratic National Committee who said: "While the country will share Secretary Hughes's perturbation and indignation over this grave blunder of the Republican National Committee, there are two outstanding facts which show that the committee is not alone to blame for this policy of political inter-meddling in foreign relations and the possible results therefrom:

"First, the attack of the Republican National Committee upon President Harding's World Court policy and its offensive references to foreign governments is exactly in line with the policy inaugurated by the Republican party in 1919-20, when the same poison gas methods were menaciously directed at the foreign policy of the Democratic administration. These were the reprehensible methods upon which the party relied to elect Mr. Harding in 1920 and to which he and other Republican leaders gave acquiescence and approval.

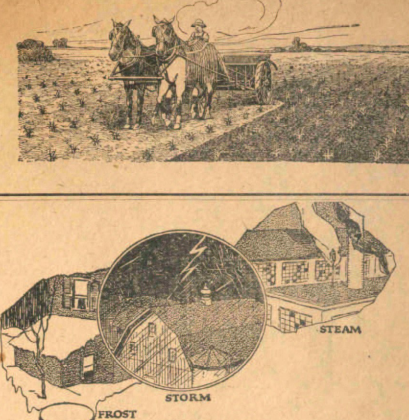

"Second, by acquiescing and accepting these poison gas methods, the Republican party under the Harding administration has degenerated and split up into feuds and factions until it is now impossible for the Republican National administration to accomplish any of its declared domestic or foreign policy. This administration finds itself the object of retributive justice, with the poison gas attacks it originated and directed now turned against itself by its own national political organization.

"Now that the administration has had the infamy and humiliation of the poison gas policy inaugurated by the Republican leaders and directed against a Democratic administration brought home and turned against itself, it ought to prove a warning to the party in power that the honor, the dignity and the material interest of the United States, as well as its peaceful relations with foreign governments, should never be endangered by political expediency or the hatreds and malice of partisan politics."

Champion Dairy Sire Comes to Michigan

Another leader in the dairy world, we added to Michigan's list of championship herd sires last week when Avon Pontiac Echo Lad blooded Holstein sire, was bought by state men at the National Holstein sale in Cleveland.

Echo Lad is from the famous dam De Kol Plus Segis Dixie, who is expected, within the next two weeks, to break the world's record with more than 1,700 pounds of butter fat production in a year and hails from the best blood of the breed. The new state herd sire was bought jointly by the Battle Creek Sanitarium, Dudley F. Waters, of Grand Rapids and M. D. Booth, of Grand Rapids, who paid more than $4000 for the animal.

It withstands these destroyers.

THE tough, durable body of a Carey Roofing, combined with the coating of crushed mineral, enables it to withstand the continual onslaught of heat, cold, storms, and steam. Carey Roofing was developed specifically to withstand all of these destroyers. It has done so, on many roofs, for twenty-five years.

Inexpensive; easy to apply; in many weights and qualities for every roofing purpose. Let us estimate on what you need.

Would make you feel like condemning your luck, and consigning the same to a warmer climate, especially if your hired man had quit. 17 cows needed milking, the wheat was shocked and off in the south-west quarter a black cloud threatened to drown the world. Yet your predicament would be no different than that of the man who went in to business without sufficient printing to keep his name before the public. Here was Rugg, the Dry Cleaner, who wanted all the business in Hillsdale county with out even a letter head. He used to make out his bills on tablet paper. He's gone Where'd he go? He went to the Advocate office and ordered 1,000 Letter heads 500 circulars, 500 Bills and some announcements for his daughter's wedding

Successful Handling of Parasites in Corn-Borer Control Work

More than 1,000,000 individuals of an important parasite of the European corn borer, Habrobracon brevicornis Wesm., have been successfully reared and liberated in the densely infested area in New England. It was believed by entomologists of the United States department of agriculture that it might be worth while to attempt to introduce it into the badly infested areas of southern Ontario. Following a suggestion to this effect made to the Dominion Entomologist, Arthur Gibson, authorization was recently given by the Canadian Government for an assistant for this purpose. This entomologist recently visited the laboratory at Arlington, Mass. to receive instruction in the technique necessary for handling the parasite, which will shortly be reared and introduced into Canada.

State Police Get 'Em

We note that Michigan State Troopers are still on the job when it comes to catching fugitives from justice, Sergeant John Palmer who was formerly stationed at Hudson, and Trooper Harper went to Rochester, Indiana and trailed the Onsted bank robbers until they captured them and returned with them to Adrian. There has been considerable amount of kicking about the expense of maintaining State Police but it is notable that most of the objection comes from a class of politicians who are more or less under the spell of the crooks—that is, we mean they are looking to the crooks for some favor or other possibly a vote, and to get it justice as easy as possible for the criminal fraternity. If the novice doubts this he should read the record from month to month of the State Constabulary; read how fearless officers are shot down in the pursuit of duty; read how robbers and general crooks are chased from one end of the state to the other, when county officials cannot act, how the state police rounds 'em up dead or alive, then ponder well and long. We are for the State Police today, tomorrow and all the time, because they get their men, and in so doing they incur the enmity of many in high powered offices, but it don't make any difference the crooks have to go in. We believe that any neaput politician who will for one minute countenance a runner who pulls a gun and shoots a trooper because the officer has him cornered, should be canned. There is no sound reason why a runner should commit murder because he is in possession of forbidden goods, and there is all the reason in the world why capital punishment in Michigan should not at once begin for such crimes. Ten years ago a crook would usually hesitate long and carefully before he murdered his captor, but since the advent of "poison hooch" men have become so crazed by liquor domination that to shoot an officer and trust to luck to get away, is considered quite according to Hoyle. We believe the state police are today doing more to put Michigan on the list as a law-abiding commonwealth than anybody else whosoever.

The railroad men are still tinkering around trying to square themselves with the public as to the causes of the wreck at Durand. Most anything they can think of is being put up as the reason, but the same fact sticks out like a sore thumb. Heavy engine, not much train and a crazy desire to exceed the speed limit is about all they can find.

John Murray who shot cashier Redfield of the Onsted Bank and got away with several hundred dollars of the bank funds, was sentenced last week to serve 25 years for shooting the chief of police of Rochester, Indiana. He has something coming to him from this state when he gets out. The boy who was with him at the time got five years in the Industrial school.

What has become of the old-fashioned farmer boy who at the age of 21 years hustled over to the city to have his "picturtook" showing the wee little fuzz on his upper lip, supposed to be the first signs of manhood? Or last Thursday 110 of the Barnhart clan gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barnhart a mile south of Reading for their annual reunion, guests being present from Indiana, Ohio and Michigan. The forenoon was spent in visiting and renewing pleasant kinship ties. At noon a bounteous picnic dinner was indulged in. A program of recitations speeches and a solo by Erin Miller of Montpelier, Ohio, were given. Rev. S. H. Dull of Reading and Rev. Neff, of Pioneer gave fine talks.

The next reunion will be held at the home of Ray Barnhart in North Adams. The oldest one present was John Barnhart of Montpelier, Ohio, and the youngest was the six-months-old baby of Mrs. Vernice Snow from Pioneer, Ohio.

An Easy Winner

Arthur B. Williams of Battle Creek was a close winner in the race for Congress from the third district on Tuesday. As near as we can figure it he was about the only man in the contest as far as this county was concerned who suffered much anxiety for results. We are glad this is so. Should have been just as glad if Mr. Carney or Mr. Kies had won the election because as we figure, it makes just about one half cent difference to the taxpayer in this district whether Mr. Williams or Mr. Kies or Mr. Carney holds down this job. We feel like the small boy did who was present at his sister's wedding. When the couple stood up to be married he exclaimed in a stage whisper "Don't worry, Bessie, the worst is yet to come." We feel when a man is elected to office like asking "Who pays the fiddler?" It takes several thousand dollars to put a man over at Washington these days, and if the candidate is not a modern millionaire, somebody has to put up. Here's where the rich monopolists who run the country and government come in. They furnish the dough and the minute a candidate is elected his sentence begins, in fact he is usually bargained off to the highest bidder before he is elected.

In glancing over our exchanges we note that 4th of July celebrations are not going to be very numerous this season. Jackson Agri cultural Society is advertising in a faint hearted sort of a way for some kind of a performance at the fair grounds with ball game, etc. a big show and various amusements. We wonder if American patriotism is not waning.

Suicide at Moscow

Mrs. George Wing, of Moscow suicided by hanging herself in her husband's store some time between Sunday evening and Monday morning when her lifeless body was found. She had been in poor health and evidently had found her life so miserable that she planned to escape it all by death. She left notes written to relatives in which she disposed of her belongings and it is claimed that she even left instructions as how she should be dressed. Mrs. Wing leaves beside her husband and one sister a son, J. C. Wing of Hanover, and four grandchildren. Funeral services were held Thursday at 2:00 p. m. at Concord and interment in the Concord cemetery. Mrs. Wing was 53 years of age and with her husband had been a resident of Moscow about two years.

If You Need a Medicine

When she turned out the lamp and crept away into bed she knew what it was to be utterly alone. She was too tired to move a finger.

When she awakened the room was dark with sunlight. She was lying on her back, and she was looking at the ceiling of the little room when she remembered where she was and how she had come there.

How great a shock she had been subjected to was manifest in a sensation of disgust that overwhelmed her. She even shut her eyes to try and blot out the recollection. She felt that she had been contaminated.

Presently Madeline Hammond awoke to the fact she had learned the preceding night—that there were emotions to which she had heretofore been a stranger. She had been here when she had been found in the room, and she had found it necessary to control her emotions. There had been no trouble, no excitement, no unpleasantness in her life. She had been ordered for her—tranquil, luxurious, brilliant, varied, yet always the same.

Madeline heard Florence rap on the door and call softly:

"Miss Hammond. Are you awake?"

"Awake and dressed, Miss Kingsley."

Presently there were slow, reluctant steps outside the front door, then a pause, and the door opened. Stewart Wood looked in at the single light. Madeline's glance ran over him with lightning. But as she saw his face now she did not recognize it. The man's presence seemed to her a revelation. Yet something in her, the incomprehensible side of her nature, thrilled in the look of this splendid dark-faced barbarian.

"Mr. Stewart, will you please come in?" she asked, after that long pause.

"I reckon not," he said. The hopelessness of his tone meant that he knew he was not fit to enter a room with her, and did not care or cared too much.

Madeline went to the door. The man's face was hard, yet it was sad, too. And it touched her.

"I shall not tell my brother of your refusal to see me," she said.

"It is impossible for her to keep the chill out of her voice, to speak with other than the pride and aloofness of her class. Nevertheless, her love for him, when she had spoken so far it seemed that kindness and pity followed involuntarily."

"I do not choose to choose to overlook what you did choose to tell me," she said.

"You are a woman, and you may rely on me to keep silent, and to seal the lips of that priest?" she asked.

His hoarse reply was incoherent, but she needed only to see his working face to know his remorse and gratitude.

Madeline went back to her room; and presently Florence came for her, and directly they were sitting at breakfast Madeline told her of her friend's friend had been reconstructed in the morning light.

She felt a wholesome, frank, sweet nature. She liked him, the clear tan of outdoors, a face that lacked the soft curves and lines of eastern women, and her eyes were light gray, like crystal, steady and clear, and her hair was a beautiful bright waving mass.

A sharp knock on the parlor door interrupted conversation. Florence's sister went to open it. She returned presently and said:

"He's down here dawdling on there on the front porch, and he knocked to let us know Miss Hammond's brother is coming."

"What do you mean?" she asked.

"Now, see here, Flo, I only—"

"I don't want to know. I told it. Gene, aren't you ever going to learn decency? And you want to stop drinking? You'll lose all your friends. Molly and I have pleaded with you, and now you've gone and done it—God knows what for."

"What do women want to wear veils for?" he growled. "I'd have known her but for that veil."

"And you wouldn't have insulted her. But you would the next girl who came along. Gene, you are hopeless. Now, you get out of here and don't ever come back."

"Flo!" he entreated.

"I mean it."

"I reckon when I'll come back to you and take my medicine," he growled.

"Don't you dare!" she cried.

Stewart went out and closed the door.

"Miss Hammond, you—you don't know how this hurts me," said Florence. "What you mean think of us! It's so unlucky that you should have had this happen right at first. Now, maybe you won't have the heart to stay. Oh, I've known and loved one eastern girl to go home without ever learning what we really are out here. Miss Hammond, Gene Stewart is a fiend when he's drunk. All the same I know, whatever he did, he meant no shame to you. Come now, don't think about it again tonight. She took up the lamp and led Madeline into a little room. "Won't you let me help you undress—can't I do anything for you?"

"You are very kind, thank you, but I can manage," replied Madeline.

"Well, then, good night. The sooner I get to bed the better. I'll be glad to get what happened and think how fine a surprise you're to give your brother tomorrow."

With that she slipped out and softly shut the door.

As Madeline laid her watch on the bureau she noticed that the time was past two o'clock, seemed long since she had gotten off the train. When one rider threw his reins, leaped from the saddle and came bounding up the porch steps. Florence met him at the door.

"Hello, Flo. Where is she looking for?"

"She's waiting for you. She's over her shoulder to spy Madeline. He actually jumped at her. She hardly knew the tall form and the brown face. She was looking at the blue eyes was familiar. As for him, he had no doubt of his sister, it appeared, for with broken welcome he threw his arms around her, then held her up and looked searchingly at her.

"Well, sister," he began, when Florence turned hurriedly from the door and interrupted him.

"I don't think you'd better stop the wrangling out there."

"He's drunk, but he appeared suddenly to have the loud voice of the street, and then, releasing Madeline, he said:

"By George! I forgot, Flo. There is a little business to see to. Keep my sister in here, please, and don't be fussed up, now."

He went out on the porch and called to his men:

"Shut off your wind, Jack! And you, too, Blaze! I don't want you fellows to come here. But if you would come, you've got to shut up. This is my business."

Whereupon he turned to Stewart, who was sitting on the porch.

"Hello, Stewart?" he said.

It was a greeting; but there was something in the voice which alarmed Madeline.

Stewart leisurely got up and leisurely advanced to the porch.

"Hello, Madeline," he said.

"Drunk again last night?"

"Well, if you want to know, and if it's any of your mix, yes, I was—"

"I don't think you should say that," said Madeline, who was now on her feet. "It was a kind of cool speech that showed the cowboy in control of himself and master of the situation—not one of those foolish, blundering, and ineffectual things."

"I'm not a fool," said Stewart, "and I'm not a drunkard. There was a little slip."

Those who are interested in the bus line to Jackson will probably wonder why the service has not been started. The fact is that John Weeks no longer owns the outfit but has sold it to Mr. Harmon of Jackson. We have not heard from Mr. Harmon but in all probability he thinks the business too light to put on a rig this season.

It seems there is a regular nest of rum runners clustering around the Detroit River in the vicinity of Ecorse and Trenton, and so far the authorities have not been able to attend to their cases in first class shape, but we understand the block ade is now about complete and Canadian whiskey which has been coming in quite freely will cease to get across the river so much. It is shameful that while this country is supposed to be under a dry regime that such matters are allowed to drag along. The United States government could much better afford to maintain a regiment of regulars and station a patrol along the whole border at intervals of a few rods than to allow such a condition to exist. Most of the patrol work is now being done by fire motor boats armed with small ordnance but it appears there are more whiskey carriers than the small fleet can take care of. To think that Canada uses this country for dumping ground for its liquor is not pleasant, and it is time some international agreement was reached whereby the toters of booze were apprehended and the other side same as here. Let both governments act in unison. Of course there is a gap somewhere in the vigilance of dry officials. Some supposed dry official is wet as supposed such things could not be. All of which goes to show that you can't always judge a man by the coat he wears.

Wisconsin Senate Kills Wet Bills

We are more than happy to state that the Senate of Wisconsin fought and killed the so-called wet bill which would have repealed the state prohibition law. The bill passed, Vote was 19 to 12. The house had previously passed this same measure. There seems to be concerted action on the part of "wets" to force state governments to rebel against the United States constitution. These propagandists should be taken on the grounds of treason.

Italian Camorra In

HILLSDALE AFTER PETER CASCARELLI ALLEGED

About three o'clock Sunday morning the residents of Hillsdale were rudely awakened from their slumbers by a tremendous explosion seeming to come from the heart of the town. John Fitzsimmons who was just taking his morning forty winks rushed with great gusto to the window; chandeliers way up on piety knob rebounded a full three feet off the perch and the Court House clock lost three ticks. Upon investigation it was found that the Broad Street wall of Peter Cascarelli's soft drink establishment had been punctured by an explosion of some sort which shattered practically every window in the three-story block occupied by the fruit store. Mr. Cascarelli and son were sleeping in rooms on the second floor and were aroused by the explosion, supposing it to be in the First National Bank next door. The windows in most of the buildings across the street were shattered to fragments, and pop bottles and rocks went kiting down the street. L. W. Stephenson's building directly across Broad Street was completely denuded of its glass and resembled a thin spinster in modern bathing togs.

Statements from different people indicate a hodge hodge of opinion as to what caused the explosion: a bank clerk thought it must have been T-N-T; a lawyer intimated it may have been Black Hand work, and he thought possibly the Camorra operating from Elkhart, might have planted a bomb and Peter himself who is reputed to be well fixed financially, talks nix; a small boy who was viewing the ruins remarked: "It was darn peppery, whatever exploded," so it is not likely the officers can do much other than let the case alone, for as Lincoln said, they haven't even a "peg to hang their case on."

Of course there are two reasons why Mr. Cascarelli don't talk: First, possibly, he knows little about it, and second, perhaps he has been menaced by some of his fellow countrymen—either would be considered good and sufficient excuse according to Camorra ethics or plain United States practice.

Pavement Blow Up

A peculiar accident occurred at Clyde, Ohio, last week Thursday when Leo Jeffrey who is employed on the road gang here, was returning home to North Adams after having been on business connected with the road. Jeffrey was ambling along in the Ford car belonging to Cleve Crater when the brick pavement under the machine exploded with a terrific impact, hurling brick and debris in the air. The car was demolished and Jeffrey himself was considerably bruised and shaken.

It is claimed that bricks were thrown 100 feet away. The exact cause is unknown but a theory is advanced that pockets of air under the brick became expanded by the terrible heat of the past few days and caused the upheaval. Mr. Crater carried no insurance on the car and it is absolutely beyond repair.

What Prohibition Has Done

It will probably not be overlooked by any students of American history that the first rebellion that ever raised its arm against the Government of the United States was the Whiskey Rebellion of 1794. The Government was new. It had no funds to carry on its work. Under the Articles of Confederation it could not levy a direct tax except by the consent of the various states. Finally an adjustment was made by which whiskey was to be taxed.

The whiskey makers in western Pennsylvania refused to recognize this levy or to pay one dollar of taxes. They hauled down the American flag, and the carriers, postoffices and custom houses and drove the tax collectors into hiding; and George Washington had to call for troops to put down this insubordinate rebellion. It has since been regenerated since. It has violated every law that has ever been passed for its regulation, its taxes, or its prohibition. We have had laws against selling liquor to minors, but the saloons have sold to any little boy or girl who could reach the money up as high as the counter, and have even manufactured doped candy to be presented to the children going and coming from home and school.

We have had laws against selling to inebriates, but they have sold to any poor, weak, drunken man as long as he had anything to pay, sharp as a razor.

We have had laws against selling liquor on Sunday, but the organized liquor traffic almost trampled out our American Sabbath by its ceaseless violation, turning Sunday into a day of carousal and drunkenness. We have had laws against harboring disreputable associates, but the gambling hell has been an accompaniment of the saloon.

We have had local option laws against selling in certain townships and counties, but the saloons have violated every such restriction and sought to break down every law for their limitation, regulation or prohibition.

Lawlessness did not originate with the Eighteenth Amendment. There is probably less violation of the liquor law today than any time in American for one hundred and forty years. Forty-nine-fiftieths of all the property that was engaged in the manufacture and sale of liquor are now employed in other trades.

We hear more about one bootlegger with a single bottle of whiskey in his pocket than we used to hear of hundreds of wide open saloons playing their trade night and day and all through Sundays in violation of law. The reason is that we have made the sale of liquor news. I saw this illustrated in my own experience a little over a year ago in Portland, Oregon.

I was going down Morrison Street and just out in front of the postoffice I saw a crowd collecting. Arriving in the throng I found three hundred gathered around a man and an automobile. A Federal officer was on one side and a policeman on the other. The policeman took the man by the arm, got a half consumed whiskey bottle out of his pocket, opened his satchel and found two more bottles unopened, while the Federal officer was getting in the car on the other side and asking some one to crank it for him so he could take it around for confiscation.

As the officer displayed the two bottles and a half he made by that "haul," a sturdy lawyer of the town who always hangs around Police Courts to take the disreputable cases, remarked "Well, this is what I have always said. I have said it a thousand times. Prohibition don't prohibit. Just look at this, right here on the streets of Portland in broad daylight."

I stepped to the side of this man raised my hand over the crowd and said "Ladies and gentlemen, may I say a word? When I came to your town eighteen years ago you had only one hundred thousand people, now there are three hundred and fifty thousand. But you had 488 saloons, selling liquor all day and all night, and all day Sunday in violation of law. You had 4 breweries, a number of wholesale liquor houses and several warehouses. These saloons maintained 18 vans, on one of which I counted one hundred barrels of liquor. These vans delivered six loads a day and five or six every night, supplying the saloons and gambling houses bootleggers for their work. Over 1190 liquor licenses taken out in Portland in those days and if you subtracted the number of legalized saloons and other institutions that secured the right to sell liquor, you would still have 450 illegal joints selling with as little right as the bootlegger has now. Now we have cut that whole business down to car automobiles, two bottles and a half. The bootlegger on his way to jail, the car in process of confiscation to the Government and we have got a natural-born and long practiced idiot here trying to make these things as bad as they ever were."

I think this fairly illustrates the gigantic proportions one little sale or supply of liquor takes on now in our publicity method against the wide-spread drinking, drunkenness, manufacture, sale, dominance of politics, and corruption of government represented by the licensed liquor traffic of four brief years ago instead of prohibition being a far more as those whom it restricted would have us believe, it has been in spite of handicaps, the greatest moral triumph the nation has ever seen. It is not as well enforced as it might be. The officers selected in many instances by the enemies of the law, with a design to have it fail, have not enforced it perfectly; but it has wrought some of the moral miracles of the twentieth century. Let me name a few:

Progress of Lightning Rods

It has long been a supposition that our own Benjamin Franklin, whom philosopher, patriot and a printer was the inventor of the lightning rod, but such is a fallacy. Benjamin Franklin never put lightning conductors in practice. Sir Isaac Newton knew the secrets of this wonderful electric force. Louis XV died of 180 of his tallest body guards together at the wrists with copper wire. He sent sparks thru the whole line. He also thought it great fun to catch his enemies and put an electric current thru their bodies to see them writhe and jump. Franklin tinkered around considerably with the business and finally wrote a long statement for publication in which he claimed that lightning shocks could be avoided by the use of long rods with sharp points, placed on buildings, but the ignorance and superstition of the day prevented much being done with his discovery. People believed these rods were the natural cause of droughts, and plagues of all kinds, sometimes linking them with witchcraft, and it usually resulted in a wholesale destruction of rods and the inventor also, if they could catch him.

Thus the matter has come down to our day and lightning rod agents have perpetrated swindles upon unsuspecting farmers by demanding a handsome price for erecting lightning rods on buildings with a maze of rods which were not properly insulated nor efficiently grounded, hence were practically useless for any purpose. A case of this kind was reported in the country would lead one to believe that to-day there are oodles of people who don't take much stock in man made contrivances for stopping God's thunderbolts, as lightning rods are much safer than they were 25 years ago.

Electric Mutilation

An undertaker of large experience has invented a system whereby human corpses can be embalmed by an electric treatment and can be kept for all time exposed to the deteriorating influence of air and temperature. He has constructed a heavy metallic air tight case of a vault or sarcophagus which contains copper tabs on roller bearings and upon this table the body is laid. Electrodes are connected with an electric generator and applied to various parts of the corpse, the table is pushed into the case, a steel door closes and the process begins. Dials of instruments outside indicate the voltage, temperature, and resistance of the subject within, so that the operator is at all times familiar with conditions. By maintaining a certain voltage for a certain length of time, which varies, all moisture is eliminated, tissues are seared, and the flesh is dried hard, hardened, without the amount of shrinkage. When the process is completed, the corpse is found to be free from decay germs, sterile and capable of resisting all manner of deterioration, and it is claimed that by this process dead bodies can be kept indefinitely.

All the wonderful science of Tutankhamen's time are being excelled to-day, and who knows but in a few years it will be fashionable to use deceased grand-fathers for ball ornaments?

Thin Fruit to Give Crop Better Chance

That systematic thinning of the fruit on Michigan trees in order to give the remaining fruit a better chance to develop, will repay the orchardist with returns far above the cost of operation, is the contention of H. M. Wells, of the horticultural staff at the Michigan Agricultural College. "Recently adopted standard grades for the state, and the general effort to interest the consuming public in the use of more fruit, make it practically important to thin fruit this year," says Wells. "Thinned fruit will attain a more uniform size and higher color, and will be of better quality than unthinned fruit."

To secure the best results, thinning should be done immediately following the June drop and before the fruit has attained a size sufficient to draw heavily on the water supply of the tree. "Apples with short stems, such as Rhode Island Greening and Stark, can be thinned to advantage by using a pair of thinning shears, while varieties with long stems may be thinned by grasping the stem firmly between the thumb and forefinger, exerting pressure on the apple with the hand. Care should be taken so as not to loosen the apple remaining on the spur and in no case should the spur be injured. Light picking ladders will greatly hasten the work on older trees and the entire bearing surface may be reached.

Where tests have been made to determine the proper distance for thinning, to produce the maximum crop, six to eight inches has been found satisfactory for apples; while four to six inches is sufficient for peaches. Plums are frequently thinned when a heavy set is obtained.

Do Orchard Cover Crops Increase the Crop Hazard?

The growing belief among growers of citrus fruits in California that the presence of a cover crop in a citrus grove greatly increases the frost hazard is not substantiated by observations made thus far by the Weather Bureau United States department of agriculture. All the evidence obtained by making scientific records of the temperatures in carefully chosen fields, with and without cover crops, indicates that a cover crop has little effect on the temperature a few feet above the ground. If this conclusion is confirmed by later experiments, any increased damage to fruit by frost in a cover-cropped citrus grove must be attributed to some other agency than a depression of the air temperature by the cover crop. The answer may be found in natural differences in temperature due to difference in elevation or similar cause, or to the physical effect of the cover crop on the tree.

Arthur B. Williams Makes his Bow

Assured of his election to congress to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Congressman J. M. C. Smith, Arthur B. Williams, the successful republican candidate, issued the following statement:

"I am very happy at the outcome and feel that I won because of the fact that a fair and clean campaign was made in my behalf. It was certainly a hot contest and I am proud to have treated everyone in the district with fairness and impartiality. My desire will be to enlarge my personal acquaintance throughout the district as much as possible and make many new friends. I wish to most heartily thank all who worked so diligently to secure my election. The gratifying result could not have been obtained if it had not been for the interest and help of many friends who had confidence in me and my ability to creditably represent the district."

According to the State Police the leader of the Benton Harbor House of David is somewhat guilty of liciousness and they claim to have in their possession now snap shot photos of several members of the colony taken at a time and place near the amusement park of the cult showing men and girls in the garb of Adam and Eve and not much else. Purnell without doubt practiced just such things as this to draw away public sentiment is after him. He seduced young girls of weak nature and not much judgment and used them much the same as some Catholic priests are accused of doing. But of course a man must be caught before he can be punished and we believe this "bird" will escape even the State Constabulary, at least they will have to get the evidence first before they can convict. It is not unlikely that Purnell and some of his leading disciples should be strung up to some convenient tree by the thumbs for a while to bleach out—but as we said catch 'em.

We Need Another Store

Since B. I. Lynch went out of business we have been in urgent need of a good dry goods store here. There are good buildings for rent which could be used for this purpose, and if some progressive ad-vertiser wants to come to the best little town in Southern Michigan to live, here is a chance for him to make good and in a few years make his fortune. There is a splendid farming country round about the town and must be supplied with wearables. We hope this will come to the notice of some real business man and he will come and investigate. Hillsdale is nine miles away and there is no need in this world for people to go that far to buy their supplies of goods for winter or any other season.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

What Prohibition Has Done

We well remember when the most powerful trust that blighted America with its presence, defied the Government and sneered at the church, dictated to all parties, legislatures, councils, and even to the Senate and Congress itself, was the liquor traffic of the United States. People prayed for its prohibition without any faith that they would live to see the day when their prayer would be answered. They voted against it, but it was like trying to bail out an elephant with a thimble; and the greatest prohibitionist I ever knew in my youth in his most eloquent fights pictured the better day coming, and would say, "Prohibition will one day come to our world, and whether on this side or from the other side, I shall see it."

Well, neither he nor any of those thousands living long enough to see it, but their children are here and have seen that colossal, nation embracing trust that coincided to cash the appetites, the habits and even the social craving of mankind, turned into an outlawed bootlegger, cringing before officers and knowing that he and his business are doomed.

To have outlawed the liquor traffic is alone a vindication of the prohibition. It has removed and organized and legalized temptation from the pathway of the young, the weak, the habit-bound. The most appetite-craving drunkard can walk the streets of any American city today sober if he will. He neither sees the saloon sign nor smells the stench of the barroom nor the saturated sawdust floors.

This does not mean that some old drunkards, unwilling to reform, cannot find liquor if they hunt. It does mean that the saloon is a thing of the past and when they want to quit and there is a world of difference between having to hunt evil and having evil hunt you down when you are trying to escape.

Millions of excessive drinkers have stopped—all of us know some of them who have not taken a drop of intoxicating liquor since prohibition went into effect. Their names are not in the newspapers, they are making no sensation, but they are living at home, paying their bills and in many instances their old debts. They bring their ray checks to their wives every Saturday, and instead of going out to the saloon and drinking and gambling it away alone, they go down "with mother and the children" to their shopping, and through the stores on Saturday afternoons.

There are exceptions. There are some who are drinking hard, tonic, wood alcohol, or any concoction to maintain their lives. They are getting around the law and beating the Government, but let us remember that this class is not the product of prohibition. They are the left-over from the old saloon days and they will not be here much longer.

It has been a marvelous financial success. We used to spend two and one-half billions of dollars every year for drink in America. When the war was over, it was found in every European country, including England and France, that the drink habit had doubled since the outbreak of the World War. If the Eighteenth Amendment had not been passed, our bill would have doubled also, owing to the breakdown of standards, and we would have been spending five billions of dollars a year for grog, just as the cigarette habit multiplied itself during the war.

Prohibition came in the providential nick of time and saved us this great waste. It turned certainly two and a half billions, probably five billions of dollars out of the waste of the brewer's vast corruption funds into the legitimate channels of trade and kept every business as usual instead of permitting the collapse and hard times of France, Great Britain, Germany, Italy, and the rest of the world. We have had, as the result of the war.

Lastly, it has revolutionized the social customs of America, not my customs or yours. We have drunk just as much liquor in the three years since the Eighteenth Amendment as in the thirty years before, but the customs among the drinking classes in the homes of the poor, in the circles that have been deeply affected by what father does, how brother spends his money, the habits of the family, are changed.

Two years ago I visited a conference in Central Illinois. It was held at Dwight. As I neared the place, I said to myself, I have never been to Dwight, but I have heard of this place. What is there that I ought to know about the town? Suddenly I thought, "Why, this is the home of the Keeley Cure Institute, the great holy for the cure of drunkenness in the world, I have always wanted to see it. This is my chance."

Getting out of the car I walked over to an intelligent Irishman and said to him, "How far are we from the Keeley Cure Institute?" He looked up into my face, and replied, "Pardner, you're too late, and on further inquiry informed me that the Keeley Cure Institute two months after prohibition went into effect closed up forever from lack of patrons. I made inquiry about their various branch institutions. Some of them had been sold for demolition, some had become city hospitals, two of them State normal schools, many of them sanitariums, but they had all gone out of business as Keeley Cure Institutes.

This with the information that can be gotten from numerous other institutions, indicates that we have quietly looked on and seen a perfectly revolutionary change in the social customs of the millions.

Prohibition has wrought this bloodless victory for decency and order and is now in the process of eliminating the worst and tendencies of the sad old days.—Clatsmate.

Snuff Eaters Show Themselves Up

Of late we have heard a good deal about the Ku Klux Klan in this country and occasionally we hear about their going on the rampage here in the north but this is a sad and sorry state of southern states where everybody knows and runs every other person's business the Ku Klux thrive and fatten off the lawlessness of officials and ignorance of the populace. We have heard of men and others not allied up here, speak in endorsing terms of this Klan because it was supposed they stood for law and order but is a matter of fact they stand for indignities of all kinds and are made up with few exceptions of the thugs and crooks of the country—chaps who claim to want to cleanse social matters but are really snakes in the grass—and should be treated as such.

Lucas Humphrey a respected colored man and a good citizen of Jackson, was called to Shelby, Mississippi, the other day to attend the funeral of his mother. Humphrey says he attempted to bring his brother and sister away with him but no home nor any way of living down there and was held up by several automobile loads of Ku Klux scoundrels who forcibly detained his brother and sister and stole his car and his money. He says he was ever stealing the shoe off his feet and his hat, and sent him home in that condition. We understand some higher up whites in the south belong to the Ku Klux and there is a good many hood left in their yellow snuff skins its about time they answered for some of the crimes they have put over in the name of law and order. From such chicks comes mob violence, yellow paint spears, horned parties and a few other devil-may-care scrapes. Not so long ago we received from Texas a newspaper edited by Colonel Something or other, no doubt a pre-war fire eating southerner, which lauded the Ku Kluxers to the skies, and the best we can say of him is this: If he lived in Michigan he'd decorate the sharp side of a rail with the bird ornaments sticking lovingly around his naked arse in mighty short time, but then of course we don't mean to be personal. Our experience with genuine old-time snuff-eating Floridians or others down that way is they need a baptism of good northern common sense put into their craniums by the almighty system. We don't know this negro man, nor we don't know the circumstances but we presume he has related it about a square from what we have learned of southerners and their ways. For instance down in Louisiana the Morehouse Parish spears furnish a good specimen. Bodies of white men were found in a lake and conditions indicated these men had been laid down on a hard road bed and gone over with a heavy tractor wheels just to immer 'em up a little "doncher know."

"Rouse mit 'em—hang the Ku Kluxers to the most convenient telegraph pole, then discover who the scoundrels are they stick up for them, and comb them out! South of Dixie line they aren't a bit better than they were in 1861.

Jackson Is Blind, Hatt and Lane

The Jackson Daily News in a recent editorial strongly criticizes the City Fire Commission for the ruling which has been put over relative to the fire fighting apparatus not going outside the city limits, no matter how urgent the call. It lets several fine farm houses beside the best buildings at Hague Park have been consumed because there was no fire fighting paraphernalia at hand, and severe criticism is heaped on the city and as well should be. There is nothing more timely and needful in the brotherhood of man than to assist in time of distress. On a few other points we have noticed that Jackson city council needs a baptism of real holy ghost conscience, or else they are poor managers.

For instance, not so long ago it was decreed that all buses entering the city from outlying country districts, should pay an exorbitant city tax or permit, and as many of them had previously been operated at a bare pittance, this extra expense put them out of business completely. Now, in the real substance of the case who loses? We should say that Jackson merchants and business men were by long odds the principal debtors by these new regulations. Each day during the summer and autumn season these buses used to bring into the city a class of customers for trade who otherwise would go to smaller villages. From other counties these conveyances operated without them Jackson is bound to lose a large share of its transient trade. The News goes on to say:

"However, they do spend their money in Jackson, patronize the home merchant and furnish employment for Jackson people at Jackson cannot afford to drive them away or to engender their opposition. They are just as essential to us as we are to them, and we know it, and we should do so in a manner of showing that appreciation."

Many communities have the commendable plan of sign boards placed on the highways at the entrance of their cities welcoming the visitor but Jackson's attitude is that of "Keep Out" signs at every entrance of the city.

The News fears that the latest movement for the closing of retail stores on Sunday may have the effect of another of these warning signs. There are other towns at which the farmer may trade and it would not be surprising if he accepted the invitation to go elsewhere.

Give the factory man and the farmer a chance to do his trading on Saturday afternoon—the time fixed by years of custom for that purpose."

—Think of a trip to Europe for the small sum of $130. The Great Northern Steamship Co. of Boston is advertising such a trip from Boston. Cheaper than you can walk.

Shades of Paris!—Here's a girl 19 years of age who has never been married, who is called to a movie. She is the daughter of a Salvation Army Captain, and she has managed to exist somehow all this time and is fairly happy and healthy. Well, if there are any young women in this town who have attained this advanced age without either seeing a dance or a movie, we'll publish their names free of charge. If this Salvation Army lassie lived in the mountains of Kentucky ninety miles from a railroad—we'd believe the story—but living down in Winchita, Kansas, we guess somebody has lied or else the world is going backward. If this girl is normal we believe her father would have to put an inch rope on her and tie it to the cellar wall to hold her for these few years! It can't be did.

WITH A DEAD ENGINE

Would make you feel like condemning your luck, and consigning the same to a warmer climate, especially if your hired man had quit. 17 cows needed milking, the wheat was shocked and off in the south-west quarter a black cloud threatened to drown the world.

Yet your predicament would be no different than that of the man who went in to business without sufficient printing to keep his name before the public. Here was Rugg, the Dry Cleaner, who wanted all the business in Hillsdale county with out even a letter head. He used to make out his bills on tablet paper. He's gone Where'd he go? He went to the Advocate office and ordered 1,000 Letter heads 500 circulars, 500 Bills and some announcements for his daughter's wedding

Jacob Alderfer of Rock Creek formerly of Onsted and editor of the Onsted News, was drowned at Devils Lake last Sunday in 20 feet of water. He was in the water with others playing ball. It is reported that he dived and did not come up again. After a while the grappling hooks brought up the corpse. No drowning conditions of water in the lungs were found and general opinion seems to be that Mr. Alderfer died of heart trouble before striking the water.

Gull Lake Bible Conference

The summer meetings of the Gull Lake Bible Conference Association will open July 1st and continue daily for two weeks. Midland Park is the place. This is a beautiful spot located on the north shore of Gull Lake. It is easily accessible by interurban and the automobile. The interurban lands you on the shore of Gull Lake and gasoline launches ferry you across the lake to Midland Park for a few cents. Midland Park is an ideal spot for spending one's vacation. The Park is beautifully covered with closely grown trees, offering a cool shady location the beauty and comfort of which is perhaps unequalled in few if any other Michigan resorts. Added to this is a beautiful lake two miles wide and seven miles long which affords a beautiful atmosphere from its lake breezes. Bathing also offers a pleasant pastime with little dangers, owing to the wide stretches of shallow, water along the shore lines. But above all, the religious man or woman finds here a place where his spiritual appetite may be fed. A bible conference lasting six solid weeks is an added attraction which few other places in the country afford. And this conference is not conducted by any one denomination to the exclusion of every other, but is for all who believe in the fundamentals of the faith taught in the bible.

The speakers, of whom there will be twelve in number, are among the best bible expositors in the United States. Surely this is a great treat for Michigan people as well as those from other states who find it possible to come. Everyone is welcome.

Hotel accommodations with very reasonable rates and a large number of cottages are available. It would be hard to find a more attractive place to spend a few weeks vacation than at Midland Park, Gull Lake.

Jonesville is Honored

It used to be considered a much coveted plum to go to the Naval or the Military academy of our nation and we think the occasion now is well worthy of mention for it mentions a young man on his honor so to speak and if his metal is true he can become one of the mighty. Glenwood Baker of Jonesville has been appointed by the United States Representative from this district as this district's candidate at the Annapolis Naval Academy. When one takes into consideration the qualifications necessary to pass a man for this position we sometimes wonder it is attained by so many. The names of Dewey, Porter, Farragut, Fighting Bob Evans, Admiral Schley and a host of others pass in review before us and we wonder will Jonesville's young man succeed in honoring his community and his native state in the wars that are to come.

North Adams Supers

Come to North Adams and establish your home. We expect to have the best kept town in southern Michigan, and we can prove it. We shall soon have the best of gravel streets free from dust, well-painted residences and a class of society par excellence. We expect some enterprising business man will establish a dry goods store which is about all we lack.

People come by scores from Jackson county to trade here and why do they do it? The explanation is simple, they find in North Adams a large assortment of hardware, both shelf and heavy, from a tractor to a box of tacks, groceries, meats, furniture, phonographs, drugs, ice cream in season, and an all-around pleasant place to trade. They sell their eggs, their poultry, their dairy products and go home well satisfied to buy where they can be served by good clerks at prices not so high. For a residential town North Adams takes the lead.

Oil at Deerfield is Assured

Jackson oil well, No. 2, at Deerfield is now down 2,265 feet, having passed two strata of oil bearing sand and the third with indications of oil and what is more, no water. When no salt water is encountered, there is a far better opportunity to develop a well. Drilling for various reasons has been delayed and is slow at best. The well is owned by Jackson capital principally, and before it is shot the whole country will be notified in advance. If salt water should make its appearance, the drill will be taken out and cement poured in to the hole to bring the level up to high strata before shooting. From all reports it is thought the present manager of the Deerfield project is thoroughly competent to handle the situation in a way to make a producer if oil exists.

Annual School Meeting

The annual school meeting of District No. 3 was held Monday evening with a good attendance. Meeting was called to order by president of the board. Mr. and Mrs. Merton Wolcott were appointed tellers. Terms of Dr. O. G. McFarland and Mrs. Laura Walworth having expired, a reelection was called and Dr. McFarland was re-elected to succeed himself and Bert Taylor was elected to succeed Mrs. Walworth. At a previous meeting the matter of tuition had come up for consideration and it was decided to raise the rates to foreign students to $65.00 per year instead of $50.00. The meeting voted to raise $5,000 for running expenses and the ensuing year which is $500 more than it required to finance the school last year but in view of the better service we are getting for our money. Teachers for the ensuing year are as follows: Supt., R. C. Young, ass't. supt., T. N. Lamb; grammar and upper grades Miss Gertrude Getter and Miss Jones; intermediate, Mrs. T. N. Lamb; primary, Miss Marian Lane.

KEELER, AT 80, GOES TO WORK

After fourteen years of enforced idleness because of ill health, J. H. Keeler, widely-known of Milford, Ct., has gained forty pounds at the age of eighty years and is going back to work every day. Mr. Keeler, who resides at 8700 Thirtieth Street, St. Mt. Ranier, Md., gives entire credit for his extraordinary rehabilitation to Tanlac.

"My stomach was in such terrible condition I could hardly digest a thing," says Mr. Keeler. "It would swell to nearly twice its normal size and I would have frightful pains through my stomach and back. I felt so weak, dizzy and miserable that I was out of the question. In fact, my friends gave me up on three or four occasions."

"Five months ago I began taking Tanlac and improved from the very first bottle. I now eat anything on the table, have gained forty pounds, and am back at work every day. Actually, I feel like a boy again. It would be ungrateful of me not to praise Tanlac."

"Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over $7 million bottles sold."

Tanlac Vegetable Pills are Nature's own remedy for constipation. For sale everywhere.—Advertisement.

WHY TAKE LAXATIVES?

Discovery by Science Has Replaced Them.

Pills and salts give temporary relief from constipation only at the expense of permanent injury, says an eminent medical authority.

Science has found a newer, better way—a means as simple as Nature's own.

In perfect health a natural lubricant keeps the food waste soft and moving. But when constipation exists this natural lubricant is not sufficient. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication.

As Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, it cannot gripe and like pure water, it is harmless and pleasant. Nujol is used in leading hospitals. Get a bottle from your druggist today.—Advertisement.

Work today but plan for tomorrow.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kline's Swamp Root, kidney, liver and bladder medicine. The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs. It is not a stimulant and is taken in infinitesimal doses.

It is not recommended for everything. It is nature's great helper in relieving the common kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kline's Swamp Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of 25 and 50 cents medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. J. C. Kline, P.O. Box 100, New York, for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

that it had always disappointed acts of violence which indicate the effectiveness of the passive resistance, and in order to comply with the wishes of the holy father, it was denouncing the passive resistance to the cause. It declined, however, to comply with the demand of the Labor party and consider the subterfuges as plain criminals.

GOVERNOR AL SMITH OF New York has said his hat into the Democratic ring, announcing through National Commitment, that he will seek the nomination for the presidency. Mr. Mack said further that he believed the Democratic platform would contain a plank favoring modification or liberalizing of the Volstead act, which, he thought, all the powerful Eastern seaboard states desire. He added that the great industrial states are coming around to the idea that the national prohibition law is too severe, and that the Western states that uphold it are normally Republican.

Senator Underwood of Alabama, just back from a tour of Europe, declined to say whether or not he would seek his party's nomination, but he has consulted with his friends at home. Late in the month he will address a special session of the Alabama legislature and probably will then declare himself. It is said that radical Democrats in the South are getting ready to pit Ford against Underwood in the primaries.

Q. RAY SILVER, Washington representative of the American Farm Bureau federation, has a scheme to double the price of wheat and has put it up to President Harding and Secretary Hoover. The scheme is to have the farmers' strike for the farmer—thing can be accomplished, he says, if, with the aid of the new warehousing and interstate commerce laws, the farmers are authorized to store on their farms a minimum of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat as a means of avoiding price fluctuations. He said that the farmers are authorized to store on their farms a minimum of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat as a means of avoiding price fluctuations.

Mr. Silver said: "As we have in present crop and carry over, approximately 1,000,000,000 bushels of wheat, a huge consumption of five bushels per capita or 50,000,000,000 bushels, and need 30,000,000 bushels more, the market an excessive surplus of 150,000,000 to 200,000,000 bushels, you not get the President to advise the farmers to sell their wheat in the next few months, and the new warehousing and interstate commerce laws, the farmers are authorized to store on their farms a minimum of 200,000,000 bushels of wheat as a means of avoiding price fluctuations."

Accidentally falling across a third rail while working near Bath Mills, about 10:30 Wednesday forenoon, Max Luedemann, 45, of Albion, employed by the Michigan United Railroads as a section hand, was killed by electricity. Another worker threw a crowbar across the third rail and a regular rail. This shut the power off along the whole system. The victim's body was then removed. Coroner Mills responded with the pulmotor, but was too late. He will hold an inquest at the court house next Monday night at 7:00.

Deputy Sheriff Timmerman accompanied Coroner Mills to the scene of the accident, just inside the Jackson county line.

The final examination of Mrs. Marjorie Kuhns charged with the murder of her husband, resulted in her being bound over to the next term of court. Evidence produced by Mrs. Chawler, a relative while it was somewhat damaging, did not materially increase the seriousness of Mrs. Kuhns's situation.

Mrs. Chawler swore at first that the dead man called herself and Mrs. Kuhns to the bedside before he died and kissed the latter, also that Dr. Fisk told her the patient probably died from tuberculosis or had had it within a few months. Later the woman crossed her wires and swore she did not see any such happening. Which way is right the officers will have to decide. At present with the witnesses at hand and evidence which they are likely to get, it does not appear that a jury could find Mrs. Kuhns guilty. However, time will tell.

Pleasant Ridge Camp Meeting

From July 26 to August 5, will occur the annual Pleasant Ridge Camp meeting at Marble Lake a short distance beyond Quincy, Michigan. Everybody of all denominations is invited and we are positive that all who go will be royally entertained. Remember the camp meeting opens next Thursday and continues through Sunday, August 5. In this season of picnics it is not unlikely the average family can squeeze out a few extra hours to attend. You all know where beautiful Marble Lake is located and you know the Methodists have prepared the camp ground for a real resort. The grounds are located on a high ridge of land well wooded with pine, spruce, fir, mostly oak, a hotel, assembly hall and a number of cottages. The program this year includes such as Rev. John Zoller, the famous evangelist, Rev. W. H. Dashi, probably the best known and most entertaining speaker in Michigan. Rev. Young, who is director of music—Mrs. Stair who specializes in young people's work, Supt. Clapp and the concert orchestra.

Sunday, July 29, Rev. Zoller will speak on a "Sunday at Jerusalem" and though we never heard this man we'll venture the assertion he'll prove to be a real gem. We are going miles to hear. The route from this village to the camp grounds is via Jonesville and a fine gravel highway all the way. Don't miss this rare treat. Everything is absolutely free and if you can't get there during the week, Sunday surely ought to appeal to you for the splendid drive and an outing, come anyhow.

A Menace to Childhood

That the tobacco business is one of the most potent perils to our childhood today will be denied by one who is cognizant of actual conditions. Because many seem uninterested in the subject or indifferent to the inevitable consequences of continued neglect in the matter of vital import to the future welfare of the race, the writer has, at the request of friends, printed the following experiences and observations during the recent months.

The first palpable fact is the tremendous increase in the tobacco business during the last few years—particularly the cigarette part of it. Internal revenue reports issued by the government show that in the year 1900 there were manufactured and sold in the United States over two billion cigarettes. Now we are consuming two or three times that many in a month. January, February and March, 1923, showed an increase of more than 40 per cent over that of the first quarter of 1922. If this rate of increase continues, we will soon be manufacturing and selling annually in the United States over one hundred billion cigarettes.

While these bare facts and figures are enough to make any serious minded patriot "stop, look and listen" to see if there is danger ahead, they cannot be ignored by any lover of the race knowing who is responsible for the rapid and constantly increasing development in tobacco affairs.

Who is smoking all these extra cigarettes? Some say, "the women." That old Adamic excuse will not work. While more than 75 per cent of the men of our country use tobacco, considerably less than 10 per cent of the women are slaves of filthy old Judas Nicotinus. The tobacco men are doing all they can to ensnare and banquet on every woman they never shall!

It is a comparatively rare thing to see old men smoking cigarettes. Most of those who smoke use a pipe or cigars. During the war the habit of cigarette smoking was virtually forced by the government and misguided patriots on the hundreds of thousands of the finest, cleanest young fellows that ever offered their brave young lives for the liberty of the world. It was one of the most dastardly needs ever perpetrated by any civilized government upon its citizens.

When these young fellows came home what happened? They were lionized and idolized, feasted and banqueted on every hand. That was all right. We make no objection to it. But what naturally followed? We had in the country hundreds of thousands of High School boys. Just in that peculiar psychological condition, known as adolescence, when ambitious youth is bound to find heroes to worship and imitate, these boys felt that the thing for them to do was to be like these heroic soldier boys. Naturally, they felt they could not be like them unless they smoked cigarettes. The habit immediately spread like a pestilence through the High Schools making victims of many of the girls as well as considerably more than a majority of the boys.

When the writer became General Secretary of The No-Tobacco League of America, nearly three years ago, upon going to a town he was invariably told by the superintendent of schools that the cigarette habit had become alarming among the High School students and he was invited to talk to them about it.

When he had been in the field a few months he noticed a change. School superintendents would say "the habit is terribly bad among the high school pupils but it is also growing at an alarming rate among the boys of the seventh and eighth grades also." When I had been in the work about six years, conditions had changed still more for the worse.

I visited Greenfield, Ohio. The superintendent said, "I am glad you have come. Conditions are bad here and we have just opened up a fight against the habit. I sold of cigarettes to our school children. I am sorry I cannot give you talk to the High School pupils this afternoon, they have on an oratorical contest. But I will bring into the auditorium the pupils of the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades and have you talk to them."

"The pupils of the fifth and sixth grades," I said in astonishment. "I have never yet been asked to talk to any under the seventh grade."

"If I had room in the auditorium," he replied, "I would bring in my fourth grade boys, too. We have forty-two boys in the fourth grade and twenty-six of them confessed to me that they used cigarettes habitually."

A Good Proposition

Narrow-minded individuals are inclined to fight the organization of labor banks and co-operative undertakings. This is wrong. These institutions should be encouraged, for the more laboring men go into business, the more will they understand some of the problems faced by an employer in the financing, operation and management of industrial and banking enterprises.

The laboring man who has his capital tied up in a bank, a sawmill, a shoe factory, a shoe factory or a public utility plant, will be pretty sure to take an interest in maintaining safe and sound conditions in both state and nation, in order that the "America" may pay a fair rate of return on his money invested, which to him, the same as to any other investor represents years of toil and saving.

One safeguard of the nation lies in educating our workmen to take a greater interest in, and become owners of, the securities of our various industrial undertakings.

The Wrong Picture

It seems ridiculous to hear politicians and labor agitators get up and tear the air expounding on the fight between labor and capital. To hear their speeches and public utterances an uninformed person would have a vision of the wealthy men in this nation hiding behind breastworks of money bags and fighting off starving millions who are trying to scale this wall of gold.

In the next breath, we read in our daily papers that a rich employer in New York has turned over his clothing business to a few employees. Automatically these employees must become the hated capitalists and take their places behind the barriers of gold which in turn the workmen they hire will strive to tear down.

Is not this the wrong picture to flash constantly before the eyes of millions? Is not a capitalist any individual who has saved fifty or a hundred dollars and through wise investment, either in a peanut wagon, a bootblack stand or an industrial or government bond, caused that money to earn more dollars?

Is the man who saves one hundred dollars which he puts in a public utility or a sawmill property, where, with money contributed by hundreds of others like himself, he hires thousands of people at good wages, a bad citizen? Yet he is a capitalist just as truly as the man who invests a hundred thousand or a million dollars.

When there is removed the incentive for the man with one hundred dollars to increase that amount to one thousand and then to ten thousand dollars, and so on, there is also removed the chance of reward that is the stake for which the average abled-bodied American strives.

The majority of capitalists to-day started as hand workers, and yet, according to the radical politicians and labor agitators, the salvation of the country lies in denying to others the chance which these men had to benefit themselves and, incidentally, humanity in general through the modern conveniences they have given to the humblest American citizen.

Progressive Florida

Florida's legislature has submitted to the people a startling amendment to their state constitution. It proposes to prohibit the levy of income or inheritance taxes on citizens or residents, for twenty-five years. Evidently someone in Florida recognizes the necessity of first creating capital before taxing it. Think of the inducement a measure such as this would be to the prospective investor and developer of industry, to locate in Florida.

The increased value in real estate and industries that would result from such a measure would undoubtedly furnish the state a great deal more revenue from the ordinary property tax than it can now collect through an income tax from a few citizens who are in increasing numbers putting their money into tax-exempt securities.

The Florida proposition has more hard sense in it than the man who cries, "Tax wealth," would have us believe.

States Utilize Surplus War Material in Road Work

Surplus war material which the Government refused to sell at junk prices is being used in road construction to great advantage by the states to whom the material is transferred, according to the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture.

At the end of the war there was left unused over a half million pounds of rough castings of spare parts for one of the well known makes of motor trucks. They were badly rusted and on casual inspection might have been condemned as worthless junk, but it was found that the necessary machine finishing entirely removed all rust and pits. A small offer for the entire lot was made but was not accepted. A few months ago the state highway department of North Carolina accepted a portion of them as part of its share of surplus war material for use in road building. Surplus war machinery was used for finishing the parts for use in trucks also received as surplus war material. The finished parts are worth 75 cents a pound as compared with an offer of 1 cent a pound for the parts in the rough.

Other states have followed the example of North Carolina and the entire supply has been taken up and will be put to useful service.

State Fair Transportation Committee

H. H. HALLADAY ROBT. WALLACE ROBERT BARNEY

Robert N. Wallace of Saginaw, chairman; Robert Barney of Traverse City and H. H. Halladay of East Lansing comprise the transportation committee of the Michigan State Fair, the nation's greatest show. This great state exposition, which will be held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9, representing investments of $5,000,000, is a tremendous project and the transportation details require a great deal of attention.

Incidentally, the railroads this year will lend co-operation to the state and people by giving a 25 per cent reduction in round trip tickets for those who wish to visit Detroit for the Fair.

State Poultry Men to Launch Association

The Michigan Poultry Producers Association, an organization devoted to the interests of the poultry of the state, was organized and launched upon its career on July 13, when 150 representatives of the industry in the state met at M. C. C. and completed preliminary organization steps.

The new association will plan eventually to get into the co-operative marketing field, it is understood. An effort will be made to help stabilize poultry commodities. Eventual grading of eggs will be one of the definite goals which the organization will work.

Officers elected include: Pres., Geo. Caball, of Hudsonville; first vice pres., C. E. Darley, of White Cloud; and sec'y., J. A. Hannah of East Lansing.

The Michigan poultry producers association is the first definite state organization of poultry breeders. A Michigan branch of the American Poultry association was active for a time, but no distinct state association has ever been in existence, according to J. A. Hannah secretary of the new group.

The fact that 180,000 of the 196,000 farmers in the state, in addition to thousands of "city" poultry owners and the big commercial raisers, maintain flocks of poultry, points to the possibility of the new association becoming one of the largest and strongest co-operative agricultural groups in Michigan.

Prominent among the speakers who addressed the conference during the two day program were: Prof. W. R. Graham of Ontario Agricultural College, Dr. O. B. Kent, formerly of Cornell University, and Prof. E. C. Foreman of the Michigan Agricultural College.

Complete Plans for M. A. C. Farmers Day

With final details of the program announced, and all livestock and special exhibit booths ready for inspection, the stage is set for the sixth annual summer Farmers Day at M. A. C., to be held Friday, July 27.

Dr. Eben Mumford, one of the best known and most talented speakers on agricultural subjects in the state, has been added to the speakers program for the day. Mumford, along with O. E. Bradford, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, President R. S. Shaw, of M. A. C., will preside; there will be a full-fledged band concert, and the annual livestock "style review" and other features will mark the program.

Livestock in the college herds is receiving a final grooming for the day in order to be all "dressed up" for the visitors. Special exhibit booths, each covering some timely agricultural subject, are being erected on the campus near the main ground, and arrangements are being made to have experts from the various farm departments at M. A. C. on the job at these booths to answer questions and be ready for conferences.

The extensive acreage of experimental plots is being mapped out so that guides can lead parties on inspection trips during the day. There are more than 150 acres of farm crops test plots alone on the college farm, but the guide system will make it possible to take in most of the sections easily.

Hundreds of automobiles from all parts of the state are expected to drive in for the day, and special parking accommodations have been provided on the college campus.

The Farmer is the Sufferer

It is quite common to us all when adversity strikes our neck of the woods to bewail our fate and wonder just why we were selected for a visitation of the wrath of the powers that be, but a whole Michigan farmer takes his medicine with as little grumbling as you could expect, and goes about his work to retrieve the loss as best he can. If, on the other hand, he tries another, and sometimes he makes a hit—sometimes we say—hit is not often.

We often wonder why is the farmer seemingly so helpless in the administration of affairs which would tend to get him better prices for his produce? When he harvests the wheat he expects to sell it and nine tenths of the men who raise this grain must sell it—they have no very good storage, and further there is a place for the proceeds of the wheat crop long before it becomes a ready cash. One who has got to be we don't know. The coal mine operator has no such difficulties—his product is in the mine and if he chooses to leave it there all well and good—no rats are going to destroy, and it won't mildew or get rusty. He can bring it to the surface and leave it on the flat cars for 90 years if he wants to and instead of being pinched by the market, he can sell it for a profit.

Your Uncle Samuel accommodatingly puts a high tariff on imported furniture and the home dealer sells at a high profit, because during all these years there has been no demand for furniture than he can supply and more homes are being established constantly, but when the farmer receives a heavy crop of potatoes, somehow the market is flooded, nobody wants potatoes and he goes from dealer to dealer begging for someone to take the tubers at any old price, which is usually below what he can afford to raise them for.

The banker has a surplus of money and he seems always to be able to place this money where it will earn 6 and 7 per cent because the farmer must borrow money and he knows his wheat and his oats went down in price and he must have a few hundred to pay taxes and tide him over, and thus it goes.

Henry Ford finds a market for all the fivers he can build working night and day; over in the war devastated regions they are reaching out for his tractors and his trucks by millions until the multi-millionaire auto king is simply the richest man on earth.

No board of trade gambles on his product or tries to regulate the price; they don't buy option on how many fivers will be produced next year and bargain off the whole crop before they are manufactured. No indeed! Latest quotations give American wheat at below the dollar a bushel and in the case of Michigan wheat is a pretty good crop. Years ago when we had 75c and $1.00 wheat we had correspondingly low prices on everything else so that the lot of the producer was easier, but not so today. The farmer is paying from $35 to 50 per month and board to his hired man, he is paying 50 per cent more for everything in the machinery and tool line for the farm and to cap the climax, he pays 75 per cent more tax on his land and personal property—in other words he is pinched both ways—and he keeps right on sowing and reaping and sad to relate, too many of his kind have reaped the whirlwind.

How long this can go on, is a guess. We currently hope our friends will stick to the Farm Bureau and stick to everything else that binds farmers together to the detriment of the trusts, because if they become demoralized and quit cooperation it will mean ruin.

Time For Vacation

It is probably not generally known that Michigan is becoming famous as a summer resort state nor would one suppose that Michigan's broad meadows and splendid hardwood forests carried a charm for the tired city dweller. The great inland seas which surround our state are in a measure responsible for such attraction and to-day we find Chicago and New York, Cleveland and Cincinnati notables spending the heat of the period at Macinac Island, Petoskey or Sable Island. It is not at all uncommon to meet the President's cabinet members or a Justice of the United States Supreme Court at any of these resorts—taking his daily plunges, burning his notable skin in Michigan's sun and giving to the inner man a liberal portion of Michigan's early fruits.

The palatial steamers which ply between Detroit and the Saginaw, Buffalo and Cleveland, Put-in-Bay or Chicago furnish highly interesting vehicles of travel.

One needs but take time by the forelock some of these hot days, and board the "Western Star" or "Put-in-Bay" at Detroit, leaving full care behind, to realize the importance of an outing. A palace hotel four decks deep is at your service and nothing finer plying the Ocean lanes. Refreshing breezes cool your brow and watery odors from endless miles of tossing "whitecaps" salute the nostrils.

You glance aloft and observe the wireless antennae which means the boat is always in communication with shore and should the least cog of the Leviathan go wrong, somebody on terra firma knows it at once. White winged gulls sail majestically about the rigging. Black smoke pours incessantly from the funnels telling of a mighty power pent up in the boilers. The constant heartbeat of the engine below decks lulls one to a drowse. The orchestra up forward crashes into a merry two-step and the dance is on. One more look and the Captain in the pilot house you see the Captain with his hand upon the pneumatic gear, calm as a moonlit bay. Along the rails sit the young folks, pining for sociability's sake, and you just simply light the brier murmuring "this is the life worth while" a benediction well put.

Shortly after the fog horn at regular intervals apprises the other passengers you are asleep. You dream that a submarine has risen and put a shell right under your chair but awake with a start to find the bunch rushing over to starboard and there a war claims he has discovered a wrecked boat. Sure enough something black and shiny bough on the surface, there bringing visions of a stray barrel or worse—perhaps a "foater."

A nervous woman in the crowd suggests that the Captain should be notified, and another says "get a pair of binoculars." Chances for a little excitement are looking up when the general second officer happens to come along. Training his binoculars he gives the floating object the "once over."

A wide grin comes to his countenance as he remarks: "What ails you guys? That's nothing but a dead horse from the boneyard up river!" The wag melts away in the rabble below decks just as eight bells are struck and it's well he does. Sousa's "El Capitán" thrills out from the forward deck and merry we bow along. Some vacation we should say!

The American Legion Children's Bill

Never in the brief history of the American Legion and the Legion's Auxiliary has there been such universal activity and united cooperation on the part of the whole state as that manifested in behalf of the American Legion Children's Bill for "the kiddies of our buddies," as the Legion home is affectionately called by Legionnaires of the state.

The plan contemplates the providing of home, education and industrial training for the children of deceased and disabled service men, who would otherwise be denied these blessings. The family is daily growing in size, as one by one the children are taken from their unhappy surroundings and transferred to the healthful and inspiring life of the Legion's home. And with each addition the enthusiasm of the members increases, and reports of drives, concerts, parties, shows and tag days, together with many other devices for raising funds are ready to the fore. The state's quota of $60,000 for maintenance will be more than reached within the next few weeks.

The money, appropriated by the state legislature from the War Preparedness Fund, will be used in constructing buildings on the beautiful grounds at Otter Lake. In the meantime, and while the buildings are in process of construction, the children are temporarily housed at Grandstone City, and they present to the visitor a scene of the competent mothers who see to it that nothing which will make their lives better or happier is unprovided.

A notable feature of the work for the children has been the splendid cooperation of the Legion's Auxiliary, which shares equally in the responsibility of the Legion in the care of these little ones. Again and again during the past month emergency calls have been sent to the Auxiliary headquarters in Jackson, calling for clothing and supplies which, in every case, have been immediately forwarded. WOMAN HANDLES BIG WORK AT STATE FAIR

MRS. C. S. EISENBREY
Women of Michigan will be interested to learn that one of the leading executives of the Michigan State Fair organization is a woman. Mrs. Eisenbrey, as assistant secretary and cashier of Michigan's $5,000,000 exposition successfully directs an enormous amount of exacting work, a job that would prove too big for the average business man. Mrs. Eisenbrey bears not only the physical, but the business characteristics of her French ancestors, and the scores of men dealing with her laughingly admit that she is a better "business man" than they are.

Fine Arts Exhibit Will Be Feature of the State Fair

The fine arts will be represented at the $5,000,000 Michigan State Fair at Detroit which opens this year on August 31 and closes September 9.

Collections from art institutes throughout the country will be exhibited and lectures will be given daily explaining the work of the many artists represented and the value of the exhibits.

It is expected that art lovers from all parts of the state will visit the State Fair in order to see this unusual and costly collection.

GROWING INTEREST POINTS TO SMASHING OF RECORDS

One hundred thousand dollars will be given away between August 1 and September 9 at Michigan's great $5,000,000 state fair in Detroit.

This big fortune will be distributed among the raisers of stock and farm products who will show Michigan's best at the fair.

Early applications for entry blanks and other indications give promise that this year's exhibition will be the greatest ever held.

From the Ohio boundary on the south to the copper country of the north the signs of interest are so great that fair officials freely predict the smashing of records and unanimously declare that the farmers and city dwellers by turning out in great numbers will put the state's great exposition far in the lead of all others throughout the nation.

"We are convinced," said Secretary Manager George W. Dickinson, "that we will be fairly overwhelmed with farm products and live stock exhibits. But the more the merrier. This is a state exposition and all concerned want the whole people of the state to feel that it belongs to them."

In addition to the agricultural exhibits there will, according to early plans, be horse racing, auto racing, midway shows worth over $100,000 and scores of other attractions that will make the Michigan State Fair this year the greatest show ever held in the country with the exception of the few big World Fairs.

"This is a chance for the people of Michigan to have the finest kind of a 10-day vacation," Mr. Dickinson said. "The fair is held at a time of the year when people can get away from work and at a time when the weather is ideal for real enjoyment. The big educational advantages and the chances for real sport makes the state's great show the best place on earth for father, mother and child."

"Half a million persons probably will visit the fair this year and plans are being made to make everyone of them comfortable."

LETTERHEADS Come to Us for PRINTING

Prices in 1877

We were recently handed a Tecumseh paper of May, 1877, and just for comparison we are quoting prices on a few staple articles at the time: Wheat $1.90; potatoes $4.35 butter 15c; hogs 65c; hogs 5c; wood $3.00 to $4.00 per cord; flour $1.00 per barrel; eggs per dozen 10c; oats 60c; apples per barrel $1.50; hogs dressed 6c; chickens dressed 10c; turkeys dressed 10c; Thus, we see that with the exception of wheat and flour most farm products were much lower than today. At that time farm laborers were receiving a wage of 50c to 75c per 10-hour day and in many cases longer.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla was the principal "patent" medicine advertised; whiskey was 5c a drink and beer served free with lunches; boycotts were unknown; farmers had no bolls except their heads, and the man who would advocate a union for the farmers was laughed out of the neighborhood, autos were unknown, women wore clothes and men wore whiskers, old maids were advised to marry, young folks went to church instead of the devil, moving pictures were not dreamed of by the craziest of the crazy, the hired man never ran away with the daughter of his employer, preachers didn't umpire base ball games, germs were an unknown quantity to medical men, such men as Harry Thaw couldn't get into print, girls didn't smoke, coal was $7.00 a ton, "barn raisings" were common at which time hard cider flowed freely and when the frame was up it was hard to distinguish the boss carpenter, so mellowed was the crowd, girls went to boarding school instead of College, country villages celebrated July 4th by locking up all the way from one to a dozen "leading citizens" for drunkenness, and everybody was happy.

Obituary

Alice L. Gowdy, youngest child of Bennett Gowdy, a soldier in the war of 1812, and Sally Collins Gowdy; was born Nov. 6, 1842 in Lewis Co., New York. She was one of eight children, six boys and two girls all of whom have preceded her in death.

When a child she came with her parents to Michigan, living in this neighborhood. After the death of her father they returned to New York but when she was a young woman she came back to Adams township.

August 3, 1867 she was united in marriage with Jasper J. Wells of Adams. To this union were born six sons and four daughters all of whom are living except Susie, who was called to the heavenly home nine years ago.

During all these years she has lived in the vicinity of North Adams. Her life necessarily for many years was bounded by the four walls of her home where she toiled unremittently that her family might be reared and educated.

By nature reserved and unassuming she had few intimate acquaintances outside the family circle and her cousins, who, in her young days, were almost like brothers and sisters to her, but she was loved and appreciated by those who knew her best.

Nature, fond of the beauties of nature, flowers, music and books.

She is survived by her husband the nine children, all of whom are married, 23 grandchildren, 6 great grandchildren and other relatives.

She united with the Methodist church at West Wheatland forty-five years ago; later her membership was transferred to North Adams.

During the last months of her life she was tenderly cared for at the home of her son, Herbert where she passed away on the morning of July 10, 1923. "Her children, rise up and call her blessed."

Funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the home of Herbert Wells. Services were conducted by her pastor, Rev. S. B. Ford.

The Supreme Court of Michigan has handed down to Judge Chester two decisions affirming the finding of the Circuit court in the cases of both Burdie Burt and Chauncey Horton for handling liquor in Hillsdale county. The Supreme Court holds that the stewch of liquor or mash on a man's person or his premises is evil and sufficient evidence of good doing, and he can be searched for liquor. These cases were both found guilty in the Circuit court and Judge Chester will now administer their medicine.

Collision Case is Described in Detail

After 40 minutes deliberation the corner's jury at Jackson im-pannelled in the case of the death of Mrs. Nettie Gillaume decided that the woman came to her death as the result of a collision between the two automobiles but failed to fix the blame. As previously announced the accident occurred near Pulaski on July 14 when the car in which Mrs. Gillaume was riding was overturned.

C. W. Bleech and wife were called to Jackson Wednesday to give testimony in the case. The officers found very little loose gravel on the road where the accident occurred and Clarence Phelps, Jackson County traffic officer, declared that with proper precautions on the part of both drivers, the accident could have been averted.

A Message to Children

A few weeks later I was in Winfield, Kansas. I mentioned the above incident in an address. At its close a woman came to me with her boy saying that at Christmas he had passed from the third grade to the fourth. "He has a chum", she said, "who failed to pass when he did. We are sure that the reason why he failed was because he smokes cigarettes."

The next week I was at Enid, Oklahoma. After an address to the High School, the superintendent, E. D. Price, said he wished I would also speak to the eighth grade schools of the city. I arranged to do so. At the first school the principal asked, "How young do you talk to the pupils?" "Just as young as they need it," I replied and told of the experiences narrated above concerning fourth and third grade pupils.

"I can beat that," he replied. When school opened in the fall, there was a little fellow in the first grade who was so sleepy, listless, dull and stupid that it did not take me long to size up the situation with him. One day I said to him, "Willie, don't you smoke cigarettes?" The little fellow perked up, and with a smile and tone that indicated that he was proud of the fact, replied "Yes sir!" "How in the world do you ever come to learn," I asked him, and to my amazement he answered, "My father taught me when I was three years old."

"And that is not the worst of it," continued the principal, "the teacher tells me that she fears the little fellow has taught the habit to a dozen or more of his schoolmates. So I want you to start in the first grade here if you will."

During the last two years, that has not been an uncommon experience. Just a few days ago we were in Danville, Illinois. We addressed a Parent-Teachers Association of one of the schools. We mentioned the incidents given above. At the close of the address, the president of the association referred to them and said, "Well, I do not believe conditions are that bad in this school. Do you think so, Miss M?" she asked of the principal. "I do not think so, was the reply, 'I know they are.' " "What?" the astonished exclamation of the president, "you do not mean to tell that boys in the first grade here smoke cigarettes?" "Ask the teacher of that grade, Miss W," responded the principal and the teacher confirmed the disagreeable fact.

These are not rare, isolated cases. The same condition prevails generally throughout the entire nation. In small villages and hamlets as well as in towns and cities, it is common matter to find not only children in the lowest grades who are smoking, but even quite a number who learn before they start to school.

There can be no doubt of the fact that the growing habit of cigarette smoking among younger and younger children is a large factor in the tremendous increase of the tobacco business in recent years. Many careful observers believe it is the principal means of enlargement of the traffic. It has been estimated that not less than 1500 children twelve years old and under, are forming the habit every day.

That this condition can be ignored or treated with indifference will not be affirmed by any serious minded patriot or by any one who has the welfare of the race at heart. Whatever may be the opinion of the effect of the use of tobacco by adults, every one, even the tobacco men, concede that its use never helped any child and has been the ruin of the nation physically, mentally and morally of thousands of boys who have given promise of usefulness and distinction before their untimely end was wrecked by the tobacco habit.

What is the remedy? Constant earnest and universal instruction in schools, colleges, Sunday Schools and homes concerning the harmful effect of tobacco using, also by a widespread use of printed matter. Drastic legislation for the protection of our children from the Satanic greed of the tobacco traffic. Vigorous enforcement of the laws. The tobacco men are as law-defiant as the liquor men. In many cases it is the same conscientious gang. Lay it upon the hearts and consciences of Christian men and patriotic citizens to abstain from the use of tobacco, not merely from personal reasons, but as an example to impressionable youth and as a way of aligning themselves against the tobacco business that is working such havoc among the children of the nation.—The No-Tobacco Journal

Why Is Not the Bible in Schools?

As we understand it the Bible is not generally read in schools each day in this county or in fact all over Michigan because the Catholics claim it means class legislation to them. In other words any attempt to train the young ideas according to the mandates of the Christian Bible is a reflection on Catholicism because it treats of an entirely different method of observing the higher or spiritual life. The Catholics make a loud outcry each time it is desired to uphold the mandates of our Bible, preferring evidently to allow young people to grow up as libertines and scoffers entirely unless they can be trained according to the Catholic faith.

This looks to the novice like amputating the dog from the tail instead of viceversa. Evidently these Papists believe that the average young person should receive no instruction as to morals other than what is picked up by hook or crook in association with companions. The other day we received a copy of "The New Zealand Bible in Schools Bulletin," and were pleased to read what educators in that far off land are trying to do for the young. For 46 years the Bible has been out of New Zealand schools with the result that they have on the average one syphilis to every 38 of population, 50 per cent of first births are still born and 42 per cent of rejects for military service in the country. Walter Dinnie, Ex-Commissioner of Police says:

"That the manner of education and training of the young is an all-important factor in the subsequent behaviour of both sexes."

"The teaching of the Bible in public schools would result in more purity of thought, speech and behaviour, and that it would come naturally to the young as they grew up to abhor that which is evil."

"That virtue is the first and most necessary endowment that belongs to a man, and there is no such powerful means of exciting virtue as religion. That Bible instruction in schools is a strong factor in the formation of character building, and character building is the most essential and must have a salutary effect on the young as they grow up."

"That a moral training of the young on a religious basis is bound to have a beneficial effect on their after lives, as it would instill into them a beau ideal, without which the temptations surrounding them would surely mean their downfall."

Mexico's Rebellion goes on

Francisco Villa, Mexico's arch murderer and picturesque outlaw, has at last paid the penalty of his misdeeds and is numbered with the slain patriots of the country. For a number of years this bushwhacker brigand frequented the highways and byways of Mexico with his gang and in the name of liberty, plundered and butchered indiscriminately. So smooth was Villa that at one time he was on the point of receiving recognition from the United States Government. It was actually believed at Washington that he was the Savior of the country. After the assassination of General Carranza and of Madero the Americans began to learn something of the real Villa who has proved to be nothing else but a low down murdering greaser same as hundreds of others who have risen to power in the sin-cursed land below the Rio Grande river. One competent American general was sent with a detachment of regular cavalry in to Mexico supposedly to round up Villa after he had recklessly killed our citizens who came in his way, but the expedition returned empty handed as it is believed they were instructed to do. In fact nobody took the Cavalry raid into old Mexico very seriously. It has been reported along with a lot of other rot that Villa married a real decent American girl, but really if he married at all, it was some tough character of the "badlands." Poor decrepit old Mexico is doomed to go on and on as a Catholic mis-managed nation as we have no direct interest in interfering, and the only way we can handle the situation is by guarding our frontiers and keeping the brigands on their own side of the border. The whole Mexican nation apparently are afflicted with general anarchy and blood-thirstiness. Villa was assassinated from a roadside much the same as many an other "patroit." They'll keep him lying around in state as long as possible then go and commit the murder by committing a few more. A thousand years hence when the "greasers" shall have eliminated all but the best and highest toned down there, it is likely we will readily recognize Mexico as a republic.

State Hort Society Plans Annual Tour

Members of the Michigan State Horticultural Society will hold their annual tour from August 7 to 9 this year, according to announcement of T. A. Farrand, of East Lansing, secretary of the society. The tour will start at the M. A. C. Graham experiment station at Grand Rapids, and will cover portions of Kent, Ottawa, and Ionia counties. Orchards, truck gardens, greenhouses, and packing plants will be included in the list of inspection stops arranged on the tour itinerary.

Elevator Exchange has Successful Year

The extent and success of the co-operative marketing movement in Michigan was effectively illustrated by the recent annual meeting of the Michigan Elevator Exchange, and were pleased to read what educators in that far off land are trying to do for the young. For 46 years the Bible has been out of New Zealand schools with the result that they have on the average one syphilis to every 38 of population, 50 per cent of first births are still born and 42 per cent of rejects for military service in the country. tions affiliated with the Michigan state farm bureau are controlled. One properly authorized delegate from each member elevator was allowed to vote for directors of the central exchange and regarding resolutions presented for their consideration.

If resolutions adopted by the delegates to the Elevator Exchange meeting may be taken as an indication of farmer sentiment throughout the state, it appears that Michigan farmers are far from being "dumb driven cattle" but are taking a very active and intelligent interest in recent political developments regarding the control of M. A. C., especially its County agents and extension system. Resolutions adopted declared that cooperative marketing is one of the most important factors in bringing relief to agriculture and that the Michigan Agricultural College through its extension and markets department has achieved great success in establishing the various commodity marketing services such as the Michigan elevator exchange and pledged the support of the Exchange in protecting the college in this work from the interference of politicians or other hostile interests.

The delegates resented the idea sponsored by the State Administrative Board, of taking the control of the county agents away from the farmers of their respective counties and placing it entirely in the hands of the M. A. C. Dean of agriculture.

PRESIDENT DEAD

President Warren Harding passed away in San Francisco at 9:52 last night and the Nation mourns. The whole world is shocked by the calamity as he was supposed convalescent. The end came quietly: he was sitting up with Mrs. Harding and a couple of nurses reading. Suddenly he shuddered and collapsed. Cause of his death was apoplexy. He had suffered for many years with a mustard growth which had undermined his general health and was directly responsible for his untimely death. On the day of his death he went to his home from a restaurant where he was engaged as cashier and lay down on the bed to rest. LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

When Church and School Co-operate

The question of the rising generation is beginning to engage the serious attention of the churches. Millions of children in our country are not reached by the existing agencies. Co-operation with the public schools will do much toward solving the problem. We publish this article not merely to inform our readers, but to give you the basis for constructive work in your own community. In the outlines of the plans which other communities have operated successfully, there should be some suggestions which may be adapted to the needs of your town. You may be able to foster a religious education movement which will bring about cooperation between the churches and the schools of your neighborhood this next school term.

A true education, what is it? H. L. Wayland defines it as awakening a love for truth, giving a just sense of duty, opening the eyes of the soul to the great purpose of life. It is not so much giving words, as thoughts; or mere maxims, as living principles. It is not teaching honesty because "honesty is the best policy," but because it is right. It is teaching the individual to love the good, for the sake of the good; to be virtuous in action, because so in heart; to love and serve God supremely, not from fear, but from delight in His perfect character.

Education had its beginning in an effort to interpret our relations with God. The necessity of a high development of spirituality in order to stimulate the deepest emotions and to strengthen the moral fiber of humanity was early recognized. The best thinkers of this generation are firm in their belief that we are now suffering from a severe laxity in spiritual development, and that the unrest in the world, which takes away a part of the happiness we should enjoy, is largely due to this fact.

Are our public schools, then, fulfilling their entire duty in developing the youth of the nation? Psychology discloses the facts that youth is the "Golden Age" in the child's development; that in no other period in life is such vivacity and unshakable evidence and, because of this, that the need of proper guidance of thought and directing of energies at this time, cannot be overestimated. A new world is opened to the child in which he finds it impossible to readily adjust himself. He is easily led, and if assistance is withheld from him it is not surprising that he should follow the path of least resistance which furnishes desired adventure. On the other hand, the youth is eager to lend himself to any attempt made to lead him to the highest realm of thought and action. He derives satisfaction in finding the ideal realized in a Supreme Being, after which to mould his own character. This appeal awakens his spiritual instinct, and he is willing to become interested and accept instruction which will aid him in arriving at his goal.

With these convictions, is it fair for us to overlook the great opportunity that might be afforded by the public schools, to correctly influence the characters of boys and girls during the most difficult period in their lives? This problem has created interest among educators throughout the United States, and in several states and many localities plans have been devised to meet this particular need in the most conceivable manner, through religious education. Information received in thirty seven replies to questionnaires, one of which was sent to the Superintendent of Public Instruction in each state and in some cases to the superintendent of definite schools, would indicate the status of religious education.

Nine states—Maine, Oregon, Virginia, West Virginia, South Dakota, North Dakota, Oklahoma and Kentucky—offer a course in Bible study to High school pupils.

Five states—Ohio, Alabama, Nevada, Colorado and Texas—report local religious education in a few schools.

Seven states—Alabama, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Florida, Texas and Oregon—report the reading of the Bible in the public schools, in most cases without comment.

Three states—California, Oregon and Illinois—report religious education as being contrary to state law.

Six states—Vermont, Louisiana, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Idaho and New York—report no form of religious education. The plans for the course in Bible study offered to High school pupils vary in the different states, but the outstanding features in general are similar. The plans in all cases are approved by the state department of education. The work is open to all pupils, regardless of nationality or creed, upon permission granted by their parents. Students not desiring this work may substitute some other elective subject, but credit is given for the work to those who take it. Examinations are given twice during the course, on the Old and New Testaments. The Bible study is to be given on week days at definite periods, and in suitable classrooms furnished by the schools or churches.

The editor of this paper thinks it has, and he is looking for it.

When the Michigan State Fair is held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9, the finest babies of Michigan will be there in a great contest for first honors. So it's time for mothers and fathers of this town who can make a little trip to the fair to step forward and show the rest of the state that we have prize winning babies.

There is a great underlying idea in this contest; it is the state's effort to do everything in its power to see that future citizens of Michigan are strong and healthy.

To the parents and to the state the most important thing is the careful physical examination by the physicians. Through this, defects that might later prove handicaps to the children will be revealed so early that they may be corrected.

Entries close August 29th. They may be made by mail or in person on specified blanks, but not by telephone.

A person entering a baby must purchase at the time of making entry an exhibitor's ticket, price $2.00. The ticket will admit the holder once each day.

Examinations of babies will begin at 10:00 Friday morning, August 31 and awards will be announced Saturday, September 8, at 11:00 a. m.

Babies will be examined in the order entries are received, and parents will be informed in ample time of the hour.

No child suffering from any acute or constitutional disease may be entered.

Big Michigan Central Exhibition Train to Tour State Soon

Announcement was made today at the executive offices of the Michigan Central Railroad at Detroit that the "Service-Progress Special", the big New York Central Lines Museum train, showing a century of railroad progress will commence a month's tour of that railroad at Monroe on August 15. In all there will be 65 exhibition stops throughout the State.

The "Service-Progress Special" is a huge traveling museum. It portrays by many novel and historical exhibits the development of the railroads of this country slightly less than a century, as well as the relationship which the railroad bears to industry and agriculture.

With Michigan Central Engine "8000", the first of the latest type of Mikado freight locomotive, for its weight the most powerful in the world, hauling the train (where such a monster may be operated with safety) there will be three engines and eight cars in the big special which is the largest railroad exhibition train ever operated.

Following "8000" will be the universally famous "999", the flyer which thirty years ago made the world's speed record of 122.5 miles per hour. "999" is still an active engine. She is fitted out just as on May 10, 1893, when "Charley" Hogan, the famous engineer, and his fireman "fanned the flames and pulled the Empire State Express at the terrific speed, still unequalled, between Batavia and Buffalo. The venerable Dr. Witt-Clinton of 1831, the first New York Central Lines train, will follow the "999" tenderly cared for, being mounted on a flat car.

This trio of historic engines with a Michigan engine, as the last word shows strikingly the strides made by the railroads in keeping pace with the country's growth.

Up-to-date motion pictures will be shown at the evening stops. These pictures, showing railroad operations, have just been filmed from scenarios by Chas. Frederick Carter, the well known author of "When Railroads Were New". These show, among other things, the handling of farm products from farm to consumer, and the New York City markets. There are several reels, many scenes of which were taken in Michigan.

Locomotive development will also be shown by a marvelous collection of engine models. Chief among these will be the famous Warther Engine Models made by Ernest Warther, which have been adjudged by experts to be the most perfect representation of Locomotive progress in existence. Every step is shown. These models are not confined to exhibits of New York Central engines, but range from the "Tea Kettle" of Sir Isaac Newton, which would not run, to the latest Pacific and Mallet types. The Warther models, which number fifteen, are finely hand carved of wood, pearl, ivory and bone. There are many other notable metal models made to scale from many other sources.

In addition, there will be hundreds of pictures of railroad operations, as well as an exhibit of rails from the strap iron rail on wooden stringers of 1830 to the present heaviest rail, which is 7 1/2" in height and weighs 120 lbs to the yard.

The New York Central Lines are operating the "Service-Progress Special" purely as an educational project in direct response to requests made by the American Farm Bureau Federation and the National Grange.

The Special is now concluding its New York State tour, where throngs are welcoming at each stop.

The subject of taxation is treated in an unusual way on the train.

STATE FAIR RACES PRAISED BY EXPERT

Frank S. Cooke, veteran Detroit newspaperman, a race expert and for many years a writer on racing subjects, in the following article describes the splendid program that Secretary-Manager George W. Dickinson has prepared for the Michigan State Fair, which will be held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9. This authoritative view of the racing program should be of interest to all lovers of the sport.

BY FRANK S. COOKE.

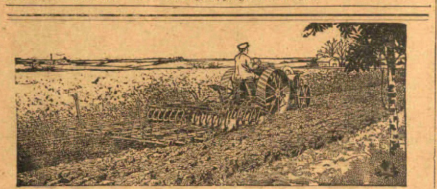

Patrons of the Michigan state fair who like light harness racing will have an opportunity this year of seeing the very best in the world on the mile track where so many brilliant contests were held in the days that the state fair circuit stopped in Detroit.

Re-entry of the state fair into mile track racing has been done in a most pretentious way. Instead of figuring that anything is good enough for the fair-goes the management came out and announced that nothing is too good for the people who annually make Detroit their Mecca during the first week of September.

The race card, built around lines as liberal as those of the average grand circuit meeting, calls for the distribution of about $30,000 among the winners. That would seem to be enough, but, in addition, Peter Manning, the greatest trotter in the history of the turf, is engaged to try and lower the Michigan record on Tuesday, September 4, day and track being suitable for the event.

Coming of Peter Manning to Michigan turns back the pages of the chronicles of the sport three generations. In Kalamazoo in the early nineties was foaled a colt which was named Peter the Great. He raced to fame and after retirement he became the greatest of all trotting stallions. One of his sons, that was a heat on the state fair track some years back and could not go on because he was short of work, was called Axon. Subsequent injury retired that colt to the farm and Peter Manning is his most notable son.

So the coming of Peter Manning will refresh the memories of those who are bald or gray and recall the late stallion Pilot Medium, who was at Battle Creek. Pilot Medium got Peter the Great, and some other prominent trotters. So Michigan

GRAND CIRCUIT MEETING TO BE HELD AT DEVONSHIRE, WINDSOR, CANADA, AUG. 2 TO 8

Huge Crowd of Fans

When it is known that the list of nominations to the early closing stakes—five in number and carrying a total value of nearly $20,000 at Devonshire (Windsor, Ont.)—something of the class and the importance of the contests which will parade before the grand stand the weeks of Aug. 2 to 8, may be surmised. "Never since I have been connected with harness horse racing has the outlook been so good for sensational racing as it does at the present time," is what Wm. Kinane, general manager of the Devonshire meeting said in reply to a question regarding the general trend of the greatest of all out-door sport.

The program as outlined for the Aug. 2-8 meeting consists of five rich stakes and twelve class events, a total of seventeen races, but in all likelihood the large number of entrants in several of the events will necessitate the dividing of such unruly fields into

Noxious Weed Law Inactive

We are informed that the Noxious Weed Law in Adams township is not complied with very generally. Mr. Bird, our highway commissioner, is very careful to attend to placing the large bills announcing the need of cutting the pests and there is no good reason why this law should not be enforced.

There are farms in this vicinity which are heavily infested with not only harmful weeds of the common variety, but are rapidly becoming seeded with the dreaded Canada Thistle. Canada Thistle is probably the worst noxious weed we are obliged to fight. Years ago we used to hear much concerning "red root" in wheat and we can remember as boys when Dad put in whole weeks pulling this enemy and destroying it. Not only Dad, but the whole family usually joined in the battle until today it is a minus quantity.

Canada Thistle however, is not as easily eradicated, sometimes requiring years to kill effectually. It has the advantage insofar that both seed and root remain in the ground and produce abundantly every season. You can go over a patch and as you think pull every thistle, root and all, and inside of four weeks on the same ground you will find another crop springing up from hidden roots. Burdock is of course not desirable but it is far easier to eradicate than the thistle.

Some of you good farmers if you should take a walk around the back pasture might find a number of patches of the dangerous pest, but, you should at once concern yourself about getting rid of it. If you will figure the damage done by spreading the seed among your neighbors in your oats and in your wheat which is sold around the country, I am sure you will want the Canadas annihilated. If your neighbor has none of this he is lucky and you wouldn't feel just right to be the cause of seeding his premises with foul stuff.

We join in requesting our Representative at Lansing, Mr. Rowe, to see if he can not bring about more severe laws concerning allowing Canada Thistle to grow and multiply on farm lands in our district. Mr. Rowe has been a farmer and he needs no information on the spread of the pest. We believe every farmer who deliberately allows Canada Thistle to go to seed on his premises should be subject to a penalty heavy enough that he could hardly afford to pay it.

Politics Have Made Him "Groggy"

As we read the Detroit news, a number of officials in and around the city have followed Senator Couzens' example in coming out flat-footed in favor of light beer and wines. Well, this doesn't mean anything except that we have a different class of officers than we had a couple of years ago. While the dregs slumbered and slept the wets toiled up in the night, and by means of a little extra sweat a d-c couple of "busted" gallus buttons they have succeeded in electing to offices some fellows who were always as strident the temperance issue, but to be beaten from one side or the other, as the case may be.

Mayor Bresnahan, whilom law and real estate dealer—red-hot politician and all-round hot shot of River Rouge, is the latest celebrity to come out with a declaration that the dry law cannot be enforced, and we presume he speaks from sheer experience—in fact we know it. All the suburban towns of Detroit have served as dumping ground on Sundays and it is not to be wondered at if the mayor is worried.

It has been just one thing after another for him ever since he has been in office. Speculators and drunken, would tear through the Rouge and brawls were common occurrences. His chief of police has been obliged to place a double guard on all highways leading out of town, and even accidents and calamities have piled up like a mass of wreckage—and he is discouraged.

Bresnahan is probably a good fellow, but he is mistaken in thinking that the great mass of people want to sympathize in his whisky talks. He'll be as lone as a sheep tick in the Sahara desert. In the meantime the dry forces are getting their blockade runners rendezvoused in the Detroit River and are cutting off the bootleggers one by one, and pretty soon Canada liquor will cease to be obtainable. If run-solden England could only be induced to place some restrictions on Canadian distillers, we could soon put the kibosh on river traffic, but the task of guarding both sides of the border is not for our revenue cutters, and Johnnie Bull is just as obstinate as we was in 1776 and 1812, so he must be shown.

The whisky situation is not the only trouble we have with John Bull. He is just as contrary concerning the St. Lawrence to Ocean way erway and it will take years of hard Christian labor to bring about anything profitable.

Bresnahan is a lawyer; Bresnahan knows where he wants to sit—right in the mayor's chair, and he flatters himself that the astute politics which he advocates, will keep him there. Here's hoping Mr. Bresnahan gets wise to the power of the dregs and keeps his eye on the indicator. He was put in office after one of the hottest campaigns in this state. Charges and counter-charges flew thick and fast and the fact that he won, shows he is a qualified skillful politician—far too smart to be victimized by the whisky crowd.

Buy Your Coal Now!

We did not copy this from the dealers, but we actually believe it would be proper and right to purchase now if you intend using hard coal the coming winter. The coal miners throughout Pennsylvania are on the uneasy seat and have made demands upon the owners of mines which will never be met, and in accordance with the usual back-log tactics of the Union, a strike is p-nding right now and coal will be in get scarce as soon as the fall demand opens. A strike is scheduled for about September 1, 1923, and the men are preparing to walk out at any time. The head of the Union Mr. Lewis, reports he can reach no satisfactory agreement with the operators, therefore a tie-up must come.

We have often spoken on this question but will say again if the Union did not have to be reckoned with and the operators could be chastized into submission, we should then have but few troubles left and the times would seem so good compared to the present, that most of us would be willing to join the Salvation Army!

Says Congress Should Do Something For The Farmer

Arthur B. Williams, newly elected Congressman to Washington from the 3rd district, says in an interview recently with Battle Creek newspaper men:

"While in Washington this week, I strongly urged upon close advisors of the president the imperative necessity for a special session of congress to consider and enact legislation for the further relief of the farmer. The last congress passed a number of laws at the request of agricultural interests, some of which have not yet been put into full effect. Among these is the law legalizing co-operative marketing of farm products in interstate commerce. There should be a further development of this idea and the way made easier for farmers to co-operate in the orderly marketing of their products to avoid so far as possible offering for sale more of the products than can be disposed of at a fair price. We have been talking in this country for a long time that the farmer should have a better business man. I would like to inquire how he can accomplish this as long as he has no voice in determining or other business man could successfully operate on any such basis.

This is the fourth year now that the farmers have been selling many of their principal products for less than the cost of production. The result is a very distressing situation especially in this part of the country. Everyone recognizes the need for a prosperous agriculture. This basic industry is the most important one of all. The question now is not alone of protecting the farmer, but of protecting everybody—since everybody will suffer if the farmers needs are not met.

The condition is so serious in my opinion, as to demand the immediate attention of Congress. Well-balanced, fair-minded, constructive thought, free from partisanship, should be given this subject at once. I do not believe it needs to be left to the radicals and the tinkers in politics, to attend to. The Republic can party as now constituted, can and should do it. The farmers need help in this because there is such a vast number of them and they are so widely situated. The condition of agriculture presents a most serious problem confronting the American people. How best to give aid should have our first and immediate consideration."

Make Big Plantings of Certified Seeds

Pedigreed seed from improved farm crops which was sown on thousands of acres of Michigan farm land this year, according to a report just issued by H. C. C. Rather, secretary of the Michigan crop improvement association and extension specialist at M. A. C.

The certified seed, which is grown by members of the crop improvement association from varieties developed by the M. A. C. experiment station, consistently outyields strains ordinarily planted in the state and result in increased production of better quality crops. As a result, the effect of the large plantings this season is expected to be of marked importance.

Many of the varieties included in the list of Michigan certified grains have won fame throughout the entire country by their winnings at national shows and exhibits. Rosen Rye, first released from the M. A. C. station in 1912, is probably the best known of these pure-bred strains while Red Rock wheat, worthy and Wolverine oats, Robust beans increased their profits by 10 to 50 dollars per acre because of the added productivity of this variety during the past season.

During the planting season just closed, more than 23,000 bushels of certified seed of improved varieties have been shown; enough certified Robust beans were put out to plant 12,000 acres, and enough certified seed corn for 10,000 acres an indication of the rapidly increasing use being made by Michigan farmers of the pedigreed seed stocks. These plantings are said to be proving a potent influence for more profitable crop production in the state.

WARREN G. HARDING

THE HOUR has struck! Warren G. Harding, President of this great Republic, is no more. Complications arising from his recent Alaskan trip and circumstances relating, undoubtedly hastened his death. So important an executive as the President calls forth the greatest grief and respect of every man, woman or child living and era protection of the stars and stripes.

Warren G. Harding was born at Blooming Grove, Ohio, November 2, 1865, just at the close of the great Civil War, a momentous time to enter the struggles of a life destined to be famous. For 36 years after graduating from College he labored as a printer and publisher, and established a flourishing newspaper at Marion, his native state, then events began to happen to the Hardings, for the "art preservative" was not to be his goal. Politics called with no uncertain voice and the Editor came forth from his sanctuary to enter the arena as a State Senator November 6, 1898. A little later the republicans of Ohio sought to honor him with the supreme state office—that of Governor, but the fates decreed otherwise, reserving the suave country publisher for higher ideals.

But this defeat apparently had no effect on his future career as United States Senator at Washington for he was duly elected in 1914. For six eventful years while America was going through the most epochal period of her history, Harding in the Senate chambers of the capitol helped to shape the policies which stamped our country as a world mediator, at the same time taking his pre-graduate preparations for the highest office in the power of the electorate, though he nor any other living soul knew his predestiny.

In the great Republican convention at Chicago mighty factions of his party struggled for days, only to find themselves hopelessly divided, neither being able to place their men, finally compromising upon the one possibility, Warren G. Harding of Ohio. His running mate, Calvin Coolidge of the old Bay State, is likewise an experienced man, though he has been an unknown quantity for the past three years—in fact buried since election. However, we have a replica of the McKinley administration, inasmuch as it has been one of calm, silent inactivity; chained to the chariot of party dictators.

Theodore Roosevelt dropped into the executive chair as a bolt from a clear sky, and we long for Calvin Coolidge to make a copy. McKinley was a dark horse and likewise President Harding, and nothing thrives which germinates in the dark of the moon, because "dark horses" are anaemic.

Funeral services for the Executive were quiet in the extreme at Marion, the home town. No artillery thundered; no battalions marked time; no cavalry rumbled through death-stilled streets. Nothing but home-like simplicity marked the interment of an editor-statesman, but like the man he was they laid him away in national reverence.

Do You Know These Facts About the State Fair?

The Michigan State Fair, the Nation's greatest educational exposition, held at Detroit each Fall, will be held this year from August 31 to September 9. Here are some facts about it given by Secretary-Manager George W. Dickinson.

A $5,000,000 Fair. A million this year for improvements and additions.

Half a million persons to attend.

Racing horses and racing automobiles to smash records.

The greatest fireworks exhibition, including daylight displays, and accompanied by five elephants with native Hindu drivers.

The greatest dog show. Champion police dogs to show how they catch criminals. A cat show, a model for all others.

One hundred thousand dollars in premiums for live stock and agricultural exhibits.

What officials believe to be the finest carnival company in the country to put on 22 attractive and clean shows on the "Midway" where the carnival spirit reigns.

Great special features of national reputation with visitors prominent from coast to coast.

Babies from one to three years, including twins, triplets, may be entered in the baby show.

Lectures, tests and expert judging for the benefit of the farmers.

A big organization is working to do everything possible to make a farmer's visit profitable and to furnish entertainment of the highest order for every woman and child.

Give your family a vacation—attend the Michigan State Fair.

Michigan's black bear has been fortunate enough to be classed as a game or fur-bearing animal, he would be protected during certain months of the year by state law. Attempts in this direction to make the open season on black bear the same as the open season on our Virginia white-tailed deer failed during the last session of the legislature. Why, no one knows. The time is not far distant when this splendid specimen of romantic Michigan wilderness will become extinct. There is not a man who doesn't wish in his own heart that in addition to his buck—that he might bag a black bear during the late autumn months while on his northward trek.

There are few black bears remaining in the upper counties of the Lower Peninsula and possibly a larger number in the Upper Peninsula. The sportsman of this state more as a game animal than as predatory has always been a conundrum. The bear is not entirely predaceous. There may be occasions when a bear becomes "bad". He is more essentially a vegetarian, living on that which the woods affords him. He is a great hunter and lover of berries, tender grasses, shrubs, wild cherries, plums, beech nuts, wild honey and others from out the bounteous store of Nature. The only time his species is considered dangerous is when the female has been wounded, possibly in the defense of her cubs, and other times those who know him best will tell you that he is perfectly harmless, more frightened of you than you should be of him.

His flesh is extremely palatable. His hide and fur valuable. He has his place among the game animals of this state. He should be so classed and protected. Several of our states and even the Federal Government have restrictive laws in the pursuit of the black bear.

Give this splendid animal the consideration it deserves.

Michigan's Timber Dwindling

Figures prepared by the forest service at Washington for the last census, 1920, although indicating that Michigan has dropped far behind in the production of softwoods still show that our hardwood production as compared with all of the states is well toward the top.

When Michigan harvested its magnificent white pine, the belief was general that as a lumber producing state we were through. This reaction is far from the truth. The census reveals some rather interesting facts and figures.

Michigan in 1920 had 243 sawmills in operation and her remaining forests produced 206,840 M board feet of Hemlock, 36,186 M board feet of White Pine, 8,686 M board feet of Spruce, 12,457 M board feet of Larch, 5,252 M board feet of Cedar, and 5,321 board feet of Balsam Fir. These are our so-called softwoods. As compared with the timber producing states this placed Michigan third in the production of Hemlock, fourth in Fir, fifth in Larch, seventh in Cedar, eighth in White Pine and thirteenth in Spruce.

In the total of hardwood products produced Michigan occupied fourth position, and in sawmills twenty first.

Arkansas was first in softwood production, Wisconsin second, West Virginia third.

In the production of hardwoods a different tale is unfolded. Michigan leads all states in the production and cut of Maple and Beech and is second in Birch, Elm and Basswood.

Encourages Tree Planting

"Plant Michigan! Tree acres to pine trees," says Charles E. Lawrence of Caspian, Michigan. "How? Why? The answer is simple," continued Mr. Lawrence. "If every sportsman who takes out a hunting license during the deer season would sow a few seeds of either white, Norway or jack pine, throughout his favorite hunting territory, don't you realize that practically all of Michigan's idle acres would in a short time send forth a fine crop of trees. I have suggested to the Conservation Commission," said Mr. Lawrence, "that the department furnish with every deer hunters license sold this year a small packet of these seeds with simple instructions as to planting and if the hunter has any pride in Michigan he would see to it that they were properly planted. It is a simple suggestion but one that would help the conservation movement in this state beyond imagination. Sportsmen generally realize the necessity of a continuous timber growth. It means permanent game and breeding grounds. The slight effort would be to their ultimate advantage and I believe that they stand ready to do this."

Seek Best Treatment For Muck Soil

The needs of muck soils of Michigan and the best treatments for them are being studied in an extensive series of experiments being carried on by specialists from the soils department of the Agricultural College.

The experiments which are being conducted under the direction of Paul Harmer, M. A. C. muck specialist in co-operation with local county agents, are the most extensive that have been made in the state. These experiments will cover all phases of muck soil problems. They will take up the question of the kinds and amount of fertilizers needed in different types of muck, the moisture conditions desirable for various crops, the cultural methods giving the best results, and the time element in the application of fertilizer.

State Potato Tour

The potato tour starting at Elmira on August 13 and swinging through the northern counties of the state, has been arranged to include Cadillac on August 15 and Cadillac on August 16 for the fifth annual meeting of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange one of the largest growers organizations in the state, according to J. W. Weston, extension specialist from the Michigan Agricultural College, who is arranging details for the junket.

At the Cadillac meeting members will be present from 132 associations. Walton Peet, department of co-operative marketing, American Farm Bureau Federation; Herbert F. Baker of Cheboygan; Prof. Eben Mumford, of the M. A. C.; Extension Department will be the principal speakers to appear on the program.

The potato tour will start at Elmira, Antrim county, on August 13, later reaching Kalkaska, Wexford, Osceola, Mecosta, Alpena, Presque Isle, Cheboygan, Emmet, Charlevoix and Osego counties. The trip will end at Gaylord on the 25th. Actual demonstrations on various phases of the potato industry will be given at all fields visited, an effort being made to make the tour as educational as possible.

"Three main points will be stressed during the trip," says one of the experts. "An effort will be made to acquaint growers with the value of certified seed with insect pests, and with potato diseases. The importance of proper agricultural methods will be brought out, and finally the losses sustained annually through careless handling and poor storage will be emphasized."

Legion Extends Scope

The American Legion in its work of extending relief to the widows and children of the deceased and disabled service men who are being assembled at the American Legion Children's Bilet, has found several cases of destitution among the foreign born people of the country.

There were many young married men when the war broke out who, because they had not been naturalized, were unable to get into the American army. They did however, get permission to return to their native lands where they fought bravely on the side of the Allies. Many of these prospective American citizens were slain in battle or died from exposure while others came home diseased and disabled, hence could not care for their families.

These needy cases were brought to the attention of the Billet Committee the scope of the work was immediately enlarged to include the little ones of these foreign born, whose mothers have the additional handicap of being unable to understand the language and customs of our country. And soon, a goodly number of these little ones born on American soil and whose fathers have paid the supreme sacrifice in the interest of the common cause of humanity, will be happily housed at American Legion Children's Bilet.

In continuance of its usual custom the Ford Motor Co., of Detroit will begin the distribution of $1,000,000 to its employees, of whom there are 30,000. This is the dividend sharing policy of the big auto firm and has exceeded anything ever attempted by any other concern whatever.

A new traffic ordinance conforming to state statutes, will go into effect at Lansing in thirty days. Under the terms of the new city ordinance, all vehicles must come to a complete stop six feet from a street car loading or discharging passengers and come to a complete stop before entering streets where street cars operate. New parking regulations for the downtown and residential sections are also provided. In the past two years so many murders have been committed by careless automobile drivers that some thing had to be done—that's all. A little more concern for the lives of pedestrians and a little less profanity in the halls of Congress concerning the gas tax would be a Godsend to our state.

It is currently reported that Michigan state has authorized the construction of 75 miles of gravel road to cost right around $1,000,000 and the contract has been let for 30 miles of concrete highway also.

The Great Northern Steamship Co. of Boston are giving round trip tickets to Europe for $110. Think of it! This is the cheapest ever known. See ad on page four.

Have you noticed the drop in the price of gasoline? Now is the time to fill your tank. 14c is the lowest mark for gasoline in many years. What does it mean? Simply this: Gas companies have rolled up a tremendous profit since the war by charging more than they should, now the Standard Oil Co., which is rich enough to sell gas 3c below cost if necessary for five years, has put up a mighty effort to crush every other competitor and drive him out of business, after which gas will begin to go up as coal has done, and there will be no limit to the price. There must have been some kind of a high ball given for this action direct from Washington.

How Old Is That Egg?
Rages decrease in density as they grow older. Their age may be ascertained by their specific gravity. Melt two ounces of kitchen salt in a pint of water and place the raw egg in it. When first laid they will descend to the bottom, when one day old they will almost touch it; when three days old they will swim, and when older they float on the surface. The more they project above the water the older they are. A preserved egg will float lower than one untreated, as it is coated so as to make it heavier. Preventing change of the contents. Its cracking in hot water is not due to badness, but to the same cause—the swelling which prevents the escape of gases as they expand with the heat.—New York World.

Lineum Turp Compositum.
Six countries, thousands of miles distant, aid in providing materials for the finished lineum, says the Detroit News. The manufacture of lineum depends on three main countries—Cork, Linseed oil and burlap. Cork, the chief ingredient, comes from Spain, Portugal and northern Africa, where thousands of people are engaged harvesting it from the trees. The linseed oil is pressed from the flaxseed from the Argentine republic, which produces the greatest amount of flaxseed in the world. Burlap is made from jute grown in India, but woven in Scotland.

St. Louis smoker moves into second place

With 405 cans to his credit Mr. Thurston smokes his way towards the lead

Mr. Byron Thurston of St. Louis is more than qualified for membership in the Edgeworth Club. But his position in the championship-smoker class is not so well established. Mr. Thurston's interesting record follows:

Royal Gavel, St. Louis, Mo.
Larus & Brother Company, Richmond, Va.
I have heard of great smokers of tobacco.
I have smoked 405 cans of Edgeworth Plug since the first of January, and I would be glad to hear from you. I smoke one can in two days and enjoy every pipette.

(Signed) Byron Thurston.
More than a year ago an Edgeworth smoker from Burlington, Vermont, Mr. H. F. Baldwin, wrote to inform me that he had smoked more Edgeworth than any other living man. At that time he had smoked over 1000 cans of the same size purchased by Mr. Thurston, distributed over a period of three months.

So while it appears today that Mr. Thurston is well behind the leader, if he continues smoking at the rate of one can every two days, he may be well in advance of the leader in a few months. Still, it is a big country and there are a lot of Edgeworth smokers. You can never tell when a new record will be hung up to the envy of all smokers. Edgeworth has something about it that holds smokers to their loyalty year after year.

If you have never tried Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will be glad to send you free samples of both Edgeworth Plug and Ready Rubbed.

Then you can smoke a few pipes and judge for yourself whether or not the tobacco is as good as a great many veteran pipe smokers claim it is. Just send your postal note to Larus & Brother Company, 78 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va., and the free samples will be forwarded to you promptly.

If you will also include the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated. Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug and Ready Rubbed come in small, pocket-size packages, in attractive tin tins and in handy in-between sizes.

To Simple Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly meet your demand by parcel post a one- or two-ounce carton of any size of Plug Slice or Ready Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Quick Learner.
A man who believed he knew all about parrots undertook to teach what he thought to be a young mute bird to say "Hello!" in one lesson.

Going up to its cage, he repeated that word in a clear voice for several minutes, but the parrot, paying not the slightest attention.

At the final "Hello!" the bird opened one eye, gazed at the man, and snapped out, "Line's busy."—Stray Stories.

HARDING LAID OFF IN HOME TOWN

Marion Funeral Ceremonies for Her Beloved Citizen Are Simple.

IMPOSING CAPITAL SERVICES

Impressive Military and Civilian Procession from White House to Capitol—School Children Strew Flowers—Body Lies in State in Rotunda—Vast Crowds Line Streets and Pay Tribute at Bier.

Marion, O.—Followed by a throng of mourners, the highest in the land and the hundreds who had been his friends, the body of Warren G. Harding was taken to the Marion cemetery Friday and placed in the receiving vault.

No imposing ceremony, no military display, no marching of organizations marked the mournful event, because Mrs. Harding wished it so, but the simple services were being held in the cemetery, in every city, every town and village, every home of the broad land, and the nation was paying tribute to the memory of their chief whose life truly was sacrificed in their behalf. Barter and trade, business and industry, the world's activity that could be suspended ceased for the time, all sports and pastimes were abandoned—the nation mourned.

Great Throngs in Marion.
Here in Marion were gathered a host of prominent persons from President Coolidge down and including the leading government officials, senators and representatives, governors of the states and delegates to Congress, heads of cities and organizations. All day Thursday and on Friday morning special trains brought in the throngs. The funeral train was being pulled by automobile. So great were the crowds that it was necessary for the state officials to arrange to have the roads cleared of automobiles and patrolled to prevent accidents.

Thursday morning the funeral train arrived from Washington, and Mr. Harding's body was taken at once to the residence of his father, Dr. George T. Harding. From 2 until 10 p. m. that day and from 9 a. m. to 10 p. m. Friday opportunity was given Ohioans to view the face of their dead friend. Then, quiet without pomp, the casket was taken to the cemetery. Following the hearse were the members of the Harding family; next the President of the United States with members of the cabinet and other high officials; then came Mr. Harding's close friends and neighbors, and after them a great concourse of mourners.

It was Mr. Harding's wish that all who wished should have a place in the funeral procession. Among those who accepted the invitation were all the employees of the Marion Star who had worked for Mr. Harding for years, and the Ohio newspaper publishers, members of the Associated Ohio Dailies, in which organization Mr. Harding had taken an active part. Deputies and members of the Ohio National Guard were present for the day, and indeed all business activity in Marion ceased throughout Friday. Not as a part of the funeral procession, but as a mark of respect, the heavy traffic, 3,000 troops of the Ohio National Guard were present.

Simple Service the Ceremony about three o'clock, the cortege proceeded to the receiving vault, and there the brief services were held. Prayers, readings from the Scriptures and the singing of Mr. Harding's favorite hymns—that was all. It was simple and dignified, as was befitting the wishes of the deceased. The casket was then taken to the Marion Star, where it was placed in the care of Mr. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, who was the officiating minister. The services were in charge of Rev. George M. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, who was the officiating minister. The services were in charge of Rev. Jesse Swank, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Mrs. Harding's pastor.

Troops Guard the Casket.
Instead of being interested in the family plot, the body of Mr. Harding was placed in the receiving vault, and there it will remain until a mausoleum has been erected to receive it. As the weeping family and friends moved away from the vault, National Guard soldiers stepped forward and took their place on guard. In a few days they will be the only guard to guard the body of the President.

The special train from Washington arrived in Marion at 10:30 p. m. Tuesday after a transcontinental journey of 96 hours and 10 minutes. It was 9 hours late—the longest delay in the history of the railroad. The train was met by the local train, and the body was taken to the Marion Star. The body was taken to the Marion Star, where it was placed in the care of Mr. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, who was the officiating minister. The services were in charge of Rev. George M. Landis, pastor of Trinity Baptist church, who was the officiating minister. The services were in charge of Rev. Jesse Swank, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, Mrs. Harding's pastor.

MARION A CITY OF SORROW
All Other Interests Forgotten In Grief for the Loss of Dear, Loved Fellow Citizen.

Marion, O., Aug. 17.—All business activity ceased in Marion today when the news of the death of President Harding was received. The Marion Star, for years owned and published by Mr. Harding and his wife, suspended publication for the day in order that the employees might take part in the last rites over Mr. Harding's body.

Printers, editors, reporters, office employees and newsboys who worked with the Hardings on the Star for years had a prominent place in the funeral procession.

Although there was no military pomp in connection with the funeral procession or the funeral services at the cemetery, 3,000 Ohio National Guard troops were present and escorted the heavy casket. A field hospital company also was here.

States of America, most powerful and wealthiest country of the world, received a magnificent tribute Wednesday from official Washington, capital of the nation, preliminary to the final interment of the remains at Marion, O., his home city.

Ten thousand school children escorted the hearse through Pennsylvania avenue.

Scripture: Twenty-third Psalm. Mr. Harding's death was a great loss to the nation. He was a great leader and a great man.

Revelation, twenty-second chapter, first to fifth verses.

Prayer, Dr. James Sherr Montgomery, chaplain of the house of representatives.

When Church and School Co-operate

Obviously, from reports received the local school plans are as various as those for high schools. Van Wert and Grandview Heights schools of Ohio submitted some what similar plans. Under the Van Wert plan, permission is granted for the public school children to spend two half hour periods each week for Bible lessons if their parents so desire. Cards are put into the hands of the parents for their signature if they want their children to avail themselves of the religious instruction that is provided for them, and no pupil is permitted to take the work until he has returned the card properly signed by his parents. In that way the work is made strictly elective.

Pupils not taking the work are given individual work by the teacher, and are left free to work at anything the teacher assigns. Eighty-eight per cent of the pupils take the work. No credit is being given as the work has not extended above the sixth grade, and it has not seemed necessary in order to maintain good interest and effort on the part of the pupils.

The work was started in the fall of 1918, and for the first and second years it was financed by popular subscription, but since that time each of the ten cooperating churches agreed to assume such a percentage of the total budget for the year as the pledges from their members during the first two years had borne to their total expense. The churches have agreed to put this item into their annual budget, assuring the permanency of the work in the future.

In two of the four ward schools buildings there were vacant rooms not needed for regular school work. The Board of Education, upon petition, granted the use of these rooms for Bible study work. In the other wards the churches were so crowded that rooms could not be spared, so the classes were taken to the near-by churches and the Y. W. C. A.

The instruction is given by one teacher trained for the work, and a part-time assistant. The work in Van Wert has been successful, and has attracted nation wide attention.

In the Grandview Heights schools the work also includes the first six grades, and pupils may elect the work upon request from their parents. Since the work is given only in the first six grades, no credit is given other than that the work is appreciated by most of the parents. About 95 per cent of the pupils elect it.

Religious instruction is given in the school building according to a regularly worked out schedule, by a trained experienced person employed by the church.

There is one plan which does not come under either of the previous classifications because of its exclusiveness in methods and subject. This plan, as prepared by the State Board of Education in the state of Mississippi, consists of a course in Moral Instruction to be used in all the public schools of the state. An outline of the subject matter as contained in the Bulletin published is as follows:

The Ten Commandments, the additional Great Commandment, the Golden Rule, Laws copied from the Children's Code of Morals prepared by Prof. Hutchins, president of Berea College, including the Law of Health, the law of self control, of Self-Reliance, of Reliability, of Clean Play, of Peity, of Kindness, of Loyalty, Maxims of Conduct, Manners and Conduct in school and out, Introductions, Table Manners, The Lord's Prayer.

With such a variety evidenced in the plans of religious and moral instruction, there can be no doubt of the fact that this phase of education is in an age of experiment. However, the "situation has been well stated in a reply from Burr F. Jones, Supervisor of Elementary Education in Massachusetts:

"Character training and religious in the duties of citizenship, both of which involve morals and ideals of living, have been emphasized in the past and are now coming to be even more strongly emphasized in the public schools. With the course of study being developed in these fields, the schools will in the future more definitely and consciously develop this aspect of educational work."

I believe that plans should be made so that religious training would be given in connection with all the public schools. In this work the creed of any church should be eliminated and emphasis should be placed on the moral code and only the general principles of Christianity. Such a plan should find the support of all the people, and should not involve the petty dissatisfaction of the various denominations which has been a real handicap on progress in the past.

The Richest Man in the World

There is some dispute today as to who is the richer, Henry Ford or John D. Rockefeller and all agree it lies between these two men. This is a funny circumstance yet it is no more than one could expect. The one is the largest builder of gas buggies in the world and the other specializes in the gas, two industries which are linked together with a mighty cat; neither could do much business without the other so it makes precious little difference who is the richest. "John D." is lauded to the skies because he hands a few paltry millions once in a while to educational institutions, which don't mean anything since it amounts to a gigantic advertisement every time he does it, and your Uncle Henry makes munificent donations to problems of peace and Muscle Shoals projects, which all goes in the wash. We don't know of many objections to either, since most of us want to ride the gas buggy which we could not do without these wonderful men. There is one real fact sticking out like a sore thumb and that is neither of these men can buy a nomination if he wanted to, so we can't conscientiously say that money controls politics.

New Law Will Protect Buyers

Considerable interest was developed in the recent session of the Michigan State Legislature (by the proposal for the certification by the State Department of agriculture of all improved and unimproved land sold in Michigan. As finally passed, the provisions of the act are made entirely optional. The evident purpose of this type of legislation is to protect buyers of Michigan land from misrepresentation of unscrupulous land sharks, and to restore the confidence of the buying public in Michigan real estate.

Administration of this new statute which will become effective August 31, is placed in the hands of a three man commission, composed of L. Whitney Watkins, state commissioner of agriculture, R. S. Shaw, dean of agriculture at M. A. C. and R. A. Smith, state geologist.

The new commission will examine and license the inspectors who will conduct the certification surveys. Any farmer or land owner may secure the services of these approved inspectors, who will examine his land, study the agricultural conditions of the community, and issue a report in which a recommendation is made regarding the agricultural adaptabilities of the land studied, its market conditions, climate and recreational and tourist possibilities.

This preliminary survey which is paid for directly by the land-owner, is then checked up and verified by an inspector maintained by the state for this purpose. If he approves the report of the first inspectors an inspection certificate is issued, which becomes a legal document and accompanies the deed to the land.

The commission is also empowered to create a list of accredited dealers who agree to confine their selling of unimproved Michigan lands to lands which have been certified and who agree to conform to the provisions of the act.

Announce Plans For Second Years Work

Nearly 50,000 rural school children of Michigan learned what and how much to eat last winter through the extension nutrition classes conducted by the Michigan Agricultural College. The work, tried out in 1774 different schools of the state, was so successful that it has been decided to offer an advanced course to all schools that completed the course last year.

The advanced course which will be ready for distribution on Sept. 1 includes a series of stories written in attractive style and containing scientific truths, pictures and illustrative material, and a set of wall roll charts.

The first year course will also be offered again this year to all schools of the state that did not have the course last year. Either the advance or the first year's course will be sent free of charge to any school upon application to the extension division of the Michigan Agricultural College.

The first year's course contains various stories studied each month during the series, taking up the value of milk, vegetables, fruit, adequate breakfasts, proper amounts of rest, and "growth" foods in relation to the general problems of nutrition.

Establishment of correct nutritional habits among the young people of the state, particularly in the rural districts of the state has been the aim of our nutrition lessons," says Miss Mariel Hopkins, nutrition expert of the College staff. "Modern science has taught us the absolute need for proper nutrition among our children if growth and development are to be attained in full measure. Establishment of correct habits among the school children now will go a long way in insuring more healthy and alert young manhood and young womanhood in the years to come."

A MIDWAY ATTRACTION

The mysteries of Egypt are vividly portrayed in one of the thrilling shows of the Great Midway, at the Michigan State Fair, which is being held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9, this year.

State Fair Entertainment Committee

W. R. ROACH ARTHUR PETERSON G. S. BARNES

Arthur Peterson of Escanaba, chairman; George S. Barnes of Battle Creek and W. R. Roach of Grand Rapids compose the entertainment committee of the $50,000 Michigan State Fair which will be held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9. It is their duty to plan the many costly attractions that have proven so popular with the thousands of men, women and children who visit the fair each year.

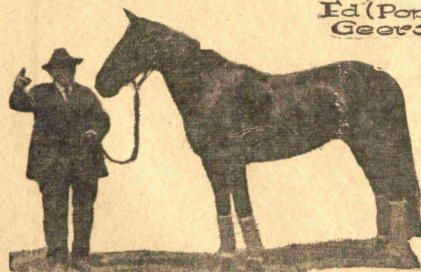

DEVONSHIRE'S OPENING DAY WILL BE "GEERS' DAY"

August 2 Dedicated to "Grand Old Man"—Will Try for New Canadian Track Record With Sanardo.

It was a happy thought that prompted the management of the coming Grand Circuit meeting at Devonshire track, August 2 to 8, to secure for its opening day attraction the presence of that "Grand Old Man of the Turf" Edward F. Geers, known the world over as "Pop," dean of all turf drivers and the most beloved. Mr. Geers will open the meeting by driving his famous little free-for-all pacer Sanardo, 1:59 1/4, in an effort to set a new pacer record for Canada, and it is needless to say that the thousands who will be present on the occasion will be pulling for the G. O. M. as only real horsemen and women can pull.

Auto Tourists Sure of Fun At State Fair

Rigid regulations for neatness, comfort, safety and enjoyment will feature the tourists' camp at the Michigan State Fair. Fair Secretary-Manager George W. Dickinson announced.

No Gypsy or other objectionable tourist will be allowed to camp within the grounds. "Every auto tourist who drives through the fair gates with his camping equipment will be assured a most enjoyable time," said J. H. Brown, who will be in charge of that feature. "The camp will be in an ideal place and their will be every convenience. When the car owner drives in he will get tickets for one day for each member of his family. Then he will drive to the state assigned him in camp. Registration of the car owner and his family comes next."

LAPLEUR AND PORTIA

Acrobats of great skill whose exhibition of grace and daring are one of the features on the $50,000 free attraction program at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit, August 31 to September 9.

Threat of Coal Shortage and Exorbitant Prices

Consumers of anthracite coal are facing another threat of shortage and extortionate prices not only because of the impending strike of the miners but also because the little protection that was given them last September in the form of the law creating the office of Federal Fuel Distributor and prohibiting profiteering is about to be withdrawn.

This law expires by express limitation on September 22. As Congress will not be in session until next December the statute can not be continued in operation and no new legislation to take its place can be enacted in time to be of any value.

Republican politicians in New England are showing uneasiness at the prospect that the Washington administration will be held responsible for the suffering and gouging of the people of that section are likely to experience this year. The recollection of the hardships and profiteering to which last year's famine exposed these consumers is still fresh in their minds.

M. A. C. Has New Head

Prof. Harrison Hunt, head of the Department of biology in the University of Mississippi, has been named head of the department of sociology and geology at the Michigan Agricultural College, according to announcement made by the college officials this week.

Prof. Hunt succeeds Walter Barrows who died in February 1923.

Prof. Conger who has been acting head of the department since the death of Doctor Barrows, resigned some time ago to accept a similar position at the Ohio Wesleyan University. Prof. Hunt comes highly recommended to assume the important post at M. A. C. He graduated from Alleghany College in 1912, later receiving his Ph. D. at Harvard. He has been head of the biology department of the University of Mississippi for the past four years, and professor of zoology at the University of West Virginia for three years.

He is a member of the advisory committee of the American Genetic Association and of the war committee of the Eugenics Research Society. He has been the author of several articles on genetics and eugenics for scientific publications recently, and is very well known in these fields.

Testing Muck Soils

The work is conducted on 34 plots located on 31 farms in 28 different muck areas of the state. Fourteen different fertilizers on the average, are being tested on each set of plots. On most of these projects general farm crops that are adapted to muck soil are being raised. These include celery, onions, mint, cabbage, cauliflower, lettuce and several root crops. One or more of these experimental projects is being carried on in the vicinity of Lansing, Maan, Gaytown, Lumb, Eaton Rapids, Jackson, Fennville, Centerville, Seney, Ann Arbor, Hastings, Bay City, Holland, Deatur, Hudsonville, Hamilton.

Poison Whiskey

Ninety per cent of the whiskey sold in Detroit and throughout the middle west as coming from Detroit is Synthetic liquor made from denatured alcohol extracts and other concoctions colored, flavored, bottled, labeled and stamped so that only a chemist can detect the difference between this poisonous stuff and the real article. People throughout the State of Michigan and adjoining states seem to think as long as their liquor comes from Detroit that it must be a product of Canada. This statement is based upon seizures and other cases made by James R. Davis, Federal Prohibition Director in the past two years and the "Dry Navy" operating in the Detroit River has seized boat loads of alcohol being shipped into Canada where it was undoubtedly intended for use in the manufacture of whiskeys.

Make Hay Fever Reservations Now

Numerous inquiries are received by the Michigan department of health pertaining to centers in Michigan free from hay fever. Writes one interested, "I shall appreciate any data you can send me or refer me to, showing the location of districts in Michigan where hay fever is absent. A group of women who usually suffer from hay fever wish to find a place for the summer where they may be free from the affliction." Says another, "I am subject to ragweed hay fever and wish your opinion on hay fever resorts in Michigan. I have heard that Manitowish is free from hay fever but want to be sure that this is true. Also how about Frankfort, Glen Haven, North Port and Traverse City."

These are but eloquent examples of the increasing attention unfortunate hay fever victims are accorded their annual affliction. They have suffered needlessly and there is no reason why they should continue to do so. 95 per cent of all hay fever victims suffer from the variety, caused by the ragweed which pollinates in August and September. Hence the localities recommended by the Michigan department of health are the ones known to be free from ragweed. They receive prime consideration.

Already the price of anthracite is soaring and even in Washington, D. C., under the eyes of Federal officials supposed to be clothed with the authority and duty to prevent profiteering there is a complaint from consumers. A consumers' organization has found, according to the president, that the supply and the price of anthracite are controlled by interests which seem to have an understanding among themselves.

Notice of Meeting

To Whom It MAY CONCERN: Whereas: On the 3rd day of August, A. D. 1923, an application was filed with Robert W. Bates, County Drain Commissioner of the County of Hillsdale for the locating, establishing, deepening, widening or extending of a certain drain which said drain was described in said application, as follows, to-wit: Beginning at a point at the upper terminus of the Adams Highway Drain, and extending in a north and easterly direction, terminating at a point about 32 rods east of the intersection of Hillsdale and Main streets in the Village of North Adams, said point being about 128 rods w. of the e. e. corner of Sec. 3, T. 6 S., R. 2 W. that said Drain will traverse the Township of Adams in said County. Therefore, notice is hereby given that in accordance with the statute in such case made and provided, a meeting of the Township Board of the township of Adams will be held on the 24th day of August, A. D. 1923, at the Lumber Yard in North Adams in the Township of Adams, in said County of Hillsdale at one o'clock in the afternoon of said day for the purpose of determining the necessity of said Drain, and whether the said proposed drain is necessary and conducive to the public health, convenience and welfare. Dated this eighth day of August, A. D. 1923. L. R. KEMPTON Township Clerk of the Township of Adams.

Year Book Now Ready

The Year Book of the department of agriculture for 1922 is now available for distribution. The latest publication of the department contains a vast amount of useful information of particular interest to farmers, agriculturists and cattle-growers. Indeed there is much that would interest the general public, covering as it does a wide range of subjects outside the field named. If you will address your Congressman, Hon. Arthur B. Williams, 626 Post Building, Battle Creek, Michigan, he will be pleased to send you a copy of the Year Book.

Bureau is Ready With Fall Seeds

Preparations to handle a big volume of fall seed grains are being made by the Michigan State Farm Bureau seed department. With prices of certified grain seed lower than ever before, due to the low prices of commercial grains, there is every indication that an increasing number of Michigan farmers will plant certified Red Rock or American Banner wheat and Rose rye this fall. When seed prices are low it is a logical time to use pure seed.

"With low commercial markets, maximum efficiency is required," declared J. W. Nicolson, manager of the State Farm Bureau seed department, "and one of the greatest aids is the use of good seed of high yielding varieties."

"I do not advocate increased production," explains Mr. Nicolson, "but in face of high production and labor costs a farmer can't afford not to make every move count. There's no use of going through all the motions and failing to get a satisfactory crop because of inferior seed. If I were farming just now I believe I would crop fewer acres and get along with as little labor and operating expense as possible, but make every effort to insure a high per-acre production. The use of good seed is a logical step in this direction."

The farm bureau seed department is not only well supplied with Rose rye and Red Rock wheat but is also offering American Banner wheat. Never before has pure seed of this improved white wheat been available in quantities. It is highly recommended by the M. A. C. crops department.

Alsike Yield is Less but Quality Better

With clover hulling nicely under way, prospects are that Michigan's alsike seed production will be about 75 to 80 per cent of last year's total according to Mr. Nicolson, manager of the state farm bureau seed department, who recently spent several days making a personal investigation of the clover seed situation in the alsike producing sections of the state.

Mr. Nicolson found that the quality of the seed produced this year was better than last, due somewhat to economic conditions which rendered it unprofitable to harvest the lower grades of seed. The opera-

The local high school which has no home will be housed in these buildings and it is expected that by Sept. 3 which is the opening date all will be in readiness to begin the curriculum. Of course heating and other appliances have to be installed and it is figured that most of this stuff will salvage at least 50 per cent when the new school building is ready for occupancy. North Adams Public Schools
By R. C. YOUNG, SUP'T

After a seemingly short vacation our schools will open again Monday Aug. 27, and we are looking forward to a good school year.

During the past year the school was placed on the diploma list of the University of Michigan and the Board of Education has made the necessary appropriation for equipment to maintain this position. It is a pleasure to announce also that the teachers are all well qualified and all were in training during their summer vacation.

We are sorry that rumors reach us occasionally that there are certain busy bodies (Nearly every community seems to have them) who think their chief duty is to enter upon a tirade about the immorality of our young people and the lack of moral influence in the public school. We do not know who these people are nor do we care to know. However we feel that it would be more of a Christian act to come direct to the superintendent with criticisms instead of going to others.

It has been my privilege to have been a teacher in a number of different communities and indirectly to have come in touch with many of the best school systems of the state. While I do not say that our young people are any better than they are in other places I feel that they are not at all exaggerating when they say that the ideals of our young people are as high at least as they are in the average communities. That the young people need in North Adams, what they need everywhere, is a little more sympathy and encouragement and less criticism.

The school probably has more influence on the future of young people than any other institution and should be boosters for it.

A specially large edition of the Advocate is being printed this week by the aid of North Adams business men giving Colonel Kerr's address to be found on inside pages. Hear him at Somerset Centre Methodist Church Sunday evening next.

Chancery Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN,
The Circuit Court For The County of Hillsdale

Alice F. Brown, Plaintiff

Chancery L. Brown, Defendant.

At session of the said Court, held at the Court House in the city of Hillsdale, in said county on the 21st day of August, A. D. 1923, Present the honorable judge S. C. Carter, Circuit Judge. In this cause I appearing by affidavit on the part of the defendant Chancery L. Brown is absent from his last known place of residence and that it cannot be ascertained to what State or County he has fled Chancery L. Brown, my client.

On motion of W. D. Grooman, Attorney for Plaintiff I ordered that the appearance of said defendant, Chancery L. Brown, be entered in this cause within three months after the date of this order.

We are sorry that rumors reach us occasionally that there are certain busy bodies (Nearly every community seems to have them) who think their chief duty is to enter upon a tirade about the immorality of our young people and the lack of moral influence in the public school.

It has been my privilege to have been a teacher in a number of different communities and indirectly to have come in touch with many of the best school systems of the state. While I do not say that our young people are any better than they are in other places I feel that they are not at all exaggerating when they say that the ideals of our young people are as high at least as they are in the average communities. That the young people need in North Adams, what they need everywhere, is a little more sympathy and encouragement and less criticism.

The school probably has more influence on the future of young people than any other institution and should be boosters for it.

He'll Be At The State Fair

Here is one of the famous Hindu elephants, in all his pristine glory, as he appears in the big fireworks spectacle "India" which will be one of the features of the Michigan State Fair, August 31 to September 9. The trappings of these elephants are of all the colors of the rainbow. Each one has a certain religious significance in the old Hindu ceremonies which feature part of the spectacle.

$50,000 Free Shows At the State Fair

The $50,000 Michigan state fair being held at Detroit from August 31 to September 9 this year will offer $50,000 worth of features in the "free attraction" class. That is, those attractions which are held on or within the race track and which may be seen from the side lines without charge or from the grandstand for a nominal charge.

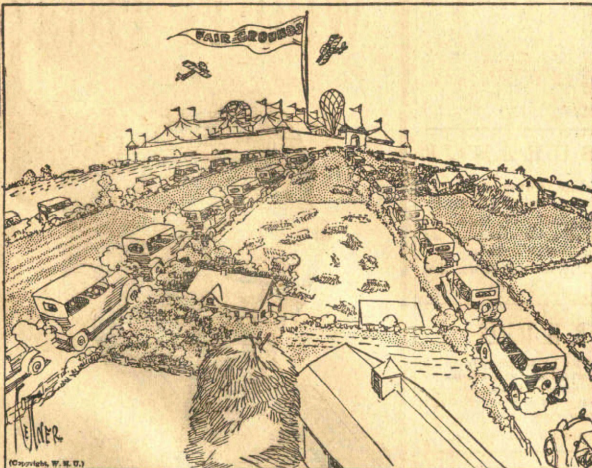

This is one of the greatest free attraction programs ever offered in the United States. Among the leaders of these attractions will be the horse races and automobile races. George W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the fair, promises that these will be the most exciting and hotly contested races ever held in Michigan.

The field of splendid horses will be led by the famous Peter Manning, fastest trotter of all time who will endeavor to smash the Michigan State trotting record of 1:59 3/4, and it is expected that he will when he rides against time driven by the premier of America's reamsmen, Thomas W. Murphy.

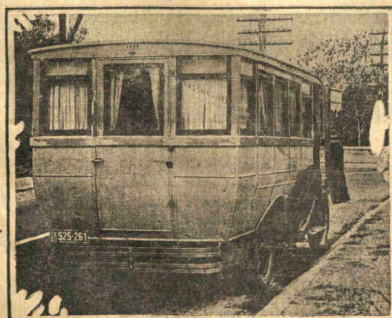

The auto races undoubtedly will be, as a whole, the best ever witnessed on a dirt track. Awards will be offered that will stir the drivers to greater effort.

Among the other free attractions will be several internationally famous aerial and tumbling acts, great balloon and parachute races, women gymnasts, three bands with world wide reputations and many other features.

The Center of Attraction

All roads lead to the Michigan State Fair at Detroit, which is being held this year from August 31 to September 9. It is a $50,000 show with something of interest to every member of the family.

A TRAVELING HOME

This tourist is one who finds solid comfort when he parks his automobile home and builds a campfire at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit, August 31 to September 9. He has this car built to order. The sides fall out and, behold, there is a bed with a roof. Automobile tourists are invited to camp with their families at the fair grounds. Solid comfort and a great time are assured.

The Bridge Builder.

The W. C. T. U. meeting at Mrs. Joe Gray's on Friday was well attended and the program on Child Welfare interesting and instructive. It was voted to put on the reading table at school the following papers, "The No-Tobacco Journal," "The Union Signal," and "The Young Crusader." Delegates were chosen to attend the State Convention in Adrian the first week in October.

Filled Milk Outlawed in State.

From a dairy and health standpoint one of the most important laws passed during the recent session of the Michigan Legislature was the bill to prevent the manufacture and sale of filled milk within the state.

Along with the other new laws passed by the recent session of the Legislature, the anti-filled milk bill will go into effect August 31st, that date being 90 days after the final adjournment.

What Is Filled Milk?

Filled milk is manufactured by taking the butterfat, which is worth approximately fifty cents per pound from whole milk, and substituting coconut oil worth from six to ten cents per pound. This proves a very profitable business for the manufacturer. To show the extent that this was hurting the dairy industry one has but to consider that last year eighty-six million pounds were produced in this country.

The health aspect of this measure is also important, for when an authority like Dr. McCollum of John Hopkins University states that a child fed a few weeks on it will develop the rickets, we can see how serious it is, and filled milk has been sold in this state in many places to persons who did not realize what they were purchasing, as well as those that did.

The enactment of this law which was championed by the Farm Bureau will go a long way towards protecting the dairymen of this state, and preventing the sale of this product which is so injurious to public health and a fraud upon the public.

Just In The Nick Of Time.

Passage of the filled-milk bill at the recent session is regarded as being extremely timely as reports reached State Farm Bureau officials that concerns manufacturing this product which had been outlawed in other states were preparing to ship their equipment to Michigan. This piece of legislation was prepared jointly by the State Farm Bureau and the Commissioner of the Bureau of Dairying of the State Department of Agriculture, and had the active support of the State and County Farm Bureaus while it was pending before the Legislature. Passage of the Michigan bill effectively puts an end to the filled-milk business in this State, due to the fact that Congress recently passed the federal Volstead bill which prevented interstate shipments.

The Exchange reported a working surplus of $50,000 and voted to increase that to $100,000 during the next few years by deducting a small share from the patronage dividends it pays to its members.

Resolutions adopted petitioned the state to adopt U. S. standard grades for potatoes and to furnish shippers with leading point inspection so that potatoes are properly graded and certified at the shipping point instead of depending upon inspection at point of delivery.

Strong For Gas Tax.

A gasoline tax was endorsed for road financing purposes, the state administrative board was censured for apparently seeking to usurp the functions of the State Board of Agriculture in the administration of the Michigan Agricultural College. The Board of Agriculture was commended for the way it has discharged its duties to Michigan farmers. Railroads were called upon to conform with the law and furnish sufficient cars for co-op movement of stock and even needs as determined by the experience of the seasons past.

Elect New Directors.

President Henry Curtis of Cadillac was unanimously elected director to succeed himself. J. T. Bussey of Provo, succeeds A. B. Large as director and Herbert F. Baker of Escalante, succeeds J. D. Robinson of Leavenworth.

The Michigan Potato Growers Exchange is one of the five big state wide farmers marketing agencies that are affiliated with the Michigan State Farm Bureau.

Potato Exchange Active On State Issue

"Co-operative marketing aims to substitute the orderly selling of farm products for the wasteful practice of dumping these products on the market shortly after the harvest or selling them without knowledge of market conditions, grades desired and other matters," Walton Petzet told 300 delegates of 130 Potato Marketing Ass'ns, gathered at the fifth annual meeting of the Michigan Potato Growers Exchange held here August 15.

Mr. Petzet is marketing director for the American Farm Bureau and an outstanding advocate of the California plan of long-time co-operative marketing contracts between the grower and his co-op. The exchange endorsed the California plan and voted to put it into operation as soon as possible in marketing Michigan potatoes.

"Chief Petoskey" Gains Favor

The Exchange is Michigan's big potato shipping agency. Last year it shipped 2,922 cars of potatoes for its members. Of this number 714 cars were "Chief Petoskeys," a high grade brand developed by the growers themselves. It is practically the only trade-mark potato in Michigan and usually commands a premium. Its acreage is increasing.

Champion Livestock Entered By College.

Many blue ribbon winners from state and national livestock shows will be included in the list entered at the State fair by the Michigan Agricultural College according to college officials. The list includes horses, cattle, sheep and swine.

Thirteen horses, Belgians, Percherons, and Clydesdales, will be taken to Detroit. The Belgians will be headed by Jupiter, a five year old chestnut stallion weighing 2200 pounds, who was first prize winner in the four year old class at the International Livestock exposition at Chicago last year. Two other junior and grand champion Belgians at last year's fair will be entered again this year.

Five horses, headed by the two year old stallion, Japanese, will make up the Percheron group. Japanese, a black weighing 1850 pounds was fourth in a class of 17 yearlings at Chicago last year. Langwaster Model, state fair champion last season and an unusually large horse will head the Clydesdale group. Two of the Clydesdales have never been exhibited before.

The beef cattle exhibit will include a number of blue ribbon winners in the Shorthorn, Hereford and Aberdeen-Angus breeds. The dairy herd will represent the Holstein, Guernsey, Jersey, Ayrshire, and Brown Swiss breeds. The list of sheep to be entered includes Southdowns, Shropshires, Hampshires, Oxfords, Cotswolds, Dorsets, and Ramboulllets. In the swine entry will be found Berkshires, Duroc Jerseys, Poles, Chinas, Chester Whites, Hampshires, Tamworths, and Yorkshires.

Wheat's Value More Than Dollar To Hen.

Wheat fed to the chickens is worth considerable more to the farmers than wheat sold at the present market price, according to C. M. Ferguson, poultry specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Whole wheat may be substituted for corn in both the scratch ration being fed at the M. A. C. poultry plants. An excellent scratch feed that is being used at the college is made of three parts wheat and one part corn, in place of equal parts of wheat and corn. But the largest saving in substitution, he says comes in grinding the wheat, and substituting whole wheat in the dry mash for the bran and middlings usually fed. The old formula for the standard dry mash was equal parts of bran, middlings, corn meal, ground oats, and meat scraps.

The new formula, now being fed at the college poultry plants, and recommended to all farmers with a dollar a bushel wheat on their hands, is two parts of ground whole wheat and one part each of corn meal, ground oats and meat scrap.

The whole wheat increases the feeding value of the mash, and it is a well known fact that the feeding of wheat increases the egg production. Each hundred-weight of wheat used saves buying that much bran and middlings. With middlings at $40.00 per ton wheat has a substitution value of more than $1.20 per bushel for poultry feed.

Ohio Ku-Klux In Bad

Barred from holding a meeting at Steubenville, Ohio, is an order of Mayor Frank Hawkins following the anti Ku Klux rioting Wednesday night in which four men were wounded in a gun battle, approximately 1,000 members of the Klan met at Richmond, 12 miles west of Steubenville late Thursday of last week. The authorities said they did not know what transpired at the meeting but inasmuch as a committee of Klansmen came to Steubenville following the meeting and posted a $1,000 bond each for the release of eight members of an armed party which came from East Liverpool by automobile early Thursday, they supposed the rioting incident was discussed. Mayor Hawkins Thursday evening ordered police to prevent public demonstrations of any kind, the ban extending to even small gatherings on the streets. Precautions against another outbreak will be continued.

Darwin L. Gibson, 35 years old, local Klan leader, who is in a local hospital with a bullet in the base of the brain, is expected to recover. Frank Veltry is being held in the county jail charged with shooting with intent to kill Gibson. John DeSantis said to have been one of Gibson's assassins, who was shot through the left eye, is in a critical condition at the hospital. Moscoso Spinetti, aged 26, said to be another member of the attacking party, who has been shot through the wrist, was removed to the hospital from the county jail Thursday night. A fourth man with a wound in the chest, is being treated by a physician.

In a statement, the local Klan demanded the resignation of Mayor Hawkins and Chief of Police Carter declaring Wednesday night's disorder was the result of lax law enforcement. The Klan has been active in the territory in the enforcement of the law in recent months.

Civil War Vets and Children at State's Big Fair

First replies to invitations sent to G. A. R. post commanders, indicate that there will be a big response to the Michigan State Fair's invitation to veterans of the Civil War and their wives to attend as the guests of the fair on Tuesday, Sept. 4, Secretary-Manager George W. Dickinson announced this week.

The old soldiers will be given seats of honor in the grand stand where they may view the many attractions, including horse races, and enjoy the music of the big bands.

A special program has been arranged by Mr. Dickinson so that the veterans annual visit to the fair will be most enjoyable.

The crippled children living in and about Detroit and in the border cities of Canada also will be guests of the fair on this day.

The fair opens Friday, Aug. 31 and closes Sunday, Sept. 9.

BALLET STARS

A bevy of beautiful girls, dressed at times as wicked pirates appear in a Ballet extraordinary at the Michigan State Fair. The Gateway to The North

The issue of the Youth's Companion dated August 23 will carry a new Historic Milestone cover which the publishers respectfully dedicate to the State of Michigan.

The subject is a full color reproduction from an oil painting made expressly for the Companion. It is a dramatic representation of commercial activity typical of the great inland waterways. The text which accompanies the picture is the best description of it:

"The Gateway to The North: Through the waters that wash the shores of Michigan pours the commerce of half a continent, and where the bark canoe once paused at frontier trading posts mammoth ships now lie at the foot of granaries that feed the world."

The Companion hopes that this graphic presentation of the immense commercial importance of our inland water-borne traffic will prove a source of inspiration, to all who see it and turn their thoughts toward Michigan, the frontier of the old Northwest.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The work of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is that by many to be along the line of temperance but this is now only one branch of its work. The motto of the organization is "For God and home and every land," so every good cause is aided by some department of the society. One topic which is demanding much attention in recent months is child welfare, and investigation regarding Child Labor and laws controlling it in various states of our Union has been carefully made with a view to improving the conditions of children in the future. The general attitude of this great body of women, the largest woman's organization in the world is well shown in the following poem.

"An old man, going a lone highway,
Came at the evening cold and gray,
To a shanty vast and deep and wide,
Through which was flowing a sudden tide.
The old man crossed in the twilight dim,
The sun stream had not yet been dim,
But he turned when safe on the other side
And built a bridge to span the tide.
"Child man," said a fellow pilgrim here,
"You are wasting strength with building here,
Your journey will end with the ending day,
You never again will pass this way.
"You've passed the chasm deep and wide,
The sun has set and the moon is high,
The bridge is built and the way is clear,
The old friend in the path has come to here.
"There follows after me no day,
A youth whose feet must pass this way,
The chasm that he has been passing here,
To that fair-haired youth may a titill be,
He, too, must cross in the twilight dim,
Good friend I am building the bridge for him.
—Will Allen Oromgoolie

An Off Date For Robberies

The hot season seems to be rather a bad time for eggs and crackers, and no postoffice or bank robberies are being pulled off at present for some reason. We presume the crooks are mostly away to some sea shore resort spending their vacations. This makes dull times for the State Police and outposts of occasionally pulling some "speeder" there is not much excitement worth mentioning.

We read in a certain scientific journal that a genius somewhere has cruelly set to work and invented a fragile gas container to be placed inside banks, safety deposit vaults and such places, and it is to be filled with a most deadly gas. Connected to this jar is an electric firing device which is touched off the instant anything goes wrong in the vault after a certain hour. Any tampering with the locks breaks the jar and releases the poison gas which kills instantly.

Well, it is not pleasant to think of setting such death traps but how these depositories of money can be protected in any other way is a conundrum. We don't know whether the local bank is so protected, but we believe the time is coming when every bank will use this appliance. The losses annually from robberies alone in the state of Michigan cannot be reimbursed by insurance. It is possibly not generally known that at the time of signing the armistice, hundreds of tons of the most poisonous gases ever made, were on hand in this country, and if they had ever been released on the battlefields, would have mowed the Huns like chaff.

Just for example, one particular gas if thrown upon the ground under the largest trees will cause the tree to wither and die inside of an hour or so. It is easy to understand that war with such destructive agencies would not last long but would be terribly disastrous, and the loss of life so large, no nation could withstand it. Think if you will, of releasing a blanket of gas in the dead of night over Chicago or New York City by means of aeroplanes—and this gas is so heavy it settles to earth at once—the whole city would perish inside of 15 minutes, because no one could escape the fumes.

It is with misgivings that statesmen look upon the League of Nations covenant and many of them refuse to recognize such an agreement at all. Are these men crazy? God Almighty cannot save us if a war is launched against this nation and it is unlikely that a bank protected by such means can be touched up by yeggs.

Big M. A. C. Exhibit To Feature at Fair.

One of the largest agricultural exhibits ever shown by the Michigan Agricultural College will be taken to the state fair at Prof. Herman J. Gallagher who is in active charge of the work. Elaborate plans have been made and detailed work has been going forward on the project for many weeks.

"A more permanent agriculture with retained fertility of the soil," is to be the keynote of the exhibit. Better livestock improved crops, fertilization of the soil, crop rotation and barberry eradication will be among the things embodied in the display. The exhibit on the eradication of native barberry will be under the personal supervision of Walter F. Reddy, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture who is in charge of the barberry eradication work in Michigan.

"Permanent agriculture," says Professor Gallagher, is directly dependent upon retaining the fertility of the soil. Alfalfa produces an assured supply of very nutritious hay, which is a stimulant for the keeping of more livestock. It also stores nitrogen in the soil, which is our most expensive fertilizer. Such a combination of alfalfa and livestock is a foundation step towards better agriculture. Alfalfa, however, is a gross feeder and only by the proper handling of manure, supplemented by commercial fertilizers can a permanency be attained."

Colonel Kerr on the League of Nations.

The address Sunday evening at the Methodist church given by Colonel Kerr late of the United States Army was highly appreciated, and we welcome the gentleman any time he will come to our village. His description of the battlefields and back-of-line conditions in France were instructive. He stated that when the war broke out he was on the Mexican border as paymaster of the army. At once he had orders to leave there and prepare to take a body of quarter masters across to the seat of war and to prepare to handle provisions for the army. So well did his corps of officials function that rations were kept constantly on the move, up to the declaration of the armistice. Even upon that day before it was definitely known, a train load of provisions were started on their way. At times 200 officers were working under Col. Kerr's orders. Later it became his sad duty to purchase and prepare the site for the great Argonne Forest cemetery where 22,000 American soldiers were laid to rest. The work of disintering and re-burying went on with dispatch and he states it was deplorable but true that something like 5,000 of these noble martyrs in Khaki had to be buried as "unknown."

Just why the Colonel cannot explain, as great care was taken to supply each soldier with two metallic tags suspended by a string around the neck, one round and one square. The round tag was always left with the body but the square one went to headquarters so that when the work of digging commenced they had this metallic tag right before them and numbers supposed to correspond in every particular with the one on the corpse. In spite of this hundreds could not be identified.

Colonel Kerr stated that nothing in the League of Nations covenant even suggests our sending an army to Europe, without the full consent of Congress. The only penalty suggested, is the Economic Boycott. Already the Boycott has stopped threatened war between smaller nations of Europe and would be effective against the larger ones also, if the United States would join.

As a matter of fact Col. Kerr is what you would call a "hundred per cent patriot" since he lost the sight of one eye in the service yet he has never asked any compensation from our government for his loss and moreover he is perfectly willing to go wherever asked to explain these points of the service which he personally saw and experienced. He says his only regret was he could not enter the front lines and help thrash the Huns.

He was introduced by George B. Smith of Addison who made some very pertinent remarks concerning a Brotherhood of churches for this county. Mr. Smith says a plan has been suggested by Superintendent Clapp whereby the churches of Somerset township will form a Community unit and consolidate. Mr. Smith urged the acceptance of the proposal of Sup. Clapp, that undenominational committees be sent to the coming Michigan con ference to personally meet young men suitable for country community pastorates.

Colonel Kerr will speak next Sunday evening at Somerset Center Methodist Episcopal church.

he people. Some time ago it was our privilege to listen to a discourse which was delivered by the most popular pastor in the city. From the standpoint of oratory or literature, it is doubtful if the preacher sermon could have been improved upon but from the viewpoint of christianity, it was little more than a well written essay. There are some folks who say that they would attend church if they lived in the city but as someone has said "Distance lends enchantment" and we believe that we can say without exaggeration that Rev. Dellinger is as good as he can be found anywhere, as for music, Jerome has plenty of ability in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. Harley Voorhees, R. J. Moreland and wife, Phyllis Walworth L. D. Walworth as well as many others. Mrs. Voorhees is gifted with an exceptionally pleasing voice and the Jerome people would lose anything by attending church and that's a certainty.

Somerset Center Was A Church Rally.

At the Somerset Center Methodist Episcopal Church last Sunday evening an audience which filled the auditorium to capacity heard Col. E. H. Kerr tell of the horrors of modern warfare and give reasons why the United States should join the world court of the League of Nations.

The meeting was held under the auspices of the Hillsdale County Labor Church Center. Some fine music was furnished by members of the Jerome and Somerset Chorus. George Burr Smith read the famous 23rd chapter of Matthew in which Christ rebuked certain high churchmen for making long prayers in the synagogues and binding men's shoulders with burdens grievous to be borne. He spoke of some of the advantages of a township pastor who would serve all the churches in the township, cooperating with the township officers in looking after the poor and needy and in preserving law and order, taking part in the temporal as well as the spiritual welfare of the citizens.

Col. Kerr gave a very instructive talk about the workings of the American war college and the agencies for destruction in

State Fair Premium Committee

Dana H. Hinkley, of Potoskey, Frank Coward, of Bronson, (chairman) and A. E. Stevenson, of Port Huron, compose the committee which has charge of giving premiums at the Michigan State Fair, held in Detroit this year from August 31 to September 9.

Famous Band at Michigan State Fair

THE SINGING HUSSARS.

Here is shown Strouts Military Hussars, a nationally famous band that appears at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit, August 31 to September 9. This group is more than an ordinary band; it is a high class vaudeville act. In addition, there will be Cervonia's great concert band and the world famous 91st Killies band of Canada, which was named the Canadian Staff band during the war.

THE CLEORA MILLER TRIO

These three compose one of the best musical acts in the country and appear at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit, August 31 to September 9, as a number on the $60,000 free attraction program. An unusual feature is the man, a one-armed cornet player of great ability.

Barberry is Old

This war on Barberry bushes which the agricultural agents are putting forth, is not so modern after all, since we read in the European Magazine under date of August 1810 the following bit of excellent advice delivered 113 years ago by a man who probably knew his business:

A caution to Farmers—An ingenious surveyor has given the following intimation which appears to merit the serious attention of every one engaged in agriculture: I beg leave to recommend that every farmer be guarded against the well known shrub, the Barberry, which frequently grows spontaneously in hedges in many parts of the country as whole fields of wheat have been blighted by only one of these plants their effects beginning first in a semi-circle from the plant and spreading regularly over a whole field. As many persons to whom I have mentioned this circumstance, have been very incredulous I can assure them I have often been an eye witness of the fact and for further information I refer to most any respectable farmer.

So it will be seen the farmers of 1810 had their troubles and while they had no board of trade to condemn, and no trusts to fight, yet they had these pests, and poor transportation, poorer markets, and probably no outlet for their butter and cream as we have to-day. It is not likely the potato bug feasted on their vines or the Hessian fly devoured the wheat straw, yet it was common for the farmer to travel fifty miles to mill with an ox team. And did he complain? Guess not; it all went into the game. He was trying to break up the stubborn forest land and establish a farm home and rear his numerous family and he had no time to curse the government or to bewail the dogged luck which made him a farmer and tiller of the soil. Farmers in this section twenty years after this article was written were commonly driving to Ypsilanti to mill, and building corduroy roads across the swamps and watching the Indians. BawBeese still lingered and it was about this time he condemned his own daughter to death for killing her husband, which sentence was carried out a few miles beyond Jonesville somewhere near the present site of Allen.

Better Feed Brings Added Dairy Profit.

A large number of the dairy herds in Michigan are not fed so that they can produce as much as they are capable of, according to the dairy extension department at the Michigan Agricultural College. Better feeding practices, in most cases, will result in an increase in profit that will more than offset the increase in feed costs.

The case of the Standley Jersey herd at Kalamazoo is cited by M. A. C. Baltzer, dairy extension specialist at M. A. C., as one of the best examples to be found in the state's records. This herd of 25 cows led the Kalamazoo cow-testing association in 1922 with an average of 7,507 pounds of milk and 310 pounds of fat per cow.

The cost of feed in 1921 was $59.20 per cow; the cost of feed in 1922 was $85.42 per cow; showing that each animal was better fed to the extent of $26.22. The average net profit over feed cost in 1921 was $95.28. The average net profit over feed cost in 1922 was below $146.07. This shows that the $26.22 worth of extra feed that was given each cow brought $50.81 extra profit as well as returning the extra feed cost.

Figured on a percentage basis, net increase in profit over feed cost was 53 per cent. Besides paying for the extra feed, the net gain on the herd in 1922 over 1921 was $456.29. The case of the Standley herd holds true with a good share of the other dairy herds in the state, says Mr. Baltzer. These cows were but waiting to get a chance to do their best. Dairy men will find that better feeding is a good investment to put more feed into their cows when they will increase the profits 53 per cent besides paying for the extra feed.

Ku-Klux Get Two Year Terms

Tulsa, Oklahoma, Aug. 23—F. Sikes, Grover Sikes and Earl Salk of Broken Arrow, confessed members of the Ku-Klux Klan pleaded guilty to rioting charges before District Judge Williams and were sentenced to serve two years in the State Penitentiary. Their arrest came as the result of an investigation by Adjutant General B. H. Markham into the recent fogging in Tulsa county.

The Ku-Klux Klan

The Louisville Courier-Journal says that while rivals for control of the Ku-Klux Klan funds are fighting out their quarrels in Georgia courts branches of the order in Louisiana are quietly breaking up and disbanding.

At two towns in the Pelican state, Klansmen, Protestant ministers and Knights of Columbus directed by Catholic priests, have met around council tables, exchanged views and published statements touching the Klan's dissolution. Briefly these statements consist of declarations by Klansmen that they joined the order for patriotic purposes and with no prejudice against either Catholics or Jews, and of assurances by Catholics and Protestants alike that these avowals should be accepted in good faith by the community.

The pronouncements close with an appeal for all good citizens to forget the past and unite on the old ground of common citizenship free of religious and racial intolerance. Signs like these, indicate that the end of the Ku-Klux Klan is not far off. From the outset the Courier-Journal has not doubted that the organization would wear itself out against the ingrained conservatism of American character. The order's misguided members are recognizing that this order has no rightful place in American life. The wonder is that it ever gained a foothold in the conservative South, where interrelations of Jews, Catholic and Protestant have been exemplary for more than a century.—Jackson Daily News.

Other Short Courses to Farmers of State

A dozen different specialized courses in various phases of agriculture, designed to be of the greatest value to the practical farmer, will be offered by the Michigan Agricultural College during the winter of 1923-24, according to the announcement made this week by E. B. Hill, assistant dean of agriculture.

A number of changes and improvements have been made in the work, embodying the latest practices in the industry, in accordance with present day agricultural conditions.

The two year general agricultural course, running sixteen weeks each winter will begin October 22 and end March 6. A winter, eight week course will also be given in general agriculture, starting January 7 and ending March 6.

A twelve weeks dairy production course and an eight week dairy manufacturing course will be offered, both of which start January 7. A special two weeks course in ice cream making will be given March 10-22.

Three classes of special instruction on trucks and tractors will be offered this year, each lasting for four weeks. The starting dates for these classes are December 31, January 28, and February 25.

Eight weeks of special instruction in horticulture, four weeks of poultry work, and an eight week course in farm engineering will be given this year, all three classes starting January 7.

It is expected that several hundred farmers of Michigan will take advantage of this special training that is being offered, as a large number of inquiries have already been received. Catalogs showing the work will be ready for distribution September 1.

Find Two Classes of Michigan Soils.

Two definite major soil groups for Michigan, designated as Northern and Southern, have been recognized by soil experts of the Michigan Agricultural College in the course of modern classification work being carried on in the state. These groups possess strikingly different properties and characteristics, making a definite state division from the agricultural point of view.

The so-called Northern groups includes about two-thirds of the southern peninsula, while the rest of the state falls into the Northern division. The possibility that a third, or transitional class between the other two may have to be recognized as the detailed soil investigations now in progress expand is pointed out by the M. A. C. workers.

Climate differences are largely responsible for the marked differences in the properties of these main soil groups, says Dr. M. M. McCool, head of the M. A. C. soils division, in commenting on the classification. "The soils of the Northern group are typified by a relatively thick layer of organic matter on the surface of the virgin undisturbed soil; by a grayish or ashy color and bleached appearance of the surface mineral soil; and usually by a very sticky brownish layer, known as a clay band, which is inclined to four or more feet, colored by organic matter and containing more nitrogen than the gray layer above. It may be loosely or rather strongly cemented together by organic matter.

"The soils of the southern groups do not possess the gray and brown soil layers, or they are only slightly developed. The percentage of the humus layer is greater than in the north and the colors are variable, due to various iron oxides. In addition, there exists a layer at shallow depths which contains more fine material than that above, the result of the forces of weathering.

"Within each group, of course, lie many special soil types, differentiated by position in thickness, texture, structure, water relationships, and the amount of the various chemical compounds, all of which affect plant growth to a greater or less extent."

Potato Growers Tour Through State Ends.

The potato tour through the northern counties of the state, which started at Elmira on Aug. 13 after passing through 11 of the foremost potato producing counties, ended at Gaylord on the 26th. The junket, in the interests of better potato growing, was arranged by extension specialists from the Michigan Agricultural College in cooperation with local county agents, potato growers organizations, and other groups. The tour was made to acquaint growers with the value of certified seed, with insects, pests, and with potato diseases. The importance of proper cultural methods were brought out and the losses annually sustained through careless handling and poor storage were emphasized. The tour in general was so successful that, while no definite plans have been announced, it is expected that it will be made an annual event.

Health Crusade

In Lansing printing shops thousands of pieces of printed matter are being run from the presses in preparation for the opening of city and rural schools in all parts of the state and the renewal of the Modern Health Crusade, a movement in which 100,000 Michigan youngsters are already enrolled.

Some idea of the size that the Modern Health Crusade is expected to attain this year may be gathered from the immense amount of material being prepared for it. First on the list are 100,000 chore folders, now being printed. The chore folders are the children's score cards in the Crusade game. Ten thousand explanation sheets, and 10,000 order blanks for Crusade material are also being prepared. In addition there are 5,000 Knight posters, one for every school in the part in the Modern Health Crusade, and 500 tournament report blanks.

Other things that will be used in the health movement are wall charts, health roll certificates, and Page, Squire, Knight, Knight Banner and Knight Banner Constant pins. It is also hoped, say those who are sponsoring the better health movement, to put a copy of Theresa Danahill's Health Training in Schools into the hands of every school teacher in the state.

In Lansing the Modern Health Crusade is directed by the Michigan Tuberculosis association, but as a nation wide movement it is carried on under the auspices of the National Tuberculosis Association. It is a health game for the children in the grade schools, and is designed to teach them to practice the simple rule of hygiene as borne out by the proven facts of tuberculosis and other forms of ill health. Funds derived from the sale of Christmas seals by the Michigan Tuberculosis association are used in part to carry on the work of the Michigan

Health Crusade.

Eleven chores are given the Crusade children to perform every day. The completion of 75 per cent of the chores every week entitles a child to a Squire's pin at the end of the first 24 weeks. The titles and badges of Knight, Knight Banner Constant are given at the end of his month, and have third and four years respectively. Points emphasized by the Crusaders' code are cleanliness, truthfulness, helpfulness, right thinking, self-control, good character, fresh air, correct posture, wholesome food and the exclusion of foreign objects from the nose, and mouth. Teachers in rural and city schools, school boards and parents in all parts of Michigan are backing the Modern Health Crusade movement.

Russian Pheasants For Game Birds.

Our Representative from this district at Lansing, Mr. Rowe is distributing pheasants in the county with which to stock our woodlands. On Tuesday Chester Alpaugh secured from Mr. Rowe a dozen and a half of the beautiful birds which he turned loose on the Town Line north of this village. These birds are mottled much the same as a quail, which they resemble. They are not so shy, however, often coming into the barnyard to share the feed of domestic poultry, especially in winter when snow covers the ground. Of course they are heavily protected and it is a serious offense to destroy one of them. Notwithstanding this law no doubt many of them fall victims to the cupidity of hunters. At present Michigan state has a hatchery where these birds are reared until about half grown and able to take care of themselves. Any responsible person who would like to hatch them will agree to furnish common hens and turn the pheasants loose after a certain time can obtain the eggs.

Detroit is Particular.

No licenses will be issued to Detroit autoists next year unless they can pass a certain test as to ability to read signs at a distance of sixty feet and distinguish colors plainly. It is rather of a severe law but Police Chief Croul means to carry it out to the letter without doubt. Already some 300 men have applied and some have failed miserably to come up to the requirements. Several chaps could not read the lettering at sixty feet and several could not pass the psychopathic test. Not only a man's eyes must be good but the police are going into the state of his mind, and have brought out some tough facts along this line. A good many men they find are really mentally incapable of managing a machine, and are being turned down. Unless some loophole is discovered before next December there will be a large number of applicants without licenses and pretty mad as a result. Whether the Police Chief can enforce this law absolutely is doubtful since thousands own machines who will not pass, and something 'will have to be done to let these out.

AUTO BIG HELP TO STATE FAIRS

The importance of the State Fair in the development of the State is being emphasized more and more every year, according to George W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the Michigan State Fair which will be held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9.

"There was a day," Mr. Dickinson said, "when many persons thought the passing of the horse would doom the fairs. But the result has been just the opposite.

"The large number of automobiles relieves the heavy traffic on roads during fair time with the result that the motorists and those remaining railroad passengers all travel in comfort.

"This encourages many more farmers to bring their families to Detroit for the great exposition. In fact the automobile has just about brought the fair to the front yard of every farmer within a radius of 75 miles.

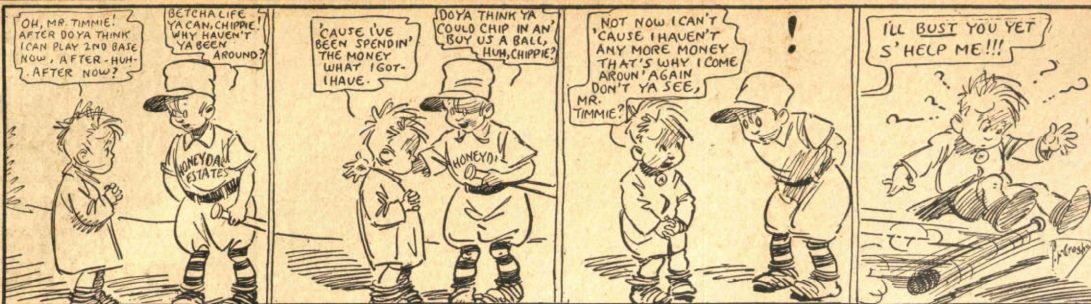

"We expect to do a great deal more for the accommodation of touring motorists this year. We had a camp for them last year where, for a reason they can pass a certain test as to ability to read signs at a distance of sixty feet and distinguish colors plainly. It is rather of a severe law but Police Chief Croul means to carry it out to the letter without doubt. Already some 300

W. C. T. U. Column

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The W. C. T. U. Golden Jubilee

The years 1923 and 1924 are epoch-making years in the history of the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union. They mark the fiftieth birthday anniversary of this noble organization. And big plans are on foot for the brilliant observance of the event not only in the United States but around the world.

It was in 1873, it will be recalled, that the historic Woman's Temperance crusade took place. Christian women from the local churches gathered to pray in the streets of Hillsboro, Washington Court House and other Ohio towns. They marched two by two into the open saloons and appealed to the men who sold and drank, to give up liquor selling and drinking. In 50 days, it is recorded, 250 towns and villages in Ohio closed their saloons.

Finding that organized work, as well as constant prayer, was needed to sweep out the dreadful liquor traffic, a meeting was held at Chautauque, N. Y., in August, 1874, which issued a call for a national Temperance convention of Christian women at Cleveland, Ohio, Nov. 18 to 20, 1874. There the W. C. T. U. was fully organized, destined under the phenomenal leader, Frances E. Willard of Evanston, Illinois, to become a dynamic power both in this country and abroad, for the abolition of the liquor traffic, and warfare on iniquity.

Visitors in the Hall of Fame, New York see among others, the tablet unveiled not long ago, to Frances E. Willard and they read on it the following inscription:

"The thought and purpose of the W. C. T. U. is to make the world home-like."

Miss Willard passed away in 1897 at the age of 58, after nearly twenty years of devoted service during which she made the W. C. T. U. a model organization. She drew into the Christian temperance work women of consecrated ability in all parts of the United States and formed similar groups in 40 different lands around the world. She enlisted leaders and workers in more than thirty different lines of effort according to their powers. And she laid down a "Declaration of Principles" which are still the rules of faith and practice for several hundred thousands of Women's Christian Temperance Union members, although 25 years have passed since her death. It begins: "We believe in the coming of His Kingdom whose service is perfect freedom, and it concludes: "We declare our purpose to educate the young... to reform so far as possible, by religious, ethical and scientific means, the drinking classes; to seek the transforming power of Divine grace for ourselves, and all for whom we work and to pray that all these principles founded upon the gospel of Christ may be worked into the customs of society and the laws of the land."

Mrs. Lillian N. Stevens, 1898-1914 and Miss Anna Gordon, who has been the efficient leader during the period since Mrs. Stevens' passing, have ably carried on and extended W. C. T. U. power and service. Five years ago plans for the Golden Jubilee were formed in the quick mind of Miss Gordon with the slogan, "Sound the Jubilee" and the "big objectives" of a million members and a million dollars, with all that these could accomplish for "child welfare" "Health and Morality" "Americanization" "Women in Industry" "Education and Information" "Field Service" "Administration" etc.

From the National W. C. T. U. headquarters in Washington, D. C. and in Evanston, Illinois, work has been and is being pushed into every local center far and wide for the election of a dry Congress in 1924, for the maintenance of a strong code well observed; for the systematic instruction in the scientific facts concerning alcoholic drinks in all schools; for the reaching of all citizens with these facts, especially the facts concerning beer and wines, and the dangers in patent medicines containing alcohol or habit-forming drugs; and the reason for the decreasing use of alcohol as a medicine; for a new emphasis on pledged total abstinence on the part of youth, etc.

The 50th or Golden Jubilee Convention will be held at Columbus, O., September 4th to 13th 1923, is marked by special spectacular demonstrations. A notable pageant—"The March of Illegality"—features the early temperance crusades of 1873 and 1874 and shows the wonderful growth and development of the W. C. T. U. and its work. The living crusaders of '74 and relatives of crusaders have prominent part, as well as children and young people the leaders of tomorrow. Plans will be made for the 1924 contest to preserve the precious dry laws of the crusade State; to aid the work in Pennsylvania, where the W. C. T. U. has undertaken to raise $200,000 for law enforcement which the legislature has failed to appropriate; to help in New York State disgraced by a wet executive.

Hands of welcome are extended to dry representatives from Japan whose thinking men are studying prohibition benefits; from Egypt, where six thousand prohibition signatures have been secured recently by the W. C. T. U.; from India where the only woman ruler (Bhopal) has proclaimed Prohibition for her state and four great provinces now have woman suffrage; from Austria, where a pledge-signing campaign is being conducted by the sister of President Hainich; from Argentina, where there is a notable decrease in drunkenness due to temperance teaching in the schools and in other lands.

At their Golden Jubilee golden words of appreciation cheer the undaunted workers of the W. C. T. U. from those like Dr. Ira Landrum who at the 1923 Ohio State Christian Endeavor Convention declared "Men got prohibition... but we couldn't have done it without the help of the noble heroines in history—the Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

Stop Self-Medication! Call The Doctor

"Don't be your own doctor" is a sort of slogan given out by the Michigan Department of Health. Few people would board a train without an experienced engineer in the cab, yet how many consider it a risk to dose their own complex systems with miscellaneous salts and nostrums? The use of common drug store prescriptions often lands the user in the hospital in a couple of days. Whereat the story of Johnnie Swigert comes up with a stunning moral in the case. This is the way a doctor related it to us a few years ago.

There once lived in a country village in the wilds of Roscommon county a family named Swigert. In the family were seven stalwart sons ranging in ages from 17 to 30, all unmarried, and living at home at the time the story opens. John Swigert, the youngest boy, had been taught from his infancy to ignore physical disability or illness of any kind and any inclination on the part of his acquaintances or schoolmates to admit they were sick or in pain always drew forth bitterest sarcasm from John. One day as he was indulging in a game called "duck on the rock" at school, one careless lad let drive with a heavy "shotter" just as John replaced the "duck." Result—connected with John's right hand, and most of the digits were smashed. Did John whimper and run home to ma? He did not. Contrary to the teacher's advice John remained at the school house and pretended to study, although it was evident from the paleness of his features the ordeal was far from pleasant. On the way home from school John pelted the girls with pine cones and laughed heartily down the road as far as the teacher could see him, and the teacher retired to the school house remarking "That John is surely a tough bird."

The next day John Swigert went to school notwithstanding his hand was swelled to double size and black as the ace of spades. Four weeks of agony followed and thru it all John never complained, never received any medical attention and did not lose a day at school.

Through a miracle blood poison and infection did not develop but the hand was deformed for life. We should have mentioned however, that the village had a doctor, a gruff old German known as Van Broomman, commonly dubbed "old kildad", and the Swigert boys hated him to a finish. Van Broomman was built like a flag-staff, six feet six, and lanky as a blue racer. He chewed Battle Ax and could spit a nail head at a distance of eight feet, every expectation. However, thru the country-side the doctor was the terror of young folks generally, so that his appearance down the road was a scare to little girls who usually hid under the bed,

The older boys of the Swigert family had run afoul of Van Broomman more than once and threatened a thrashing, so that generally speaking the pill dispenser never went to their neighborhood without an un safe feeling.

Five years later the Swigert boys except John, were married and out for themselves. The war came on and John went over to the county seat to enlist, much against the wishes of his mother. A week later John was called for examination and while waiting his turn he was surprised to see "kildad" walk thru a side door into the examining room.

"Nice joke" muttered John to himself "I've seen him five years by with Van Broomman on the board, I am minded to go home right now" but it now occurred to the young man for the first time that he was the property of Uncle Sam and he couldn't do just as he wished, so altogether he passed an uncomfortable hour. John got through but like thousands of others they had to give him the benefit of a doubt. A few of his symptoms were not reassuring. Bad tonsils and adenoids were in evidence, warty protrusions in the throat showed some traces of insidious venereal disease, eyesight was somewhat impaired and the deformed hand all made it exceedingly risky to accept John. Also his heart had a slight chatter, but the examiners decided to call U. from those like Dr. Ira Landrum who at the 1923 Ohio State Christian Endeavor Convention declared "Men got prohibition... but we couldn't have done it without the help of the noble heroines in history—the Woman's Christian Temperance Union."

The other chaps remarked that John looked tough as nails and he went through the battle of Chateau Thierry without a scratch, only to get pinked in the thigh by a machine gun bullet a little later. For weeks John lay in the hospital and the wound wouldn't heal. Doctor in charge reported the presence of blood disease from a self treated venereal case some years previous, by, and John Swigert at last died from conditions caused by a neglected disease, which if it had been treated by a conscientious physician at the outset, could have been cured.

No Helpless Damsel, This. A Titan-haired beauty visited us for a month and I fell in love with her, but was unable to muster up sufficient courage to propose. "The most famous, largest and most far famed"

1923 Opening Evokes Administration Policy of Complete Conservation for Our National Parks

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN

THE national parks have a good friend when Warren G. Harding died. His appreciation and approval of the national park movement were signally shown at the 1923 opening of Yellowstone for its fifty-first year by an official declaration of administration policy worthy of its place as the first national park in all history and largest and most famous of all America's nineteen public playgrounds.

"And we are here today to celebrate the annual opening of Yellowstone park, the largest and most far-famed of our national parks, a wooded wilderness of three thousand three hundred square miles, containing innumerable waterfalls, more geysers than are found in the rest of the world all put together, irrigated by rivers like miniature lakes, and beautified by lakes like inland seas, protected by canyons of sublimity, decorated with colors defying the painter's art, punctured with innumerable boiling springs whose steam mingles with fleecy clouds, succeeded with vast areas of petrified forests, a sanctuary of safe retreat for feathered songsters and wild beasts, a wonderful playground, sanitarium and university all in one, where the eye feasts upon the riotous colors of flowers, ferns and rocks; the ear is stirred by the symphony of melodious sounds; the mind is soothed with a thousand revelations of truth and beauty, and the faded body weary with the toils of thought and toil and travel, ungraced for song and dance beneath the shadows of the everlasting hills."

"Yellowstone history is replete with crises where the friends of the park and the park itself have had to fight with a heroism worthy its explorers and discoverers to retain intact against the hold and presumptuous claims of the advocates of special privilege, determined to commercialize this land of wonder, to build railroads through it, tunnel its mountains, dam its lakes and streams, and secure stranglehold monopolies with small compensation to the government and total loss to the people."

"And regardless of all facts and figures, appeals and threats, therefore, any plan, however meritorious on its face, for the commercial exploitation of parks must by the very nature of its aims and purposes be immediately doomed to failure."

"Good projects, bad projects, indifferent projects, all must face the same fate, for it is at last established policy of the government that our national parks must and shall forever be maintained in absolute, unimpaired form, not only for the present but for all time to come, a policy which has the unqualified support of President Harding."

"This is the fixed policy of the administration, and I can assure you it will not be modified. It will not be swayed by a hair's breadth by any influence, financial, political or otherwise."

"If rights are granted to the individual, there must follow, so a precedent must not be established. It would inevitably ruin the entire national park system."

JACKSON LAKE AND TETONS

A national organization of defense, about 4,000,000 strong, was quickly effected. The Smith bill was killed in the house, after it had passed the senate. The Jones-Esch bill exempting national parks, present and future, from the jurisdiction of the water power commission was introduced and forced forward. The water power interests were powerful enough, however, to force a compromise amendment which exempted only the existing national parks. The Jones-Esch bill was passed by the Sixty-sixth congress.

In December of 1920 Senator Walsh of Montana championed a bill to dam Yellowstone lake for an irrigation scheme in Montana, his long and hard-fought battle followed. In June of 1921 Secretary of the Interior Fall reported on the bill and straddled on the question of protection, holding that power and irrigation development in the national parks should be only "on specific authorization of congress, the works to be constructed and controlled by the federal government." Thereupon Senator Walsh proposed a new bill providing that the United States reclamation service should build and operate the Yellowstone lake dam. The defenders of the park proved that the dam could be built to greater advantage outside the park. In 1922 the upholders of the parks won a victory by electing Scott Leavitt in Montana to congress over Jerome Locke, originator of the dam project. The final result of the fight was that the Sixty-seventh congress adjourned March 4, 1923, leaving the Walsh dam in the committee's pigeonholes. Efforts to revive it are expected in the Sixty-eighth congress.

During these three years another victory of great importance along the same line was the smothering in committee of the All-Year National park bill, personally drafted and sponsored by Secretary Fall. This bill created a national park in the Mesquero Indian reservation in New Mexico out of several insignificant spots widely separated, plus an irrigation and power reservoir ninety miles away. It would have introduced both water power and irrigation into the national park system. There was a nation-wide protest against this bill, in which New Mexico itself took an active part. The bill is too dead, it is believed, to be resurrected.

A third victory called nation-wide attention to another danger that threatened—and still threatens—the national parks. The victory was the defeat of the Stump bill creating the Appalachian National park out of a Virginia mountain top. It was opposed on the ground that the area was below the proper national park quality. It was killed by Secretary Fall, who in his report to the public lands committee said that his policy was to substitute a wide-open recreational park system of many small playgrounds for his historic national park system.

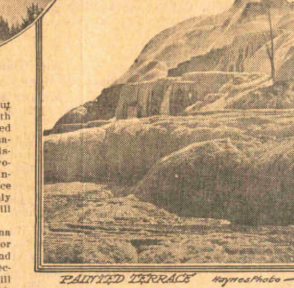

The late Franklin K. Lane, as secretary of the interior in 1918, nailed down this plank in the national park platform:

In studying new park projects you should seek to find "evidence of superior and distinctive quality or some natural feature of extraordinary or unique beauty, of scientific interest and importance. The national park system as now constituted should not be lowered in standard, dignity and grandeur by the inclusion of areas which are inferior to the highest terms the particular class or kind of exhibit which they represent."

President Harding was the first president to announce publicly a general administration policy of absolute conservation for the national parks system and for all of its units. Both Roosevelt and Taft were good friends of the national parks, but preservation against commercial invasion was not a question in their days. President Wilson, in his first term, signed the Hotch Hetchy bill giving the Forestry Service water supply reservoirs in Yosemite which has just been completed; its secret water power purpose was not then generally understood. President Wilson, however, stood by the national parks loyally and powerfully in the fight to exempt them from the jurisdiction of the water power commission.

They plunge into the water all at once and cause the big waves. If the short, choppy wave is wanted, the plungers are worked independently of each other. President Harding, in announcing this administration policy, was not anticipating a popular demand so much as answering it. The truth is that the American people have within the last three years adopted our nineteen national parks as a part of their conception of the greatness of their nation. "Hands off!" applies to the national parks as well as to Old Glory. They are sacred to defend them and to keep them inviolate. And they have developed organized strength through the affiliation of a dozen or so nation-wide organizations to see that congress shall legislate wisely concerning the national parks. The announcement of the conservation policy was received with nation-wide delight. The national park enthusiasts hoped that the conservation policy would be broadened to uphold Secretary Lane's important plank.

Yellowstone also gets into the limelight this season because President Harding paid it a two-days' visit on his way to Alaska. The President's party went in and out through the north entrance and did about 150 miles of motoring in seeing various points of interest. On the Continental Divide they drove through snowbanks. The President went yachting on Yellowstone lake—undammed. He saw many wild animals and fed gingerbread and molasses to a black bear and her cub. He saw the Painted Terraces of Mammoth Hot Springs. Old Faithful geyser spotted 150 feet into the air every sixty-five minutes for him—as it does for every visitor. The photograph reproduced herewith shows the President and Mrs. Harding, under escort Superintendent Horace M. Albright, viewing from Artist Point the Grand Canyon of the Yellowstone and the Lower Falls. The President was visibly impressed by the sight—one of the grandest and most beautiful in the world.

Just sixty-three years—1807-1870—were required to put Yellowstone on the map; the American people simply wouldn't believe there was any such place. The Lewis and Clark expedition of 1804-06 passed close by it, but the Indians never mentioned it, considering it the abode of "evil spirits," who punished, all talk about them. John Colter, a member of the party who went back to trap beaver, discovered it in 1807. Upon his return to St. Louis in 1810 the people doubted it "Colter's Hell" and laughed him and his tale out of court. James Bridger rediscovered it about 1828 and the public said "Just another of Jim Bridger's 'his yarns'." The gold prospectors of 1862 described it and were set down as liars. It took the Washburn-Langford expedition of 1870 to make the people believe in its wonders. The members of that expedition were for pre-empting the scenic points and making their fortunes. Cornelius Hedges rebuked them and proposed the national park plan—the first in all history. The park was established by act of congress in 1872 and Yellowstone celebrated its semi-centennial last fall.

Yellowstone contains 3,348 square miles—3,114 in Wyoming, 108 in Montana and 26 in Idaho. Big as it is, the plan is to enlarge it by the addition of many square miles to the south—the Jackson Hole country, which contains Jackson lake and the Teton mountains and is a natural part of the park.

Strange Experience.

I was exceedingly puzzled. Removing the cloth, I discovered three huge frogs in the bottom of the pall.—Chicago Journal.

Why He Called It "Portland" Cement

In 1824, an English mason wanted to produce a better cement than any then in use. To do this he burned finely ground clay and limestone together at a high heat. The hard balls (called clinker) that resulted were ground to a fine powder. When a mixture of this dull gray powder with water had hardened, it was the color of a popular building stone quarried on the Isle of Portland off the coast of England. So this mason, Joseph Aspdin, called his discovery "portland" cement.

That was less than one hundred years ago.

Portland cement was not made in the United States until fifty years ago. The average annual production for the ten years following was only 36,000 sacks. Last year the country used over 470,000,000 sacks of portland cement. Capacity to manufacture was nearly 600,000,000 sacks.

Cement cannot be made everywhere because raw materials of the necessary chemical composition are not found in sufficient quantities in every part of the country. But it is now manufactured in 27 states by 120 plants. There is at least one of these plants within shipping distance of any community in this country.

To provide a cement supply that would always be ample to meet demand has meant a good deal in costly experience to those who have invested in the cement industry. There have been large capital investments with low returns.

In the last twenty-five years, 328 cement plants have been built or have gone through some stage of construction or financing. 162 were completed and placed in operation.

Only 120 of these plants have survived the financial, operating and marketing risks of that period. Their capacity is nearly 30 per cent greater than the record year's demand.

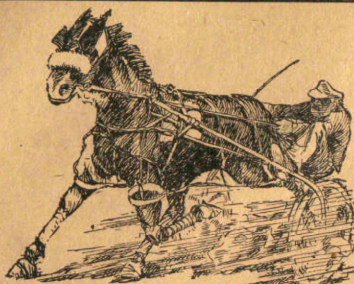

These are a few important facts about an industry that is still young. Advertisements to follow will give you more of these facts, and will tell something of the important place cement occupies in the welfare of every individual.

Japan's Awful Catastrophe

As we go to press the newspapers are chronicling the worst event in the history of the Japanese nation whereat it is claimed 200,000 persons lost their lives by earthquakes in the Nipponese Islands. Tokyo the capital, Yokohama and Nagasaki are wiped out by their inhabitants and each report that reaches us is a little worse. It is likely the whole island empire is nothing more or less than the peaks of volcanoes in the ocean which have lain dormant for centuries but are now waking.

A great tidal wave swept boats and shipping inland. Great ships were lifted like corks and hauled far inland. As the water mains are torn up it is not possible to fight fire very successfully and in most of the towns no very modern apparatus is used. Most of the buildings are of flimsy construction and it is not strange that they collapsed at the first tremor. The government is out of house and home so to speak, and more than likely the criminal classes will break loose in rioting and disorder.

Church Cooperation

The Labor Church Center purposes with the cooperation of the churches, a campaign to make "Thy Kingdom Come" in our generation.

Some newspapers in reporting our activities have persistently suppressed the vital parts of the items submitted, while editorially upholding policies intended to confuse the readers and as to the real trend of public sentiment.

Such newspapers have themselves to blame if they lose subscribers and their advertising patrons lose trade from farmers and laboring men in retaliation. Business concerns friendly to the producing classes deserve trade and will get it.

It is our purpose to fill the churches where real Christianity is preached in this crisis. A Millenium is practical and possible near at hand.

It matters not whether we believe in the "Carpenter" shop method of Creation or in evolution, whether we believe the Bible literally or in higher criticism, we are all agreed that the great vital task of the church is to lift up the Christ who gave his life in order that the unselfishness which he taught might become the guide rule of all men.

Staid old Hillsdale county once considered the ultra conservative county of the state is now called by the Detroit Free Press the radical center of the 3rd district. Let us hope that we may become the radical center not only of the 3rd district but of the state and nation, in evolving some same method of securing a fairer distribution of wealth, better industrial conditions and more practical Christianity throughout the world.

Both bride and groom have resided in this vicinity all their lives and both have a number of well wishing friends.

LUCKY DOG

The all breed dog show which is being held at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit is one of the best exhibitions of its kind in the country. One of the big features is a demonstration by trained police dogs, showing them capturing criminals, finding and guarding lost articles.

State Fair Premium Committee

Dana H. Hinkley, of Potosky, Frank Coward, of Bronson, (chairman) and A. E. Stevenson, of Port Huron, compose the committee which has charge of giving premiums at the Michigan State Fair, held in Detroit this year from August 31 to September 9.

Famous Band at Michigan State Fair

THE SINGING HUSSARS

Here is shown Strouts Military Hussars, a nationally famous band that appears at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit, August 31 to September 9. This group is more than an ordinary band; it is a high-class vaudeville act. In addition, there will be Cervoni's great concert band and the world-famous St. Kitts band of Canada, which was named the Canadian Staff band during the war.

THE CLEORA MILLER TRIO

These three compose one of the best musical acts in the country and appear at the Michigan State Fair in Detroit, August 31 to September 9, as a number on the $50,000 free attraction program. An unusual feature is the man, a one-armed cornet player of great ability.

New York Central Carols

It has been our good fortune this week to observe the Service Special train put over by the New York Central Lines which remained on the siding at Jackson for the greater part of two days. While this famous equipment stood there hundreds of people strolled down its sides and old railroad men of all denominations came, looked over the relics and remarked how "times had changed" since the old wood burners were in use and when it was necessary to constantly polish brasses and bright parts, and it was common to stop the train most anywhere and wood up, the passengers often assisting.

Heading this train is engine No. 8000 which is the last word in freight efficiency and viewed from the standpoint of achievement is nothing short of stupendous.

Imagine if you can, a mass of steel 15 feet high and fully as long as a good-sized brick block, and you have a slight conception of this juggernaut which will drag a train of one hundred loaded freight cars as easily as a boy would drag his hand sled. This engine cost $72,000 and the company owns 201 of them so you can imagine something of the amount invested in rolling stock, in order that you and I and all of us can ride in comfort and receive our freight shipments a season. The only mistake the company has made so far, is in neglecting to paint these engines in bright colors, and keeping them spick and span, but we presume in the great expense of the undertaking this important matter was overlooked.

We took pleasure in looking at the superior points of No. 8000. She is so big that handling by means of levers is not possible and the main operations are performed by steam power at the touch of a finger. For instance the reverse lever is absent and the heavy gears are reversed by steam controlled by a small hand wheel. Lights in the cab and headlight are supplied by an electric dynamo located on the boiler top, and a kow of the hand starts it. As to stoking, it is performed by a screw device actuated by steam, and a steel trough extends under the boiler and the contrivance crushes the coal to stove size as it works. It is said this mechanical stoker refuses to run at times, and the giant is quickly out of commission, as no human arm is quite capable of doing its work. There are six different dials which the crew must watch besides the water glass. Steam, water and air pressure is indicated. The boiler is fed by means of a huge steam pump located on the left hand side above the cylinder and a large heater is placed ahead of the stack. In addition two mammoth injectors assure safety at all times.

Following 8000 was the speedster No. 999 which made her debut during World's Fair year with a speed of 113 miles per hour, which has never been equaled since. Old 999 is still running and has taken in repairs to date $38,000, so we can understand railroading has its drawbacks, she was built for speed and compared with 8000 she is like David and Goliath. Here again the company could have used paint to good advantage and the public will tell them about it.

Behind 999 is an express engine built in the Jackson shops, capable of 60 miles an hour. After this came the DeWitt Clinton, first engine used by the company. Her legs are too short to keep pace with her successors and with her tender and one coach is mounted on a flat car. This notorious old kittle is in as good condition as ever and probably could be steamed although the feat has not been tried lately, but as a relic she is priceless.

One noteworthy feature is the conductor's seat on rear of tender roof, where he (poor chap) had to sit exposed to smoke and cinders while being trundled along the right of way like a common hobo at 10 miles an hour!

There was no granges on the boiler and in those days the engineer ascertained by tapping the shell with a hammer as to how low the water was. His steam pressure was also a guess, and if he had too much the safety valve would relieve it, and if not enough his engine would not run. Her side rods are fashioned from tough ash and the frame likewise. Water was fed into the boiler at first by means of a hand pump but later an injector was added. Taken all round the engineer of those times was as busy as a colored gent in a hen roost on a dark night.

The little models of running stock which the railroad is showing were carved by Ernest Warther and are wonderful works of art as every type of engine and car in use is shown in this beautiful display.

With a little more systematic advertising and more publicity the museum train would be a winner. We understand this train will be in Hillsdale next Tuesday, Sept. 11.

The last type set by Warren G. Harding has been plated in gold and sent to Washington to be kept with other relics of the late president. He set the type in the composing room of the Fairbanks (Alaska) News-Timer. At that time he was presented with a gold make-up rule by the printers of Alaska.

Jackson prison has already begun the manufacture of 1924 auto mobile license plates and the first shipment is on its way to Lansing. The official colors this next season will be black letters on yellow ground, probably the finest combination for legibility which is known. Of late we have noticed a number of plates from other states and we must say Michigan plates are 100 per cent more artistic and handsomer than any of any other state we have seen.

The people living along the Yukon River in Alaska, when the great ice break will occur. They organize pools at Fairbanks and Dawson where large sums are won and lost in the betting. A pole 4 inches thick and 20 feet high is frozen in the ice in the middle of the river. A wire cable connects this pole with an electric stop clock on the shore set to standard time. The second wire connects the pole clock stops, and that moment marks the record of the beginning of the ice break and decides all bets. The usual date is about May 10th.

The "lamp" of the firefly consists of a substance termed luciferine, and the light is produced by the oxidation of this substance in the presence of an enzyme called luciferase. The oxygen is furnished by the air tubes with which the "lamp" is abundantly supplied, and is set free by a nerve impulse so that the light is under control of the insect. The efficiency of the light of the firefly may be judged by comparing it with the efficiency of various other lights. That of the carbon incandescent lamp is 0.0042, of a tungsten bulb 0.013, and of an open arc 0.072. A quartz-mercury arc is 0.088 and the fire-fly 0.96. This light is the most perfect illumination known the radiation consisting practically entirely of light rays, with only an infinitesimal production of heat rays.

Stately Japanese cedar trees line both sides of the 30-mile boulevard leading from the imperial summer palace at Nikko, Japan, to a near-by village. The trees tower 200 feet or more in the air. The legend has it that several hundred years ago the emperor summoned all the noblemen to his summer palace, each one being requested to bring a gift. An impoverished nobleman came with him a sack of tree seeds, and planting the seeds on both sides of the highway caused his name to be remembered long after the gold and silver offerings of his colleagues had vanished.

All corporations are not soulless. When the crippled body of little Clyde Patnoe, of Cisco, California was swept over a 30-foot falls, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, night and day with steam shovels, dynamite, picks and wheelbarrows and turned the angry waters of the Yuba River into a new channel. The body was recovered from between jagged rocks just below the falls. The child was a cripple and a great favorite with the workmen. After the rescue of the body the river was turned back into its old channel. The electric company's books show an item of more than $20,000 on the red ink side of its ledger.

The site of the pioneer village of Schoenbrun, the first settlement in the Northwest Territory, near New Philadelphia, Ohio, has been determined by an archeologist. The old village was founded in 1772 by a Moravian mission. Fragments of brightly colored glass resembling Venetian glass, such as traders gave Indians for skins of animals, fragments of glass knives used for hunting, large sheets of pure beaten copper, flintlocks used in muskets, tomahawks, wrought iron nails, human bones and potteryware were found in the cellars. The village passed from existence in 1782.

AUTO BIG HELP TO STATE FAIRS

The importance of the automobile in the development of the State Fair is being emphasized more and more every year, according to George W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the Michigan State Fair which will be held in Detroit from August 31 to September 9.

"There was a day," Mr. Dickinson said, "when many persons thought the passing of the horse would doom the fair. But the result has been just the opposite."

"The large number of automobiles relieves the heavy traffic on trains during fair time with the result that the motorists and those remaining railroad passengers all travel in comfort."

"This encourages many more farmers to bring their families to Detroit for the great exposition. In fact the automobile has just about brought the fair to the front yard of every farmer within a radius of 75 miles."

"We expect to do a great deal more for the accommodation of touring motorists this year. We had a camp for that year where many of our automobiles they could park their cars, pitch tents and do their cooking. This year the tourists camp will be enlarged and we will be able to accommodate comfortably about 1,000 persons a day."

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Tobacco, Tombstones and Profits

You have seen pictures of military cemeteries near great battlefields. Upon every headstone is chiseled the inscription, "Killed in Action."

If one knew nothing about war, these headstones would be sufficient to impress upon him that war is deadly—that it kills.

How much would you know about tobacco if, upon the tombstone of everyone killed by it were inscribed, "Killed by Tobacco?" You would know a lot more about it than you do now, but you would not know all, because tobacco does more than kill. It half-kills its victims in the cemeteries and in the streets. It is bad enough to be dead, but it is a question if it is not sometimes worse to be half-dead—to be nervous, irritable, unable to sleep well, with efficiency cut in two and vitality ready to snap at the first great strain.

This seems like exaggeration. It isn't. It is well within the truth. You do not know the facts because you are not permitted to know them. It is profitable slowly to poison you and millions of others—so you are poisoned. You were only a boy when you were urged to smoke cigars. A little later you saw advertisements in which your attention was called to cigars and smoking tobacco. Now you are pressed to use tobacco in all its forms except snuff. You can buy snuff if you want to but it is not urged. Perhaps there are too many false teeth in America to make sneezing popular. But chewing and smoking are set forth by the tobacco trusts as delightful, harmless pastimes. It is even declared that the use of tobacco is beneficial—that it "soothes" the nerves. Chloroform soothes the nerves, too. A small bottle of it will soothe them forever.

Let me tell you how tobacco kills. Smokers do not all drop dead around the cigar lighters in tobacco stores. They go away and years later die with something else. From the tobacco trusts' point of view, that is one of the finest things about tobacco. The victims do not die on the premises even when sold the worst cigars. They go away, and when they die, the doctors certify that they died of something else—pneumonia, heart disease, or typhoid fever, or what not.

In other words, tobacco kills indirectly and escapes the blame. What killed General Grant? Why, of course you know—cancer. But what caused the cancer in his throat? Do you know? Smoking caused it. General Lee could not get Grant, but tobacco got him.

What killed President McKinley? An assassin's bullet, you say. Partly right and partly wrong. McKinley was shot, but his wound need not have proved fatal. Thousands of men, hurt worse, have survived. But they had good hearts. When a good strain comes, strong hearts are necessary to bring the sufferers through alive. McKinley when he was born, had a strong heart, but the tobacco habit got him and left his heart muscles soft and flabby. When McKinley had need of strong heart he went down because he had nothing to keep him up. He had smoked up his most vital strength.

Woodrow Wilson when old was seized by an ailment that brought him almost to the point of death. For hours he was unconscious and for weeks his physicians could not say whether he would live or die. He had need of a good heart. In his hour of need he had a good heart. If Mr. Marshall might have been president.

In the African jungle, Theodore Roosevelt was stricken with such a fever that he begged his son and other companions to save themselves by leaving him to die. He, too had need of a strong heart, and he had one. Mr. Roosevelt never used tobacco. His African illness was so serious that he returned to America emaciated and shaken, but he at least had the heart-power to enable him to get back.

Inland Fishing

The connecting waters between the Great Lakes are classed as inland waters.

Hook and Line. Defined by law to be a single line or single rod and line with hooks or hooks attached, while held in the hand or under immediate control when being used for still fishing. Casting and Trolling. Defined to mean a single line or single rod and line with hook or hooks attached or with a natural or artificial bait, not to exceed six inches in length and one or more hooks or gangs of hooks attached to be used for casting or trolling for fish, and the method of capturing fish shall be by means of fish taking bait or hooking the mouth.

Grab hooks, snag hooks, set lines and night lines. Unlawful to use.

Ice lines. Defined to be a single line with a single hook attached and five such lines may be used by one person during December, January, February and March, for taking all kinds of fish, except the different kinds of trout, bass, and wall-eyed pike through the ice.

Nets, excepting dip nets and minnow seines. Unlawful to use or have in possession within one half mile of any inland lake or stream.

Spear and dip netting. Carp, suckers, mullet and red sides may be taken in the streams and rivers by this means without artificial light during March and April in the lower peninsula, and from March 1st to May 15 in the upper peninsula, of Michigan.

A kind of fish except black bass, wall-eyed pike and brook trout may be speared through the ice during January and February in each year.

Minnow seine. Not more than twenty feet in length may be used for taking chubs, shiners, suckers, dace and stone roller minnows from any of the rivers and streams; not to exceed thirty feet in length and five feet in width may be used in inland lakes. Unlawful to transport or carry away minnows taken for bait from the waters of any trout stream.

Wall-eyed pike, blue gills, sun-fish, crappies and sturgeon are now protected fish as well as all species of trout and bass. These fish cannot be bought or sold, and hotel proprietors and resort keepers are admonished that neither these nor any other protected fish can be served to guests where a charge is made for the service, provided that fish caught by guests may be served to them at their request.

Jack and all other kinds of artificial lights, dynamite and all other explosive substances. Unlawful to use or have in possession on any of the inland waters or within one-half mile thereof. Firearms. Unlawful to use for taking any kind of fish in any of the waters of this state at any time.

Black bass and wall-eyed pike. Unlawful to take or have in possession more than a total of ten bass and may be composed of big or small mouth or either of the two species. Wall-eyed pike ten.

Blue gills, sunfish, calico bass, white bass, rock bass and crappies. Unlawful to take or have in possession more than a total of twenty-five of each species.

Farm Land gets State Tax Cut. Members of the state board of equalization, after hearings extending over several days, have fixed the equalized value of Michigan for 1923 at $6,540,000,000. This is an increase of $1,540,000,000 over the past years and falls almost entirely upon the industrial centers of the state.

The total reduction made from the tax commission's recommendation is $5,065,000. The reductions are entirely in agricultural counties.

Wayne county was raised to $2,665,500,000, an increase of nearly $600,000,000 over the equalized value of a year ago.

Ten Northern counties were given reductions. As the result of the big increase in valuation, the state tax will be considerably reduced. George Lord, chairman of the tax commission, states that it will be about $2.32, as compared with $3 last year.

The amount of state tax to be collected this year will be about $16,000,000. This is a considerable reduction in the amount that Michigan taxpayers must pay to the state. Last year the state tax was over $17,300,000.

The reduction in the levy on the rural districts and the raise to the industrial centers is all the more noteworthy because of the tremendous effort which was made by Detroit representatives to show that city levies should be reduced or at least kept down to present levels. The decision of the board is a splendid tribute to the supervisors and others who so ably represented the rural districts.

It is well to recall that in the hearings recently held before the State Board of Equalization to determine the State's equalized value and to re-apportion the tax levy among the several counties of the state, Michigan farmers and the Michigan state farm bureau were ably represented by Melville B. McDermott of Lowell, member of the Board of Directors of the State Farm Bureau, and an acknowledged authority on taxation matters.

Mr. McDermott presented evidence to prove what is commonly known to be true, namely that in Michigan today rural property is valued relatively higher than is city property. He declared before the tax board that Wayne county should remain at its recommended value for 1923 while the rest of the state should be reduced an average of 10.87 per cent.

McDermott declared that farm property is either assessed too high or the utilities of the state and city property are assessed too low and he gave figures to show that the tax commission had increased the general property valuation of the state 78 per cent since 1916, mining properties from 1915 to 1922 were increased only 19 per cent.

Mr. McDermott said real estate and corporate property in Detroit showed an assessed value of about 61 per cent of its actual value, while rural property showed 55 per cent of that value. Later, in reply to Mr. Nagel of Detroit, he cited a number of tracts of farm land in Kent county showing by their sale prices they were either purchased recently or offered for sale at less than the assessed valuation. Nagel claimed that only in Detroit could property be bought at less than its assessed valuation.

when an overturned auto was discovered in the ditch between Ann Arbor and Jackson by a passer-by.
Under the machine was found the dead bodies of a young man and a woman still warm. It is more will never be known but it is surmised the young man fell asleep while driving and tracks indicate the machine running straight in back and turning gradually to the

Jackson Fair Has Reached Its Peak

The opinion of most of those who went to Jackson this year is that this county fair is on the wane. The displays were good but small and in many departments there was too much vacant space. The grounds too on the north side presented a deserted appearance, because the concessions there were not near so numerous as in last year. Whether this is because of an off year for the farming population or because of mismanagement, no one knows.
Burris, the man at the helm is said to be as good an executive in this line as can be found anywhere, but surely he fell down this year. Other discrepancies to be noticed were the long waits between special performances in front of the Grand Stand, and the absence of enthusiasm among the crowd. People stood about with absolutely no interest in what was going on, and even the afternoon horse events failed to awaken the fans. Ball games were pulled off and a few things of that kind, but it was easy to see something was missing. It is likely the Jackson county papers will have to come out with the most stereotyped with-ups of the fair saying the gate receipts were the largest ever known and the displays bulging out on all sides which is pure bunk, but then as we say "ish ka bibble, etc."

The Capitol Theatre

Nothing of recent date has impressed us as did the film featuring Gloria Swanson in "Prodigal Daughters" at the Capitol theatre in Jackson this week. There is something so gripping, so real in this depicting of the perils of high society in New York City. The thread of the story runs something like this;
Two daughters of a wealthy man in New York are but children when their father leaves this country on a government mission lasting five years in France. Upon his return he finds his daughters grown up and in the bonton society where they imitate all the vices of the denimondes. Their father is ignored in the mad whirl of society but the girls finally get their lessons.
I. N. McLaren formerly of Hillsdale is manager of the Capitol and he

BIG TELESCOPE FOR RUSSIA

Instrument Manufactured in British Factory Weighs Nine Tons and Is 45 Feet Long.

In view of the present condition of Russia, it is rather surprising to find that the Soviet government has ordered a telescope which is one of the largest in the world. This telescope has just been completed in a British factory, and will shortly be transported to an observatory on the shores of the Black sea. It weighs about nine tons, and the inside length of the tube is 45 feet. Heavy as the telescope is, it is so admirably fitted that it can be moved by electrical means as easily as if it were a small portable apparatus. The push-button system of control has been adopted, so that all the operator has to do to direct the telescope to any part of the heavens is to press certain buttons. A second telescope, almost as large as this, is being made at the same British factory for another observatory in Russia. So delicate is the work on these giant instruments that about three years are occupied in designing and constructing them.

Secrecy Impossible.

"Do you believe in secret diplomacy?"

"No, sir," replied Mr. Meekton: "I don't believe in it. I like to see 'em keep anything from Her Majesty, if she makes up her mind to find out just what they're talking about."

Michigan Happenings

Colonel B. Clemens of Milwaukee, Wis., was elected president of the Thirty-third Division Veterans' association, Brigadier General Guy M. Wilson, Flint, Mich., was chosen first vice president, and Milwaukee was selected as the place where the 1934 convention will be held at a date to be chosen by the executive committee. Its convening in Grand Rapids, Ida. Other officers elected were: Colonel George F. O'Connell, Madison, Wis., second vice president; Lieutenant-Colonel Leroy Pearson, Lansing, treasurer.

The Michigan grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, in golden jubilee session at Mt. Clemens, elected the following officers: Grand chancellor, Fred D. Vos, of Grand Rapids; grand vice-chancellor, Ray O. Brundage, of Kalamazoo; prolate, William C. Watson, of Jonesville; K. R. S. Will E. Hampton, Ann Arbor; master of exchequer, Harvey N. Clement, Greenville; master at arms, H. E. Vroman, Wyandotte; inner guard, Thomas P. McKinnis, South Haven; outer guard, A. L. Pitch, Charlevoix.

Will S. Purdie, soul saving sheriff of Emmet County for nine years, advocate of jail reforms and consistent supporter of the Golden Rule in his relations with criminals, is dead. Shot in the head and through the body, he was instantly killed in a gun duel with Joseph Grosskopf, 35, on Grosskopf's farm near Harbor Springs. Grosskopf had been in the Petoskey hospital wounded in the chest, abdomen, shoulder and left hand by bullets from the sheriff's gun.

Numerous protests are being filed with the department of conservation by northern Michigan sportsmen's clubs against the new law, additional plantings of fish in certain northern streams. This unusual condition developed as the result of the enactment of a new law winter by the legislature, which provides land owners, controlling both sides of a stream stocked by the state, from fishing in the stream if the public is denied fishing rights.

Wendell Evans, youthful caddy at the links of the Bay City Country Club, won the golf title from a large field by defeating Fred D. Johnson, veteran of several state matches, in the final match last week. Evans had previously defeated several of the ranking players in the state, including other youngsters, Eugene Hand, 14, and Al Dintdale, 16, placed near the top, the latter being low medalist in the tourney.

The new $125,000 Pennock hospital, at Hastings, said to be one of the finest in Michigan, outside of Grand Rapids and Kalamazoo, has been opened. The building was erected through donations made by merchants of the city. The new structure is of concrete and hollow brick, 60 by 130 feet in size, and is four stories high. It has 18 private rooms and 4 wards, 8 of 4-bed size and 4 of 2-bed size.

The state of Michigan recently paid a debt contracted nearly 10 years ago. Early in 1914, Peter Sunken, employed by the I. Stephenson company, of Detroit, was killed. His wife, on behalf of herself and her two children, entered a claim from Poland. She was the widow of the Michigan department of labor and industry recognized the claim, after nearly 10 years of litigation carried on by an insurance company.

At the opening of the public schools at Grand Rapids, William A. Greeson, superintendent of schools, announced a ban on extra holidays. All schools, he directed, shall be kept in session every day and for the full number of hours each day during the academic year. The schools will not be dismissed for the West Michigan State Fair, thus breaking a precedent of many years.

Workmen exposed to storms on orders of their employers can collect from the employers if their exposure results in injury, the state insurance commission decided. This was made in the case brought by John Gurden, Grand Rapids, against the Grand River Sand and Gravel company and the Travelers Insurance company.

Merton Davis, 54 years old, farm hand, was killed instantly when he fell from the top of a 20-foot ladder to the barn floor.

Authority was granted to the Western State Normal school at Kalamazoo to improve the barracks at that place they can be used by the students this fall. Superintendent of Public Instruction, Thomas Johnson stated that if the building could be placed in condition to use it would provide room for about 150 students.

George W. Cook, of Flint, was elected president of the Michigan State association, succeeding George W. Nichols, of Ionia, at the convention in Grand Rapids.

Plans for a city-wide observance of the 135th anniversary of the adoption of the constitution of the United States, to begin Monday, September 17, and to continue for one week, are in process of elaboration by a specially organized committee comprising representatives of virtually all of Detroit's civic, educational, religious, patriotic and social welfare bodies. Foremost among the purposes of the observance is the popularization of the principles upon which the statesmen of the constitutional convention, in 1787, erected the American form of government.

Gov. Grossbeck is personally directing the reconstruction work by state prisoners on the nine miles of the Dixie Highway between Flint and the Grosse-Oakland line. About 265 prisoners are employed on the job. The work has been under way for nearly a month, yet not quite a mile and a quarter has been completed. The highway is being reconstructed by the Department's district engineer assigned to the work and four other department men, replacing them with others when he gave instructions to speed up.

Governor Grossbeck will call a special session of the legislature some time in November for the purpose of taking up the question of legislative reapportionment, which under the constitution must be fixed this year. The next 10-year period, although there has been no formal or official announcement of his intention to call the lawmakers into extraordinary session, it was learned from reliable sources here last week that the governor practically has decided upon that course.

A profit of $14,000, although it has been in operation a little over a month is the record made by the state-owned automobile ferry at the Straits of Mackinac, according to Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, who was at Iron Mountain on a tour of Upper Peninsula roads. The ferry line in November. It is expected the cost of navigation will use the project paid for and that there will be something over to defray the cost of a new boat next spring, Mr. Rogers said.

Suit to bring about an adjustment of the disputed Michigan-Weinman boundary line probably will be instituted by Michigan. Andrew B. Dougherty, attorney-general, said Mr. Dougherty visited the territory in question last week and in question is said to contain valuable tracts of iron ore. It includes some territory between the head waters of the Huron and the mouth of the Montreal river, several miles in the Menominee River and Islands in Green Bay.

Superintendent of Police A. A. Carroll, of Grand Rapids, has enlisted the support of Superintendent of Police, William P. Rutledge, of Detroit, president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, to place the present city commission, composed of a mayor and four commissioners.

Unless the city commission of Port Huron appeals to the State Supreme Court from the decision of Judge Harry J. Dugan, Port Huron electors will have opportunity to vote on the adoption of the new revised city charter, which provides for a mayor and four commissioners to replace the present city commission.

State-owned cement and fertilizer plants are feasible, according to the preliminary findings of R. A. There are also many deposits in the Charlevoix and Alpena districts.

The $5,000,000 bond issue voted for street railway extensions last spring, approximately $1,000,000 of which already has been expended in anticipation of the sale of the securities, was declared illegal Wednesday by Corporation Counsel Richard I. Lawson of Detroit.

James E. Cook, a farmer living near Owosso, told of a homing pigeon that is insisting on making its home in his house. The bird flew into an open window. After it had been fed for three days it was set free, but it again returned to the farm house. A search around its leg reads: "33-7850-Central Detroit."

Announcement by Secretary of State Charles DeLand of his candidacy for the Republican nomination for Governor in next year's primary is expected in the next few weeks.

Smoking the peace pipe in wartime

A late report from an A. E. F. veteran who found a can of tobacco in his soldier mail

It was during the thick of things in France that Gen. Pershing sent the following frantic cable to Washington:

"Tobacco is as necessary as food. Send a thousand tons at once."

As any ex-doughboy will tell you, a thousand tons of tobacco distributed to the fighting front would have shown good intentions, but it didn't fill the need—not by a few million pipoules.

Even today letters still come in from veterans who have forgotten the horrors of war and remember only the thrill of "a real American smoke" in France.

For one, Hugh Livingston, Adjutant of Yankee Division Post, No. 272, V.F.W., remembers:

Larus & Brother Co., Richmond, Va.

My assignment to Edgeworth took place over in the training area in France. I was sent to a training area in France.

One night, after a hard day's work, I was lying in bed and I was thinking of the blue box of Edgeworth. All I thought of was the blue box of Edgeworth.

After using the French tubes for several weeks and burning out my mouth and throat in a raw state you can imagine how good and satisfying the Edgeworth taste was.

We were sent to bed, and I fell asleep smoking. You can see a letter went home for more Edgeworth.

Since that time I have used nothing but Edgeworth. It is just what I need. Thank you for putting such a satisfying and satisfying smoke in my hands.

Gratefully yours, Hugh Livingston, Adjutant of Yankee Division Post, No. 272, V.F.W., remembers.

Probably any good American smoker tobacco would have brought the same joy to Mr. Edgeworth as it did to Mr. Livingston. But it is a fact that the Edgeworth makes a friend, more than just a life-time ally.

Edgeworth's one great recommendation for most smokers is that it is always the same. You can buy a package in Chicago, New Orleans, San Francisco, and each package will give you the same satisfying smoke.

If you are not an Edgeworth smoker, you are cordially invited to accept some from the dealer of both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Just drop a postcard with your name and address to Larus & Brother Company, 75 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va., and the free samples will be forwarded to you immediately. If you will also include the name and address of your tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

To Edgeworth Tobacco Mechanism: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-ounce can of any size of Edgeworth Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Contagious Roup Cause of Heavy Poultry Loss

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

With the approach of fall and wet, cold weather, contagious roup, say members of Iowa State college, is one of the most dangerous diseases of the chicken. It causes a heavy loss not only from a high death rate but from the fact that it interferes with egg production and causes loss of vitality in breeding.

Contagious roup is easy to identify. It starts with a thin watery discharge from the nose and eyes, which has an offensive odor. Inflammation sets in, the birds begin to cough and sneeze, breathing becomes noisy and they frequently breathe through their mouths. The secretions from the nose and eyes change to a yellowish cheese-like mass.

Roup can easily be prevented by avoiding damp, poorly ventilated, overcrowded quarters. To cure a sick bird, place it in a dry, well-ventilated place away from the other birds and give it plenty of fresh water and feed. Every morning and evening remove all the cheesy matter from the eyes and nostrils and dip the bird's head into a solution of bichloride of mercury (1:1,000). This is made by placing one 1/2 ounce of bichloride tablet in a pint of water. Hold the bird firmly and immerse the head until the eyes are covered, keeping it there a few seconds or until it struggles.

Poultry Manure Is Most Valuable as Fertilizer

Poultry manure contains fertilizing constituents which would cost 20 to 25 cents as commercial fertilizers. The average light droppings of a hen are 30 to 40 pounds annually. A flock of 100 hens at this rate would produce $20 to $25 worth per year. To prevent loss of the fertilizing constituents, avoid soil contact with the dropping boards as an absorbent. Wood ashes or lime should not be mixed with the manure. As poultry manure is particularly adapted to gardening, poultry raisers can often dispose of it at a good price. Such manure will add a little to the profits from the flock.

Feather-Pulling Harmful in Any Chicken Flock

Feather-pulling destroys a flock. When a cock begins to look as if he were pecked on the neck and breast you must then begin to watch for the hen that is doing the mischief; and she should be removed at once, as she will teach the habit to others if she remains with the flock. Feather-pulling is a vice that comes from confinement and idleness. There is no remedy for it, but it may be prevented by so feeding the fowls that they will be compelled to scratch. They should be fed meat and bone-meal, plenty of grass, and a little salt, in their food.

Fowls Lay Majority of Eggs During First Year

Hens lay the majority of eggs during their first two laying seasons, and especially during their pullet year, if they are early hatched. If a hen lays well during her pullet year she should be kept for another year as a breeder. If she lays well during her second year she should be kept for another year as a breeder. The older she is and the more culling she survives the better, for then she has proved that she has the ability to stand up under long confinement and laying, and consequently is valuable as a breeder.

Overcrowding of Fowls Cause of Many Failures

Overcrowding of poultry is one of the most common reasons why success is not had. The temptation to carry a few extra fowls, over and above the capacity of the buildings and equipment, and thereby "increase" the profit, is one of the commonest stumbling blocks to actual success. When this lesson is learned (sometimes it is a bitter lesson) then real profit is more likely to be had.

VALUABLE NOTES

Vigorous chicks come from eggs laid by hens of good breeding and vitality.

Don't throw or bury dead fowls where there is any possibility of others of the flock having a chance to eat the diseased meat. Burn them.

Poultry will pay for a lot of milk. Where milk is fed to hens and chicks freely, there is no need to furnish any meat scraps or meat-meal mixes.

When you discover that there is something wrong with some of the fowls don't stop your investigations until you have discovered the trouble.

Gapes do not usually trouble turkeys as much as chickens, but turkeys sometimes pick up the gape worms from infected soil which has become ranging from chicken raising.

A splendid vacation job for the restless bird is mending fences.

Farmers who have been in the habit of selling their hens with pale shanks and keeping the hens with the nice yellow legs have been selling their best layers.

A careful culling of your poults just before they start the laying season will improve the production of your flock. The birds that mature early showing best body development and redness of comb should be saved.

Graduate Nurse Finds "The Perfect Remedy"

"From my long experience as a professional nurse, I do not hesitate to say 'Tulac' is nature's most perfect remedy" is the far-reaching statement given out for publication, recently, by Mrs. J. A. Borden, 425 Pontius Ave., Seattle, Wash., a graduate of the National Temperance Hospital, Chicago.

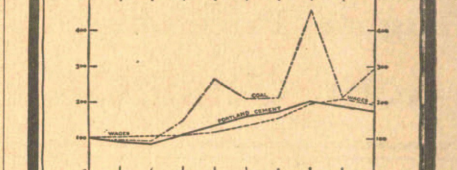

"I have used 'Tulac' exclusively for seven years in the treatment of my charity patients," said Mrs. Borden. "My experience has been that for keeping the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels functioning properly, and for toning up the system in general, it has no equal."

Coal Prices from Survey of Current Business, February 1933. Constant price from U. S. Geological Survey, 1913. Wages from November 1922 Monthly Labor Review, Bureau of Labor Statistics.

More for Your Money

Swapping things—as when our grandmothers traded eggs for calico at the cross-roads store—gives a better understanding of values. By measuring one thing against another we too can often judge values more clearly.

Coal and wages make up more than half the manufacturing cost of cement.

The chart above shows price fluctuations for portland cement, coal and wages during the past ten years. In each case 100 is used to represent 1913 figures, by the Government departments which compiled these statistics.

Translated into "eggs and calico" language, this chart shows that a ton of coal would buy nearly twice as much cement in 1922 as in 1913. A day's wages also would buy more cement in 1922 than in 1913.

This means that even though coal and wages make up more than half its manufacturing cost, cement is now relatively lower in price than either coal or wages.

So, considering these increased costs, it is plain that in buying cement you get more for your money than before.

Michigan's First Pure Bred Sire Sale Is Planned

A new venture in livestock improvement work is the proposed purebred sire sale which is being promoted by the Ionia County Farm Bureau. The sale is to be held September 22 in the splendid new sales pavilion which was recently erected and placed at the disposal of Ionia county farmers by the National Bank of Ionia. The idea is believed to be a new one, and credit for it is given to B. F. Hall, of Belding. On his suggestion the Ionia county farm bureau is featuring the sale as the first of its kind, and is expected that it will lead the way to other sales of a similar nature that will result in great benefit to the live stock industry.

According to county agent, R. L. Helm, the proposed sale is novel and has the peculiar feature of being the first sale of the kind ever attempted in the state. It is to be a sire sale exclusively. There are no "equal rights" about it. The females of the species will not take part. The plan briefly is this: Only sires are to be sold. Two to four good registered male animals of all breeds of dairy cattle, beef cattle hogs and sheep being raised in the county are to be consigned by the various breeders and breed associations and sold at auction at this sale. It is believed that most of those who come to this sale will be farmers of Ionia and adjoining counties who are in the market for good pure bred males to improve their grade herds and flocks, and the purpose of this sale is to offer them an opportunity to get this kind of a male at an auction where prices are sure to be right. The movement will ultimately it is declared, result in great improvement to the grade herds of Ionia county farmers by the more general use of pure-bred sires. The details of the sale are being arranged as rapidly as possible. Mr. Helm states, and nearly all of the consignors agree, it is possible to handle a large number of the services of Col. J. P. Hutton of Lansing have been secured for the sale.

Are Health Interests Secondary to Economics

"Keep health interests to the fore—it's a saving in the long run," says Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner. Municipalities often display abject indifference to welfare of neighbors "down the river." Monuments, parks and other civic luxuries are constructed and improved rather than protect another's health by the considered-ignoble pursuit of proper sewage disposal. Funds are often lacking.

Objections and cases of delayed action if action at all attend many sanitary engineering recommendations of the Michigan department of health. Court procedure must be resorted to and delays in health programs invite epidemics. A southern Michigan city has been urged to attend to its sewage disposal to keep it from contaminating the water supply, but nothing has been done. Swift incisive action would preclude all possibility of typhoid outbreaks.

Economic stress necessitated the employment of a depreciable treatment plant at the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Howell. The tank was built 20 years ago and was designed by a commercial concern to cut down the water supply, but it has never proved to be adequate and costs for replacing the plant will exceed those incurred had the work been well done in the first place.

The Free Space Graters

We are constantly besieged by free space graters who want to advertise one thing or another or themselves because for the "public good" so they claim. We find our waste basket growing by leaps and bounds, and of course it furnishes us with a large amount of kindling and its general use shall be of kindling. The latest graft is National at Good Roads which they want us to put in our columns, even sending us a half-tone cut. Well, we of course want our highways and all that but we will say this if good highways cost as much accordingly as they do in North Adams Uncle Samuel's treasury would soon bankrupt and the whole blessed nation would go under the hammer. As far as free space is concerned every publisher gives away annually many dollars worth and charges it up to the profit and loss account. He can't do without, but when it comes to schemes put out by a class of organized companies working for the benefit of the contractors we shy the leashes. We don't buy the field of the country weekly is to pull such fellows. We are quite certain most of these articles concern the man who is to draw his salary out of the municipality rather than the public. We are quite sure who pays the bills. Whereat the old adage again bobs up "why does the world go crazy over every fad that comes along instead of taking it by the reigns?"

Did you notice the fellow who owns three automobiles and a modern villa at Devils Lake or some other lake is always looking for a chance to save the gas while the man who owns a horse and a Flivver makes journeys just for to see how many he can make? Of course you have, and so have we, but it all comes in a lifetime.

Lost Man Power

In stating their case before the United States Coal Commission, the bituminous operators of the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers' Association have submitted records of strikes in that field which might prove startling to the consumer.

Six hundred and sixty-four local strikes have been called in the unionized mines of that field since April 1, 1916, the operators aver, and all of them were in violation of contracts to which the local, district and national officials of the United Mine Workers have subscribed. But even those statistics, as surprising as they are, do not have the effect on the lay mind that subsequent revelations have.

"The number of man days lost by the strikes of which we have recorded the operators declared, "were 1,133,661."

Assuredly the United States Coal Commission must have been impressed by these figures. No industry in the country can afford the hiatus caused by the loss of more than a million days of production. In round terms, equivalent to the idleness of 3,100 men for an entire year.

Cows Sell on Milk Pail Basis

The selling of cows with a year's production record in cow testing as association work, and with definite information on the total feed consumed, the value of the product and the total return above feed cost, will mark the first exclusive sale of cow test association animals ever held in Michigan. The sale will be held September 20th at the West Michigan Fair, Grand Rapids.

A record made in a Michigan cow testing association of 300 pounds or more of butterfat per year, is required before a cow can be entered in the sale. The cow must be tuberculin tested. Along with the butter fat production record, a detailed record of feed costs, the value of the product, and the return above feed cost will be furnished. The records of all cows entered in the sale are verified by members of the dairy extension division of the M. A. C. supervisors of cow testing association work in the state.

The sale of cows on a definite "milk pail performance" basis places a new premium on production ability. There are 61 active cow testing associations in Michigan, representing 1,800 farmer members, all of whom are keeping accurate and certified records on the cows in their herds.

Fall Said to Be Seed Corn Season

The fall of the year is seed corn season and Michigan's best corn growers are preparing now for next year's crop by selecting their planting stocks in the field before the seed is damaged by freezing and moulding. Those who put off thinking about their seed supply until spring find good seed corn hard to get.

Successful corn growers know that next to actual planting of the crop the most important step in profitable corn production is the selection and proper curing of the seed in the fall when the crop reaches maturity. The opportunity thus afforded at this season to select in the field from the most vigorous and highest yielding plants to two or four bushels per acre from superior heredity alone.

Seed corn should be selected in the field just before the crop is put in the shock or on the silo, it is claimed by the Michigan Agricultural College. At this time the kernel is usually glazed and dented, the in side husk is white and the leaves are turning brown. In case of putting the side of the field shocking along the fence so that the ears will have time for further maturity.

Correct striding is important. The ears should be stored as soon as picked in a dry, well ventilated place. The ears should be hung or laid out in such a manner that no two ears will touch. It is highly important that windows in the storage room be kept open until the corn is well dried. Artificial heat is a great aid in drying seed corn.

M. A. C. bulletin No. 289, "Corn Growing in Michigan" gives a detailed discussion of field selection of seed corn. It may be had free on request from the Dean of Agriculture, Agricultural College, East Lansing, Mich.

Many Articles May Be Made of Home-Tanned Leather

When a hide or skin cannot be sold locally at a good price if someone pays for it, tanning it and then it is a self for use in making harness, bags, garments, shoes, rugs and other articles. Extension agents of the United States department of agriculture and of the state agricultural colleges are endeavoring to aid in the profitable utilization of the hides of animals butchered on the farm. Home demonstration agents in several of the Southern states have begun to interest women in the possibility of making up the leather in various ways. Three home demonstration agents who have been given scholarships to attend the part of the studies to leather work in the hope of assisting rural women in this work.

A club woman in northwest Oklahoma recently made herself a valuable horse-hide coat which she believed would have cost at least $50 if she had bought it ready made. She spent only $9 for tanning and a small additional amount for the tanned lining. Everyone in the club assisted in planning the garment and applying the principles of cutting and designing learned from the extension agent. Each woman felt that she had her hand in its construction and that she could make a similar coat.

Most useful and attractive coats and sleeveless jumpers with hats to match can be made from a veal skin which can be tanned without the hair at a reasonably low cost. Many useful and marketable articles are also made from lamb, sheep and goat skins.

Moscow Hears Col. Kerr

More than double the usual church attendance came out to hear Col. Kerr at Moscow, Sunday evening, at the Methodist Episcopal church.

George Burr Smith explained the objects of the Hillsdale County Labor Church Center, which is a Layman's organization for the purpose of increasing the church attendance by laboring men and working farmers.

Col. Kerr said in part: "The world is at a crisis. On the one hand are the progressives of both political parties, who believe that the Bible is practical. On the other hand are certain politicians, who have used the League of Nations as a bug a boo to secure control of the immense power of the Federal Reserve System and the Farm Loan System and to secure the repeal of Excess Profits Tax and the Sur tax and fasten oppressive measures upon the people."

"By referring to join the League of Nations this country has broken one condition of her promise to Germany, under which that country laid down her arms and placed her hands at the mercy of her opponents. Relying on the record of our Government for integrity she bared her breast to her hated rivals in Europe. It is now up to the United States to defend itself. Germany in her defenseless state has brought about by her trust in this Government, receive just and fair treatment from her former enemies, but that all other conditions of that Treaty of Versailles are faithfully lived up to as well. America at present is a monkey wrench in the gears of Europe so far as conditions in Europe are concerned."

Col. Kerr will speak next Sunday a. m. at Allen, in the p. m. he will speak at Litchfield and in the evening at Jonesville.

Churches Corners Meeting

Despite the rain, a good crowd assembled at the Churches Corners Congregational church to hear Col. Kerr on "Christian Brotherhood, the debt we owe the Soldier." Col. Kerr advocated a township pastor to serve both the Congregational and Methodist churches, adopting the commendable features of the Township church of the early New England Congregationalists and the Methodist plan of appointing the ministers at the conference for each township.

Besides Community Brotherhood he advocated United Brotherhood as embodied in the League of Nations Covenant as a means of averting future wars.

Col. Kerr spoke last Sunday evening at Moscow, urging that the Township church plan be adopted by the four townships in the North Eastern portion of Hillsdale county, and that the invitation of the Methodists to receive an undenominational delegation from this part of Hillsdale county be accepted for the Michigan Conference at Grand Rapids next week.

Citizens of North Adams have been urging church consolidation for some time, and have offered to

CATHOLICS PLAN A NEW CAMPAIGN

DIOCESE OF DETROIT TO COLLECT PLEDGES FOR GREAT SACRED HEART SEMINARY

TO COMPLETE RECORD WORK

Bishop Gallagher Asks Payment of $9,000.00 Donations for Training School for Priests.

In response to an appeal from their spiritual leader, the Rt. Rev. Michael J. Gallagher, D. D., Bishop, the Roman Catholic people of the Diocese of Detroit opened a campaign on Sunday, May 27, to finish a record-breaking accomplishment they began three years ago. In the six weeks from May 27 to July 8, inclusive, they will adopt measures which will insure the payment in full of all pledges made for the new Sacred Heart seminary in the campaign of 1920 and the collection of donations to this great diocesan training school for priests from those Catholics who, in the past three years, have come to the diocese to make their homes.

The new campaign continues in Detroit and the neighboring parishes until Sunday, June 17, when the collection of the new seminary will be held. In the remainder of the diocese the drive begins on Sunday, June 24 and continues two weeks.

As was the plan in the 1920 campaign, there will be an exchange of pastors in all churches of the diocese on Sunday during the drive. It is hoped in this way to bring home to every Catholic man, woman and child in the diocese the need of the seminary for a prompt payment of the pledges and for donations from the newcomers who, for any reason, have had no opportunity to take part in the work.

Three years ago, in a campaign extending from May 10 to August 10, 1920, 72,000 Catholics of the diocese pledged themselves to contributions in the amount of more than $9,000,000 for the erection, equipment and endowment of the Sacred Heart seminary.

It was a record never before reached by a like body of people in the history of the Catholic Church; a record which, at once became the subject of universal comment and sincere congratulation throughout the Catholic world.

Today, a group of buildings which, for architectural beauty and for modern facilities of convenience and efficiency, are unequalled anywhere, is being erected on a 28-acre site at Linwood avenue and Chicago boulevard in the heart of Detroit's eighth city Northwestern residential district.

The institution will be ready for occupancy, in September, 1924. It is to ensure the opening of the institution at that time, and to provide the $6,000,000 endowment fund which will forever maintain the seminary, that Bishop Gallagher has announced the coming campaign.

The finance committee of the Sacred Heart Seminary Fund, the group of prominent Catholic priests and laymen who, with Bishop Gallagher, have in their charge the administration of the fund, has sent to every Catholic of the diocese a complete statement of the disposition of the money received to date and of the reasons for a prompt payment of all unpaid pledges.

Of the $9,129,332.12 pledged in the campaign of 1920, the committee points out, $3,401,976.30, or considerably less than one-half, actually has been paid in.

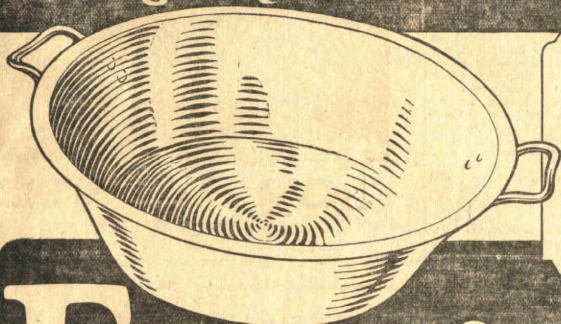

Of this amount, a large percentage of the donations were specifically designated as intended for the endowment fund of the fund, the permanent reserve which is to remain forever intact and only the interest of which is to be used for the operation and maintenance of the seminary.

Something over $2,000,000 of this specific endowment fund has been invested in United States government bonds and thus bonds will remain in the bank vaults of the diocese permanently.

The 28 acres of land which compose the site of the seminary cost more than half a million dollars. The land acquired for the present temporary seminary cost another $70,000. Rental of buildings not purchased for the temporary school, maintenance and administration of the institution and payments to other seminaries for board and tuition of students and to various educational institutions throughout the world, such as in Rome, Oxford University, in England, and others, for higher education for the priests, who will make up the faculty of the new seminary, have cost an additional $283,172.74.

The contract for the new buildings calls for an expenditure of approximately two and one-half million dollars, with a monthly payment to the contractors, on account, which at present reaches $200,000. And the work of construction, only well started now, must continue for more than two years before the new seminary is ready for occupancy.

But the case for or against tobacco cannot be conclusively proved by what happened to this or that man. The point I am trying to make is that when the pinch comes everyone has need of all the heart-power he can muster—and tobacco does weaken heart-power. There is no doubt about that. When one's heart is faltering, no doctor ever prescribes nicotine. Nicotine is a slow poison that strikes at the heart first.

Nicotine, after you have used it a while, puts you in a condition to be "bumped off" by the first thing that hits you. If you saw some men undermine a building until it was ready to topple into the street, and then saw a woman hit the building with a baby carriage and make it topple, you would not say the woman wrecked the building would you? Yet when a smoker dies of pneumonia the doctor's certificate gives pneumonia and not tobacco as the cause of death. And the tombstone man with his chisel says nothing at all.

When a shock people would get if they went through cemeteries and saw tombstones declaring the fact that this man died of typhoid made fatal by a tobacco-weakened heart and that man succumbed to nervous prostration because tobacco had shot his nerves to pieces, and another one gave up the ghost because tobacco had ruined his stomach.

But the truth will never be known about tobacco so long as the great tobacco companies are able to spend millions of dollars to build up and maintain businesses with which to poison the people for a profit.

Did you ever think what would become of the tobacco habit if there were no profit in selling tobacco? How long would it last and how rapidly would it spread? Was anyone ever born with a taste for tobacco? On the contrary, everyone is born with a taste against it—tobacco produces sickness the first few times it is used. Men are able to use tobacco only because of the remarkable power of the human body to adjust itself to an unfavorable environment. The human body prefers the good and dislikes the bad, but if it is compelled to endure the bad will make the best of it and stick to life as long as possible.

If there were no money in poisoning people with tobacco, the tobacco habit would die out with the last of its present victims. No boy could begin smoking because there would be no place where he could buy tobacco. If there were no place in which to buy tobacco, the boy would not go without food. That shows the difference between useful necessities and poisonous things that enslave only to destroy. We need food; we do not need tobacco. We use tobacco only because it is foisted upon each generation as opium was foisted upon the Chinese, and as cigarettes are being foisted upon us now.

As the tobacco interests become better organized it is increasingly difficult for each generation to escape. Even thirty years ago, a cigar store was an ugly place, littered with cuspidors, dirty and unattractive. Better brains in the tobacco business have changed this. The cigar store is attractive now, even from afar. Its windows are tastefully decorated with a primary color that appeals to the lowest order of intelligence. Inside everything is as clean and bright as if the place were a jewelry store. Every possible appeal is made to the eye. And, in addition, there are certificates with which, if one will smoke his head off, he may get a beautiful glass fruit dish for his grandmother or a collar button for himself.

Billboard advertising, newspaper advertising, magazine advertising, search for every nerve and cranny of the country for victims. In this way, millions upon millions of dollars are spent by the tobacco interests every year. It seems almost as if there is no escape for each new generation as it comes along. No tobacco addict would ever get a beautiful glass fruit dish for his grandmother or a collar button for himself.

vertising reaches him, pleads with him and urges him to be a fool—to injure his health, decrease his happiness and shorten his life that the tobacco interests may gather more millions.

If the money that the American people are wasting for tobacco were invested in homes, every man and woman could have a home free of debt, before reaching the age of fifty.

If it were invested in farms, everyone could have a farm. If it were invested in reclaiming deserts, that, with water, would be orange groves, the present century would see the end of most of the deserts.

If it were invested in stock in water-power companies honestly and wisely managed, the harnessing of power now going to waste would make heat, light and power abundant and cheap.

If it were invested in traveling the saving would be sufficient to enable everyone to see all America several times and take at least one trip around the world.

Figure it out for yourself. The ordinary smoker who uses cigars will burn up about a dollar a day which is about $1000 every three years. If smoking, after thirty years, kills him, he will have wasted $10,000. That is more than enough to buy a decent home, a good farm, or see America several times and take a whirl around the world.

And at that, the greatest loss is in health and life. The basis of all happiness is health. A sick millionaire is much worse off than a well garbage man. Sickness not only cuts off happiness but brings discomfort and pain.

Always remember that the tendency of tobacco is to destroy. Don't be fooled by newspaper stories inspired by the tobacco interests about gentlemen 104 years old who attribute their multitude of years to the use of tobacco.

When whiskey-selling was a legal method of getting a living you used to read the same kind of stories about centenarians who had drunk whiskey since they were nine years old.

There is no doubt that some men have lived to be very old, notwithstanding the use of tobacco and whiskey.

But they are entirely mistaken in believing that it was the tobacco or the whiskey that helped them to live long. Here is one proof: Look for all those who were boyhood chums of these aged survivors of tobacco and whiskey and who, like them, smoked and drank. Where are they? In graveyards. Tobacco and whiskey helped to put the finishing touches upon them.

The one in ten millions or more who survives and reaches a great age, notwithstanding the use of tobacco or whiskey, is the odd one who, because of some peculiarity in his constitution, was able to generate an antitoxin that offset the poison of nicotine or alcohol. Each of us has the ability to greater or lesser degree, to develop antitoxins to meet our needs. Smallpox kills the Indian and treats the white man comparatively gently because it is a new disease to the Indians, to meet which they have not yet had time to generate proper antitoxins. The white man on the other hand, has had time to develop antitoxins. Smallpox is no new disease to him. He has been familiar with it for centuries and, in the beginning, it hit him as hard as it now does the Indian.

Make no mistake. Tobacco is a poison that would not be urged upon you if there were not a profit for others in making a victim. Within my own circle of friends and acquaintances I have known many, or at least several, men whom it has killed.

I never met a tobacco-user who did not regret that he had formed the habit, but I never met a non-smoker who was sorry he did not smoke.

Isn't that significant? If tobacco is such a fine thing, why don't its victims rejoice? Why do not men like Woodrow Wilson hasten to acquire the tobacco habit? Think this over.

Youth is the dangerous age, as far as tobacco is concerned. If one can reach the age of 25, the tobacco trust will have difficulty in getting him.

We are in the process of driving alcoholic beverages from the country. The death rate all over the country has taken a sharp drop to the lowest point ever reached. In my opinion the day is not far distant when we shall outlaw tobacco as we have alcohol. I believe tobacco shortens more lives and kills more people than alcohol ever did, not because tobacco is more deadly, because it is more widely used than whiskey ever was.

We shall have better health, more happiness, longer life and more comforts when we cease wasting our money for tobacco and whiskey. There are now plenty of persons who will hoot at this statement, but in a few decades there will be a hundred millions or so who will hoot at the present hooters.—The Dearborn Independent.

Show Dynamic Use in Ditch Blasting

The value of dynamite as an aid in farm ditching work was brought out in Jackson and Genesee counties last week when land clearing specialists from the College swung down from the upper peninsula for a pair of demonstrations on southern Michigan farms.

At Lobdell Lake near Fenton, in Genesee county, the dynamite handlers blasted out a channel between the mainland and an old island. Nearly a thousand farmers from nearby sections witnessed the demonstration and gained information in the use and handling of explosives. An old ditch was cleaned out and dynamite on the Arnold farm in Jackson county on September 5 before a crowd of 500 interested Jackson and Washtenaw men. L. Whitney Watkins, director of the state department of agriculture "shot" the second blast in this demonstration after the special ists placed the charges. Many people have the idea that agricultural explosives are used for stump blasting, but as a matter of fact there is a great field in Southern Michigan for the use of explosives in ditch work and in cleaning up rocks, old stumps, and other obstructions in fields which are already under cultivation. The demonstrations are intended to show farmers of the sections where they are held just what can be accomplished by the use of dynamite on the farm.

N. A. Kessler of the Northeast Michigan Development Bureau, J. S. Donnelley of the DuPont Powder Co., and A. J. McAdams of the Agricultural College staff, worked with Livingston on the demonstrations.

The Fall of 1923

Autumn is surely here with its chill evenings and dusky corn rows rustled by breezes that threaten to play rough ere many weeks. Farmers about this village report a real old style crop of corn but the hard frosts of some weeks ago left the crop in bad shape for cutting, and machine work will be difficult, consequently demand for the old-fashioned boys with the sharp corn cutters will be better this fall than it has been previously in a number of moons. Already the farmer is thinking out his problems of winter storage and the fields show traces of autumn's brown. This leads us to ask are we ready? Most certainly we are not. Most of the rattle field old autumn coming so quick that he has caught them only half prepared almost unawares as it were.

A. J. Hoffman of the Citizens Bank has been awarded the contract for construction of four miles of State road between East tux and Nashville, except a half mile of contemplated paving. In all nine bidders were in on this proposition and Mr. Hoffman's bid was $51,035.65. This was approved by Barry county highway commissioners and forwarded to Commissioner Rogers who has stated that he believed the contract was in good hands. Mr.
Hoffman agrees to start work within 15 days after receiving the contract and will move 15,000 yards of dirt per month using a steam shovel and tandem wheel scrapers and will finish the job by July 1, 1924. The opinion of the road authorities is that Hoffman is not a "hot air artist" but a "go getter" and past experience has taught that a road built by him is always acceptable.

Teachers and other guests of the W. C. T. U. enjoyed an afternoon at the home of Mrs. Robins, Friday, Sept. 14. Articles were read on different phases of school and temperance work followed by a talk by Mrs. French on "The W. C. T. U. and teachers as co-workers." She spoke of the three objectives of the Union for this year, Prohibition, Purity and Peace, and showed how teachers by example and precept could educate along these lines. As a digression she said, she stressed the need of better work in writing and spelling in our schools. A fine supper was served.

John Williams recently received a letter from French Beardsley,

Beardsley stated his daughter, Delia was married August 27 to J. L.

president of the Dantzier Lumber Co. one of the largest lumber companies in the state. They are now in Canada for a wedding trip of a has been very dry so far this summer which has somewhat injured the cotton crop, while Louisiana has been rainy nearly every day but Mr. Beardsley says it is very pleas-the country. He represents the

The chief advantage of the late potato over its earlier brethren is its keeping qualities which permits its sale and use all winter and through the early summer of the following year, says the United States department of agriculture. This involves special methods. The whole question of successful late-potato marketing can be summed up under four heads, according to department workers. They are: (1) Careful planning from planting time to day of sale (2) full use of crop and market news; (3) good handling, grading, and loading; and (4) readiness to learn from the methods of other potato growing sections.

Michigan is Resourceful

Many of us are apt to get pessimistic about this time of year because winter is coming and things look blue to us as we must burn coal and wood to offset the cold winters of Michigan and we remark that it is a poor state in which to live. Well it may be but we notice a lot of folks come back and sing "No Place Like Home" and they appear mighty glad to once more camp in the Wolverine state. If you ever investigated you might be surprised at the real good things Michigan is noted for and which she leads in. For instance, Michigan has the largest book paper mill in the whole world at Kalamazoo. Michigan was explored fully ten years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth.

At Belle Isle in the Detroit river is the largest aquarium in the world. Parke-Davis & Co., are the largest manufacturing chemists in the world. Berry Varnish Co. is the largest varnish firm in the world, both right in Michigan.

Michigan has water connection with seven other states. Here is produced the world's supply of spearmint and peppermint oils.

Largest breakfast food factory in the world is at Battle Creek.

At Calumet lies the largest copper mine in the world which would supply the plaster for the whole United States for 200 years.

More certified seed potatoes are produced in this state than any area in the world.

Largest silk factory in the world is at Belding.

More furniture is manufactured at Grand Rapids than any other place in the world.

The Soo Canal has more than four times the traffic of the Suez Canal. Michigan produces more marl for cement than any other state and has glass sand enough to supply the whole world.

Fond of these things and ask yourself if Michigan hasn't got most of the world beat. We received a splendid Michigan Manual from Lansing the other day which is bound in red leather and from this book we gleaned these facts.

New War Explosive Coming to Michigan

Announcement of the new war explosive, a big allotment of which will be available this fall for agricultural blasting and high way work in Michigan, has been made here this week by L. F. Livingston, land clearing specialist of the Michigan Agricultural College extension staff who will have charge of the distribution of the explosive in the state. Sodotol, as the new material is named, is made over from leftover war salvage explosives which are being used in the state as they can be used exactly like ordinary commercial dynamite.

That Sodotol will be the cheapest agricultural explosive ever made available in the state is shown by Mr. Livingston's figures, which place the price of the material delivered in car-load lots anywhere in the state as less than eight cents a pound. This is about half the price of previous war salvage explosives, which were themselves considered cheap.

The fact that 100 number six caps will be delivered free of charge with each 100 pounds of Sodotol brings the actual price down still lower. Sodotol, it is pointed out, differs from Picric Acid, a war salvage explosive used in the state previously, in that it will "shoot" completely with a number six cap.

It is estimated that Michigan should receive and use three million pounds of the eighteen million pound supply made available by recent act of Congress, during the next two years. This cheap explosive will mean much to the state's farmers in clearing stumps and rocks from their land, and in all other agricultural blasting work. For this reason, the college authorities are urging farmers to get in on the order early, in order that the state will be sure of a big allotment. Agricultural agents, bankers, and farm organizations will cooperate with the college in the distribution of the material.

"Michigan, My Michigan"

Michigan is one of the best all round states of the Union no doubt in which to live but after all it has its drawbacks. You remember how in certain seasons the temperature has changed 30 degrees fahrenheit over night, enough to kill the stoutest we should say. Human bodies can't stand such changes with impunity. Its really too bad that such beautiful climate as Florida boasts of is tucked away in that obscure corner of the United States where there is no enterprise, where a class of people live who amount to nothing commercially, where the black man is king and bottle washer alike. It seems trying that we who furnish the commercial activities of the world, who build great cities like Chicago and New York, who make and unmake history should be obliged to spend our days in this cold climate. Why did the Pilgrim fathers choose the cold bleak coast of Cape Cod on which to start the civilization of the new world? Why did the English settlers not choose the climate suited to the needs of man's body rather than the cold northern winters and blizzards?

The ideal climate of Florida should be the heritage of a more intelligent and more enterprising race, and we make bold to remark the time is coming when community ethics will have advanced so far that whole townships and counties in this northern country will sell their lands, their residences, their cities and remove bodily with their factories and their relatives. It may be we have been soured by the coal situations the past two years, and the scarcity of fuel but we repeat the day is coming when the delightful climate of Florida will be utilized and enjoyed by a class of people who deserve it.

Commodity Campaign

The American Legion has established a home for dependent widows and orphans of deceased service men at Otter Lake, Michigan. A beautiful and commodious building, which will be one of a series of buildings, and which is designed not only to house the children but also has rooms adapted for offices, will soon be completed. Other buildings will follow in rapid succession, and the next to be erected will be a small hospital, equipped for first aid, and designed to be used as a temporary stopping place for all children entering the home, before they are assigned to regular cottages.

While the buildings are in progress of erection, the kiddies are being cared for in temporary homes, the most comfortable being in Grindstone City, where twenty-five little ones, in the care of a supervisor and two war widows, have enjoyed a summer absolutely unknown to them before. Swimming, horse riding and summer games of all sorts have provided appetites for the abundance of fresh food which has been liberally supplied by the Legion and the Auxiliary.

A few months ago sixteen of these children, who are of school age, were entered in the Grindstone City Public School, where they will remain until they are ready to be sent to the state. The expense of carrying on the work for the children is being met by quotas assigned to the various Legion Post and Auxiliary units throughout the state, and the keenest interest is being manifested by the Legionnaires and by members of the Auxiliary Units, who are assuming a fatherly and motherly attitude towards the little waifs entrusted to their care.

In addition to the money sent in to purchase supplies, an appeal is being made to manufacturers of foodstuffs throughout the state, asking them to make contributions of their commodities, for which they will receive money credit. Already these appeals are beginning to bear fruit. The first to make its appearance was a large case of pork and beans. It is expected that the manufacturers throughout the state will be making liberal donations of their manufactured articles, within the next few months, as inquiries are reaching headquarters concerning the supplies which are needed. Another interesting feature of the work is the interest taken by the ladies of various clubs and church organizations, who are busily engaged in canning fruit and putting up jellies and other goodies which the children will greatly appreciate during the winter months.

In the approaching of the long winter nights, the Legion's Auxiliary is raising a fund which will supply musical instruments, games, books, and toys to occupy the children before bedtime. This great enterprise on the part of the American Legion in Michigan has commended itself to the citizens of the entire state and news has reached headquarters that other states are now contemplating the same kind of work, and in all probability with in the next few years all of the destitute widows and orphans of deceased servicemen, as well as the children whose fathers are disabled to the extent that they are unable to support their families, will be safely housed in American Legion homes.

Need Good Seed to Boost Wheat Profit

Securing highest yielding varieties for planting in their localities, and following cultural methods which will give maximum returns, are practices which Michigan wheat growers must follow in order to increase yields per acre and lessen the cost price per bushel, especially in view of present price levels, according to Prof. F. C. Cox, head of the M. A. C. farm crops department.

"Planting good seed on a good seed bed is the surest way of guaranteeing the best possible return from wheat," Cox says. Cox, in discussing the present wheat situation, "Fortunately there is an unusually good supply of high class Red Rock and American Banner seed available in the state. The Red Rock is a bearded, red winter variety of unusually good yielding ability on fertile loams and clay loams, and is particularly known as 'good wheat lands'." This wheat is Michigan's leading variety from the standpoint of milling quality.

The American Banner is a winter hardy, beardless white wheat. It is better adapted than Red Rock to soils high in organic matter and to soils somewhat depleted in fertility. The Nigger wheat, a bearded red winter wheat, are highly esteemed by farmers and millers in many Michigan localities.

For best results, wheat should be planted as early as it is possible in any particular locality in order to avoid the Hessian fly and yet make good top growth before winter. The use of from 200 to 300 pounds of acid phosphate nearly always gives excellent returns with wheat. The treatment of seed wheat with formaldehyde to prevent smut is a practice which has come into general use among leading wheat growers. Failure to treat for smutting smut, exposes the crop to the possibility of serious loss.

M. A. C. to Open for Sixty-sixth Year

The Michigan Agricultural College will open its doors to the young men and women of the state on Wednesday, Sept. 25, for the sixty-sixth consecutive year since the state college was founded in 1867. Registration for freshmen will be held Sept. 24 and for upper classmen Sept. 25.

Advance registration figures available at the office of the college registrar this week indicate that the attendance this year will equal or exceed the best previous mark in the history of the school. More than 1,700 regular four-year students, in addition to several hundred special winter students, as in the engineering department. These two courses are counted for more than 1,000 of last year's enrollment. Home economics, forestry, veterinary medicine, and applied science courses have also had many advance registrations.

The applied science division, first established two years ago, is expected to show the largest percentage increase, while reports show that more girls than ever will elect work under the home economics branch of the institution.

A number of minor changes in the college faculty have been announced for the year, while Miss Jean Krueger, new dean of home economics, and Harrison R. Hunt, newly appointed professor of zoology, will take office with the opening of the college year.

An attractive meal, how to plan one, which will be nourishing, economical, and appetizing, using the materials grown on the home farm or ordinarily at hand in the farm kitchen, was the interesting problem on which more than 5000 club girls worked in 1922 under the direction of cooperative extension agents. In this study these young home makers prepared, according to reports to the United States department of agriculture, more than 36,000 meals.

$1,000,000 STOCK PARADE FOR FAIR

A $1,000,000 draft horse and cattle parade will be one of the features of interest to farmers at the $5,000,000 Michigan State Fair which will be held from August 31 to September 3. The finest animals that Michigan has produced will appear in this procession, which will be held in the Coliseum four nights.

There will be close to 1500 cattle and more than 500 draft horses on exhibition during the fair and probably one-fourth of these will be paraded each night for the benefit of visitors.

The object in exhibiting these blooded animals is to encourage farmers to raise better stock, which means progress in meat and dairy industries and better service from horses with resulting better farming. In the horse department, $12,576 will be offered in premiums. The personnel included: John Edmonds, committee member in charge; Howard C. Allen of Washington Court House, Ohio, Superintendent; C. F. Curtis, Iowa State College, judge of draft horses; Henry I. Bell of Bay-side, N. Y., judge of hunters and jumpers; and Walter Palmer of San Jose, Cal., judge of hackney, standard bred, saddle classed, roadsters and ponies.

Horses may compete in any class to which they are eligible. Entries close Saturday, August 25, and the parade will be released Saturday, September 8.

Plans are being made for the thorough destruction of all building and other precautions will be taken to safeguard all animals.

Scientific breeding of dairy cattle to predetermine the qualities of offspring will be one of the lessons taught in the movement for better cattle. Incidentally, the investigators have determined that nearly all the Holstein cattle in the United States are descended in a direct male line from five sires.

Cream, butter, condensed milk, pasteurization, dairy statistics, moving pictures, cow-testing, co-operative marketing, value of quality, international trade, and costs are also mentioned in the government program.

"This exhibit," said George W. Dickinson, secretary-manager of the fair, "is quite exhaustive and should prove of immense value to all those engaged in the production and sale of dairy products. It is now in nearly every detail and up to the minute in every way."

Bobby's Dream

Bobby and Frances were on their way home from Loyal Temperance Legion. As they stood ready to board the car a man and a woman, both under the influence of liquor, almost fell as they stepped down out of the car followed by their little daughter. The tiny tot, not much more than a baby, was crying from fear and neglect as she toddled along after her intoxicated parents, who paid not the slightest heed.

Frances, though only six herself, was stormy with indignation. As she stood on the platform of the car and watched the pathetic figures go on down the street, she stamped her foot and exclaimed, "Look at that! I guess they don't know about the L. T. L." "What is the L. T. L. one?" inquired the kindly conductor.

"Oh, that's where you learn it wrong to drink and smoke."

That night at the children's home there were a number of guests. Bobby was telling about Frances and the car episode.

"Well, why don't men like that father know enough to stop drinking before it makes them drunk?" Then followed a heated discussion about prohibition and law enforcement.

Bobby could not understand all that was said, but every once in a while he would hear words like these: "Well, I don't believe in the Eighteenth Amendment or the Volstead Act. This government has no right to take away a man's personal liberty. I will obey all the other laws of the United States, but I'll never keep that one."

Soon Bobby crawled into bed as usual, but he was thinking hard about the men who kept all other laws but broke the dry one because they didn't like it.

Peering out into the darkness Bob saw a big round hole in the wall—just about big enough for him to crawl through—and a dim light could be seen shining in from the other side. Quick as a wink he was out of bed making his way through that hole.

He found himself on a big wide business street. The sun shined in the sky and folks hurried in and out of the buildings. The streets were full of people.

Suddenly down the avenue came an automobile racing along at forty miles an hour. Children and dogs and grown folks scattered in front of it like chickens on a country road. The car knocked over a baby carriage, the baby rolled out—fortunately it was not killed, but was badly hurt. Bobby looked on in wonder. The motorcycle policeman on the corner paid no attention. No one seemed surprised at the speeding.

"Why didn't that policeman stop that man from driving so fast and knocking folks down?" questioned Bobby of a man close by.

"Oh, that man in the car is Ned Brown. He's all right. Keeps all the other laws, but he doesn't think any one has the right to tell him how to drive his car. Who are you with, sonny?"

"No one. I don't even know where I am. Just found myself standing here."

"Come along and take a walk with me. This is the city of Lax Enforcement. Folks must keep all the laws but one. The one law they don't believe they can break." Just then both man and boy jumped as they heard a loud report, and a bullet whizzed past their heads and broke the plate glass window of the drug store. But no one made any attempt to arrest the man across the street as he put up his gun.

"That is Jim Blank. He says no one has a right to take away his privilege of carrying a gun and shooting it if he wants to. He keeps the other laws."

"But he broke a window." "Well, that was just the result of the shooting. He couldn't help that very well."

So the two walked along till they came to a street with a row of stone houses on each side. Right in the heart of all these fire-proof buildings was a frame house. In the middle of the street some boys had a bonfire. One of them picked up a large piece of burning paper and whirled it round his head, then let go. The flaming paper landed in the hallway of the frame house. In a minute all was confusion and excitement. A shout of "Fire! Fire!"

went up. A woman with two children leaped out of a window followed by the servants. "Clang! clang." The fire engines were there in a jiffy. But it was too late. The house had been a tinder box and soon lay in ashes. It was all the firemen could do to keep the fire from spreading into the houses on either side.

"Why did the city let that wooden house be there at all?" asked Bobby of his friend.

"It was against the law," answered Bobby's escort, "but the owner said no one had any right to tell what he should build on his own ground. As he keeps all the other laws he was allowed to break that one."

"But those people were nearly burned to death, and look at all the work the firemen had. And those other houses might have been burned down, too."

"Well, the owner of the house will say that that is their lookout. He didn't start that fire. All he did was to put up his house."

In one of the lo-fiest parts of the city, where beautiful houses faced the boulevard, right there on the green lawn in front of one of those fine houses was dumped a huge pile of garbage. The odor from it was terrific and all the beauties of the neighborhood ruined.

"Don't you have garbage wagons in this city?" Bobby asked in disgust. "We certainly do. But that man in that house says no one can keep him from putting what he pleases on his lawn. The law for forcing people to have their garbage carried away is crazy," he says, and he won't obey it. But he keeps the other laws so it's all right."

All Bobby's life he had been an ardent lover of animals, had his own puppy and his beloved bulldog, King, and Nebby, his cat. So it was no wonder that, when he and his friend came upon a man beating a poor, worn-out horse till great ridges stood out on its sides, Bobby called out, "Stop that, you wicked man. Stop that!" But no one else interfered, not even the policeman standing by. This man was free from arrest as this was his own pet law to break.

Bobby had always hated dishonesty. Never had he taken so much as an apple from the grocery or from the neighbor's tree. Hearing sob he turned, and there, leaning against the doorway was a boy his own age crying as if his heart would break.

"What's the matter? Can I help you?"

"Oh, big Bill Burns stole my wheel while I was in the store."

"Did you tell the police?" "Sure but you see Bill don't do any of the other things he shouldn't so he's allowed to steal. He says findings is keepings. And he's keeping my wheel."

Bobby woke up. For a little bit he lay there thinking. Voices came up from the sitting room below. The guests were still there. Suddenly a bright idea popped into his head. Down he raced to his father's room. "Daddy, daddy, I've had the funniest dream."

All eyes were on the boy as sitting on his father's knee he told his dreamland tale. But the climax was yet to come.

"Daddy, can I break which ever one of the Ten Commandments I choose so long as I keep the other nine?"

Startled, the father remembered: "Whosoever shall keep the whole law, and yet offend in one point, he is guilty of all."

"Son, I'm afraid not. God's whole law must be obeyed or it is all broken."

"Then, daddy, can a man be a good American citizen, even if he does obey all the other laws, when he won't keep the dry one because he don't like it?"

One of the guests spoke for all as he replied, "Bobby, you have given us food for thought. The whole law of the land is mine to keep from this time forth and forever more."

Co-ops Handling One-third of Livestock Business

It might surprise many Michigan farmers to know that approximately one-third of the live stock received at the Detroit stockyards is handled on the co-operative basis by the Michigan Live Stock Exchange one of the big exchanges affiliated with the State farm bureau under the commodity control type of organization.

Such, however, is the case. The Michigan live stock exchange commission merchants, though less than a year and a half old, has grown rapidly in volume of business handled, until today it not only sells a third of the total stock, but it ranks second among all the Detroit commission firms for total volume of business handled.

Probably much of this phenomenal growth is due to the fact that experienced and reliable men have been secured as sales men and managers of this epoch-making enterprise, which has so successfully blazed a new path from the live stock producer direct to the packer and butcher.

Today the Exchange employs fourteen men. Included on its roster are such well-known names as John R. Beadle, manager and hog salesman; John Ahearn, cattle salesman; Charles Culver, sheep salesman; and George Boutell, calf salesman.

To aid these men in the successful conduct of their business, the Exchange is equipped with splendid offices in the Michigan livestock exchange building, and has ample yardage and sufficient accommodation to care for the large volume of cattle, calves, sheep and hogs which it handles.

Mr. Beadle, veteran live stock salesman and manager of the Exchange, points with pride to the growing business of the live stock co-ops and declares that it is the best possible proof that the service which is being given is satisfactory. Benefits derived through shipping, to the Exchange are of two kinds. First, the shipper is assured of uniform service and can have perfect confidence that no stock is sold until the best price is secured. Second, members of the exchange share directly in the profits. A patronage dividend amounting to $7,000 was distributed at the end of the first year's business. After this dividend was paid there was still a surplus of $5,500, which gives the Exchange a working fund and greater stability.

At present, the Michigan live stock exchange handles 80 per cent of the Michigan live stock co-op business and some business from individual farmers and old-line shippers. Of course, when the dividends are passed around, only members participate.

Even competitors cannot dispute the fact that the business of the Exchange is gaining faster than the growth in the total number of cars handled in the yards would warrant one in expecting. The co-op business has grown steady and consistent growth during the sixteen

The United States Bureau of Mines has recently invented a process for the manufacture of a good grade of anthracite coal from heretofore considered worthless lignite. Norman Sharp who drives a truck for Cleve Crater on the highway work near Addison, on the Devils Lake road, met with what might have been a serious accident Tuesday in the afternoon. He was proceeding along the road with a large truck loaded with gravel and coming to a steep hill the spur gear in the rear axle gave way. The brake refused to hold and the heavy truck backed down the hill at a terrific speed. Not being able to control it, Mr. Sharp jumped out and while one leg was somewhat hurt managed to escape serious injury. The truck continued off the embankment and overturned at the side of the road. As near as we can learn no serious damage was done to the rig. Mr. Sharp owes his escape to the fact that the cab had been previously removed for repairs, otherwise he would have been instantly killed.

At the monthly get-together meeting last Friday evening Rev. Ford was presented with a splendid all leather rocker, Jay Knowles offering the same in behalf of the church and friends. Mr. Ford very fittingly responded. There was a real good turn-out and a pleasant evening passed although much regret is expressed that the Fords are leaving us.

The gentleman who spoke here recently on the Klan did not say much about the outrages in the south except to brand them as lies. The speaker declared the Klan had nothing in common with such demonstrations, yet down in Oklahoma Ku Kluxers have confessed their part in these floggings, and some are doing time now in the penitentiary of the state. Mr. Ford, gentlemen, the Catholics ought to be censured severely for sending such reports to us from Oklahoma!

Moving Pictures Resumed at Opera House

Superintendent Young has called our attention to the resume of moving pictures at Knowles Opera house beginning next Saturday evening, October 6th, under auspices of the High School. Following is the program: "Back of the Man" Chas. Ray in a delightful story of a country boy who wins success. The title of this picture is well chosen—for back of the man is a woman who aids him to climb the ladder. And back of many successful men of today you will invariably find a woman guiding them right and helping them to bigger things in life—Five reels. Mary McAllister pictures—2 reels. Especially good for children and a delight to grown-ups. Full of human interest. Admission adults 25c; Children 15c.

Second Disastrous Fire

Another disastrous fire occurred at Hague Park, Vandercook Lake early last Sunday morning when a blaze was first noticed in the ice house and quickly spread to adjoining concessions. Several buildings were consumed and Manager O'Dell reports his loss as well up to $25,000 with no insurance. The Jackson fire department responded within ten minutes and soon had powerful streams on the fire which stopped it. State authorities are busy investigating the origin and are quite well satisfied it is of incendiary nature. Whether it was the work of some pyro-maniac or the organized effort of some faction is not possible to ascertain at present. State Fire Warden VanLoon is on the job and thinks other fires in the vicinity have been set. There is a suspicion the present fire was started by the use of oil on the ice house as traces of it have been discovered there. The township of Summit has offered a reward of $300 for evidence which will lead to the arrest and conviction of parties responsible for the blaze.

On Monday evening the members of the North Adams Y. M. C. U. and the Women's Club jointly gave a reception for Mrs. Ford. About 25 were present, refreshments were served and a splendid time reported. A short program was given. The W. C. T. U. presented Mrs. Ford with a set of silver spoons and the Women's Club with a copy of Edgar Guest's Poems.

"Dick" McLouth has Escaped

Richard McLouth well known in this vicinity, having at one time resided in North Adams, walked away from the prison farm some time last Sunday night and as far as known is still at large. His escape makes either the prison or road gang. It looks as if the much touted watchfulness of the state police on guard over the gang had "gag" at agley."

His wife lives in Jackson and has already admitted he had been gone, but where he is now is a quandary. He was sent up from Jackson August 4, last year for larceny. He will be remembered as about 35 years of age, 5 feet 9½ inches tall, weighs now 235 pounds, light sandy hair, drooping mouth and wore a blue serge suit when he left home. The usual reward of $100 is out for his capture.

Hillsdale Girl has Responsible Position

Miss Marian Johnson, 19 year old daughter of Mrs. Mary Johnson of Hillsdale who has just been made a member of the teaching force of the Conservatory of Music at Hillsdale college, is believed here to be the youngest musician in the state to receive such an honor. Miss Johnson will succeed the late Miss Luella Anderson and received her training from her. She also took instruction of Prof. Samuel Lockwood of the University of Michigan.

In spite of her youth, she has a finish and technique that promises much for her future.

Mrs. Mary Wright Johnson, mother of this young lady, is well known in our village having for a number of years resided on a farm east of town. She is a graduate of the village schools and for some years has held the responsible position of City Clerk in Hillsdale.

Our Constitution Does not Worry Governor Grosbeck

The logic facts contained in the respectful communication recently sent by the state board of agriculture to the state administrative board apparently counted for but little when the latter body met in the Governor's office this morning.

The state board of agriculture had requested the state administrative board to release funds appropriated by the legislature for agricultural extension work and to allow them to control the affairs of M. A. C. in the manner provided both in the constitution and the state statutes.

The Governor had called his board together for a special session to frame a reply to the board of agriculture but it was apparent that the presence of his board members was only to lend dignity to the occasion, for none of them ventured a word on this important issue. The Governor even silenced the clerk of the administrative board when he started to read the letter from the M. A. C. authorities.

It was evident that either the whole matter had been cut and dried and threshed out in secret session behind closed doors or else the administrative board is utterly a one-man proposition, for the six members sat solemnly and supinely while the Governor in deliberate and confident tones read into the minutes of the meeting a wordy and carefully prepared statement regarding the history of the relations between the two boards.

His excellency seemed to forget that two or three of the six members of the M. A. C. board were his own personal appointees when he charged them with inefficiency. He seemed to forget that there had been a marked change in the personnel of the board since 1921 when he went back into such ancient history in his attack on the board's administration of M. A. C. affairs. His criticism of the board at that time, whether justified or not, certainly could have no bearing on the present situation.

The bulk of the Governor's polished, though unconvincing reply was devoted to painting himself and his board members as the friends and saviors of M. A. C. Some reporters present were almost overcome with amusement when the Governor solemnly proclaimed that it was his purpose to "lift M. A. C. out of the domain of petty politics." Certainly, a move to take M. A. C. out of politics, coming from a political source, is indeed humorous. A pole cat cannot unblushingly remark about the aroma of a goat.

In concluding his reply, the Governor declared that the previous action of the state administrative board in refusing to turn over to the state board of agriculture the funds appropriated for M. A. C. extension work still stood and if the M. A. C. authorities wanted the money they could take the matter into the courts.

The difficulties between the two boards have now reached a point where each is demanding that the other give in. The Governor seems to feel that through his grasp on the purse strings of the State he can "starve out" the state board of agriculture and make them bow down and worship him, which would practically complete his control over every phase of state government.

But the state board of agriculture is firm in their stand and show no symptoms of yielding. With them it is a matter of principle. They feel that the constitution and state laws give them certain duties and responsibilities which they cannot shirk or pass on if they would.

It is an interesting and momentous struggle between the Governor, backed by his politically entrenched supporters, and the state board of agriculture, with the solid backing of the leading farmers' organizations and other friends of representative government in the state.

Good Roads Coming

"I believe in good roads, but I think it's a county matter. Neither the State nor the National Government ought to have anything to do with roads."

That statement was made in all seriousness by an otherwise well-informed and able editor of a small town paper.

In reply he was asked to answer the following questions:

If the county, and not the State, were the sole taxing power, what would become of State schools, State capitals, State developed waterways, State boards of health, State departments of agriculture and State courts?

If the county, and not the State, were the sole administrative unit, what would become of State militia, State police, State hospitalization, State charity, state insane asylums and prisons and State Government?

If there is a function for the state to perform, why should the State not concern itself with the welfare of its citizens in the transportation which is so vital to all its other interests?

What would become of traffic, without State legislation? What would become of railroads, without State regulation?

Where the State has no control and the counties build the only roads, there is no system! The only states in the Union which have an adequate, logical and serviceable system of highways, are those which build, maintain and control the main trunk-line roads by means of a state road commission or board.

What is true of the State and county, is true of the Nation and the State. Until there is a National Highway Commission, charged with the creation of a national highway system, the mileage of which will be built and maintained by the National Government, there will never be, in this country which needs it so badly, a real interstate system of roads.

The badly informed editor? Oh, he hasn't been able to answer the question yet!

Engineers on locomotives when going through a tunnel frequently encounter heat ranging as high as 136 degrees with smoke and moisture-laden atmosphere often filled with deadly carbon monoxide gas. The bureau of mines has experimented with gas masks for use of cab crews, and has perfected a small pocket respirator for quick use when in a tunnel. A more satisfactory method for combating the gas is to supply fresh air to the men from the air brake system on the train. A rubber tube fitted with a funnel which is held close to the face furnishes an adequate amount of air.

Road is Right

Every man, woman and child in the United States has a personal interest in good roads.

The farmer and the motorist have the most immediate and practical interest, but the interest of others is no less vital that it expresses an indirect relation.

The farmer wants good roads because he can make more money with good roads than with poor roads. If the farmer can make more money he spends more, which means greater prosperity for the whole Nation. And if he can do with less money, good roads enable him to sell his products for less and still make as much as at present that means lower prices for food.

Every one who lives in a rural or suburban location is interested in good roads, because they decrease the time distance which separates the rural or suburban home from the city. Every rural or suburban dweller needs to get to the city some time; the less the time distance the less its cost.

Every one who lives in a city wants at times to get into the country. The good road is the means. If there are no good roads, there is a sharp line drawn between city and country, which makes for the good of neither.

The more good roads the more travel. The more travel, the more understanding of people by their neighbors, and the less possibility of misunderstanding, strife, rivalry, or political discord.

Roads are a part of the foundation of Americanism. Let us all work to make that foundation broad and long and lasting.

"Mend the Road Before It Needs It" Slogan

A man who spent twenty-five thousand dollars for a house and contents and refused to spend a hundred dollars to stop the leak in the roof, which spoiled both, would be considered a fool. But there are many counties and many States which spend from ten to twenty-five thousand dollars a mile for a good road, and refuse the hundred dollars a year needed to keep it in perfect order.

The time to begin to repair a good road is the day it is opened for traffic. Homely philosophy says that a stitch in time saves nine, and road experience proves that a buck-rd of oil, a little sand, a few rocks, and a man with a shovel now can save the expense of a whole road gang and expensive machinery later.

The modern road consists of a foundation course of stone, a smaller, lighter course on top a wearing course of still smaller stones, a binder of oil and sand, and perhaps a top dressing of the same. As long as the structure is complete, the road will wear. But let time or a too heavy load, or frost, or some other cause, dig a hole through the wearing course into the foundation and the "bad spots" will begin to "rave". Stones will break away and fall down in the ditch, the surface will disintegrate and in a comparatively short time a large and rough hole appears.

A good road is no better than its worst mile. A mile of holes and ruts cuts down the usefulness of ten miles of good road. To repair a large hole costs much money. To inspect the road often and stop up the little hole when it starts is very inexpensive. The greatest city fire in history could have been put out by a child with a cup of water if found in time. So can the worst possible damage to roads be inexpensively prevented, if the maintenance is begun in time.

Co-op Fruit Associations are Combining Into Strong Organization

The Michigan Fruit Growers, Inc. is making wonderful progress in the organization of Michigan's co-operative fruit marketing industry. Within the past few months it has organized 75 per cent of the co-operative packing house output in the state and today controls a tonnage of more than 4,000 cars of peaches, apples, grapes and pears. It is working forward to a goal of 5,000 cars of fruit to be marketed through the farmer-owned and controlled Michigan Fruit Growers, Inc.

The Michigan Fruit Growers, Inc. is affiliated with the Michigan state farm bureau under the commodity control type of organization. Offices at Benton Harbor have been opened with Secretary F. L. Bradford in charge.

The organization of this statewide co-operative sales agency for Michigan fruit is proceeding in the right manner. The central sales or organization is being built upon local marketing associations. They are getting together for the benefits that come from an organized marketing of their products. These are eliminating murderous competition between the co-ops themselves, and protecting themselves against the raids of speculators who seek to beat down the price. The fruit growers see in the Michigan Fruit Growers an opportunity to market their fruit throughout the country in an orderly manner as the big California Exchanges, do, and profit accordingly.

The Michigan Fruit Growers will enable these same co-operatives to organize their capital and other resources for standardization of varieties, grades and packs, a powerful, far reaching sales organization which will be backed by proper advertising and other sales.

The fruit growers have marketed more than 100 cars to date and expect to be handling from 50 to 100 cars daily in a short time. Eighty per cent of all tree fruit handled is graded and packed through associations and 66 per cent of all grapes are handled through associations.

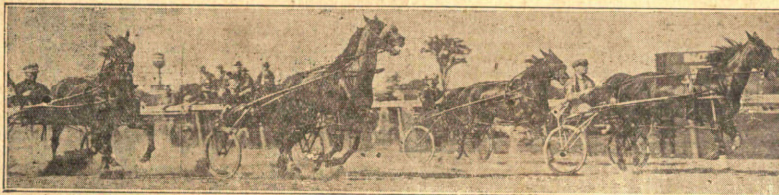

During the past few weeks nearly all of the powers of fruit marketing associations north of Grand Rapids have joined the Michigan Fruit Growers and have contracted the sale of their fruit through that organization. New members of the Fruit Growers are:

Grand Rapids Growers Association, Fremont Co-operative Produce Company, Hart Coop Marketing Association, Shelby Coop Marketing Association, Onekama Farm Bureau Local, Benzie Co-op, and Produce Association at Buelah, Benzie Co-operative Fruit Exchange at Elberta, Mason County Fruit and Produce Exchange at Ludington. The Grand Traverse Packing Company and the Tri-County Co-op Marketing Association at Brunswick are considering membership in the Fruit Growers.

Other members of the Michigan Fruit Growers, Inc. most of them south of Grand Rapids, are as follows: Kibbie Fruit Exchange, South Haven Fruit Exchange, Lawrence Co-op, Mktg. Ass'n, Bangor Fruit Exchange, Fawcett Co-op, Ass'n, Millbury Fruit Growers Ass'n, Benton Center Fruit Growers Ass'n, St Joe (Mich) Fruit Growers Ass'n, Lincoln Fruit Growers Ass'n at Stevensville, Bridge-man Fruit Growers Ass'n, Lake Shore Fruit Growers Ass'n at Sawyer, Decatur Co-op, Ass'n, Sodus Fruit Growers Ass'n, Grand River Fruit Ass'n at Spring Lake. The Pennville Fruit Exchange was affiliated with the Michigan Fruit Growers.

Speed in travel appeals to the Chinese and thousands of Chinese take joy rides simply for pleasure. It is no uncommon thing for a poor coolie to spend his last "cash" on an automobile ride that leaves him stranded many miles from home. He is glad to trudge back complacently and is satisfied in his own mind that his money has been well spent.

International Congress for a Dry World

While bootleggers and rumrunners, bibulous citizens and aliens, wet propagandists and weak-kneed politicians, are combining to make ineffective the greatest reform movement of the ages by upsetting prohibition in the United States, a world gathering over at Copenhagen, Denmark, the Seventeenth International Anti-Alcoholic Congress has been furnishing new assurances that the world is going dry, in the not distant future. The cheering notes to that effect were many, and they came from widely separated areas. Press despatches indicate that the speakers at the Congress brought much evidence that the worldwide fight for prohibition is progressing with very marked success.

As was fitting, Hon. Andrew J. Volstead (author of the law which has invoked more wet wrath than any and all other influences combined) should bring the principal message from the United States. Mr. Volstead in his address outlined the history and progress of prohibition in the United States, basing his conclusions on accurate statistics. He cited hospital and court records in New York and Chicago, proving an astounding decrease in the number of alcoholic cases. Inebriate hospitals are closing, he is reported as saying, the work of charitable institutions has diminished 74 per cent, and "20 per cent of the jails in the United States have been with out prisoners since prohibition, according to accumulated records of 63 cities." Economically prohibition has been an enormous boon to the community, according to Mr. Volstead. Labor has been shown to be more efficient, destitution in cities half diminished, and laboring men save money increasingly, as the savings bank figures prove.

Mr. Wayne B. Wheeler, counsel for the American Anti-Saloon League, challenged the attention of the Congress when he gave utterance to the highly significant statement that "the home has profited more than any other institution in American society by the passing of the saloon. The number of new homes the construction of which is being begun monthly is now approximately 9,000." The attention of the gathering was largely focused on the United States, for this country is looked upon as in the midst of a great experiment, which will bring incalculable benefit to every nation of the world. The questions included in the Congressional and supplementary documents by the floor covered every important phase of the prohibition movement as such: children, health, commerce, industry and politics. In every aspect prohibition was shown to make for humanity's uplift and the world's progress.—Christian Advocate.

Sleeping Monster Again Awakened

"Sleeping dogs alone," may be a time worn though trusty slogan but when the dogs show signs of action, then it is time to take heed. Tuberculosis warnings issued by the state department of health must seem rather out of date in view of the splendid success Michigan has realized in its campaign against the disease, but in the absence of scrupulous care, the scourge does break out from time to time.

Alpena county reports a curious case where the common safeguards were indifferently practiced, and a tuberculosis harvest is just beginning to be realized. During the past two years, two sisters who had taught a rural school were both found to be suffering from the disease. Examination of 26 pupils in the school last May revealed 11 charted as positive or suspected cases. Two of these were definitely tuberculosis while the remaining 9 ran daily fever. The enrollment on September 5 was 36 pupils. Of this number, 35 were examined by Dr. John I. Pinckney of the state health clinic and 14 were found to be positive or suspected cases. Of considerable importance is the fact that six new children all have normal temperatures at present. Will they too have to bear the burden of this inexcusable bit of carelessness? The state department of health has the matter under advisement. A full report was sent in by Dr. Pinckney and his recommendations were forwarded to the heads of the school district. These include suggestions that the school be conducted as an open air school, that there be rest periods and that the school be placed under the direct supervision of a physician.

A sad accident happened at Reading Sept. 12 in the evening at the Michigan street railroad station when Delbert Webster with his brother and another young man from Alpena were about to cross the tracks. The train from the north was coming and the glaring lights blinded them and instead of turning on the roadway they drove directly up the track toward the engine. The passenger engine striking the car in the rear, demolishing the car. Two of the boys jumped out and were uninjured but the young man in the back seat was less fortunate, he was crushed under the engine wheels, one leg and arm were mangled so badly that amputation was necessary. At the time of the accident no doctor was in Reading and Dr. Bates was summoned and cared for the injured boy. They mistook the railroad for the highway.

Jackson County Red Cross

The Jackson County Chapter, American Red Cross, has received to date $1,077.47 for the Japanese Relief fund. Let us make this week a popular subscription week. Anybody who wants to send $1.00 to the Japanese can put the dollar in the Y. M. C. A. Y. W. C. A., or any bank or newspaper office in Jackson county. It has been a bitter time for our Nipponese, and inasmuch as they helped at the San Francisco earthquake more than their quota it is fitting and right we should honor them on such an occasion when their homes and property have been destroyed and so many lives lost. Japan has always posed as a friendly nation and notwithstanding the demonstrations during our recent rulings on the Japanese situation on the Pacific coast, we hope they will continue to do so.

Hillsdale County's quota has we believe, gone over the top, but the lists are still open for contributions. We hope that every dollar that can be spared will go to the earthquake sufferers. Japan is a queer jumble of ancient heathenism and modern civilization.

Plan For Exhibit of Sunday School Work

A new educational exhibit at the Hillsdale County Fair this year will be that of the County Sunday Association. It will consist of copies of the graded lessons from the different denominational boards, Sunday school papers, magazines and books, and reading tables where visitors may examine and study the material exhibited. In addition there will be posters illustrating Sunday school work; samples of work done in the different schools of the county with the materials and work from the Daily Vacation Bible schools.

Such an exhibit is a new department for Hillsdale county and it is hoped by the Association that all Sunday school teachers and officers will avail themselves of the opportunity to examine the newest of religious books and lesson helps from the different denominational publishing houses.—Hillsdale Daily News, Sept. 19.

Pig Litters Reach Goal of Ten Weight

Four single litters of pigs, all born in Michigan only last spring have reached in six months the surprising total weight of a ton, and have thus qualified for top honors in the Michigan ton litter club, started last spring and surprised by extension men from the animal husbandry department of the M. A. C. These four are the first to reach the 2,000 pound goal set by the Club but others are expected to reach the required total before the contest closes the middle of November. Litters in the contest were farrowed last spring, and have been weighed in and checked under direction of college specialists in charge of the contest.

Three different breeds and one "crossbred" lot are represented in the four litters already checked in. Ninon of Poland China pigs in one litter weighed in at a total of 2,050 pounds. Ten Duroc Jerseys totaled 2,341 pounds; eleven Chester Whites reached 2,273; while a litter of 12 Poland China and Duroc Jerseys cross-breeds top the contest so far with a total litter weight of 2,636 lbs.

M. A. C. to Continue "Dairy-Alfalfa Work

Intensive local campaigns in the interest of better farming, known as "dairy and alfalfa" drives, will be carried out in several counties of the state during the coming winter by the extension division of the Michigan Agricultural College. Many counties have been covered by these drives during the past two years, and the results of the work in generally improved farming practices in the districts reached have been so satisfactory that the college authorities have just announced a continuation of the campaigns. During the course of one of these tours, which usually take two weeks every farmer in a county has the chance to see at least one of the demonstrations and to hear the college specialists discuss the subjects without having to go more than two or three miles. This is accomplished by having as many as 80 local or so-called "bar-nard" meetings in sections scattered all over the country.

Formation of cow testing and better sire associations and increased alfalfa acreages are direct results which have followed the intensive campaigns already held.

Miner McFadden, aged 18 years, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace, Niblack Monday on a charge of driving away the car of B. L. Lynch, of North Adams, from the fair grounds, without the authority or permission of the owner. The young man's bail was placed at $500, and his examination will be held October 29.

Fires in Jackson county still continue. Sunday forenoon the large barn of P. Teslenko on the Springfield road was burned to the ground with 100 tons of hay and grain. The building was 100 x 40 feet and practically new Jackson fire department was called but could do little good. Mr. Teslenko was in Jackson at the time and could not be reached and his wife was hysterical. If a fire bug is operating in this county as claimed, it is strange he cannot be apprehended.

On Wednesday evening last week as Mr. Sponseller was returning from the fair he met several autos near the Sam Kennedy farm and the glare of their lights so blinded him that he could not distinguish the edge of the road. Turning out too far the Ford hit a ditch and side-swiped a tree. Results were a broken windshield and top nearly torn from the car. He was showered with broken glass but unhurt beyond a few scratches. The touring car was left at Metcalf & Walters' garage for repairs.

The Somerset Centre church has taken on new life. Last Sunday there was a good attendance. Next Sunday afternoon the workers hope to have every seat filled. Music will be furnished by Somerset and Jerome singers as well as local talent. Rev. O. D. Dellinger will preach a short sermon, in which every sentence will be a sledge hammer blow at evil doing. The subject of the Open Forum will be "The Millennium". Col. Kerr has promised to open the discussion which will not be entirely about prohibition or the sages of Nana, but will be on practical Christianity. There will other speakers who will take part.

Putting it Off

The spendthrift always plans on saving some future time, when the sign is right; like other men he has a craving for stacks of roubles, gleaming bright. "Next month" he sighs "I'll draw my wages and put a portion down in brine: one must approach by easy stages a reformation high and fine. Next month I'll quit this thing of blowing the mark, the kopeck and the franc, and citizens will see me going with wads of plunder at the bank." Month after month he keeps on planning to save a sample of his pay and while he plans hard luck is canning ten thousand spendthrifts every day. They lose their jobs, succumb to sickness and then their folly they confess; their pocket-books have not the thickness required in times of daily stress. The paupers who are vainly raving in yonder poorhouse by the mere, once bravely planned to do some saving next week, next month perchance next year. Today's the time to cut out spending the hard earned seeds in foolish ways; today's the proper time for every fellow to quit the hab it of formed of yore and hand to the receiving teller some fifty cents or even more.

Good Storage Spuds Need Harvest Care

Use of more careful methods of harvesting Michigan's potato crop would result in a saving of thousands of dollars to farmers of the state, through better keeping quality of the tubers when placed in storage.

Many farmers fail to realize the need for care at digging time, with reference to keeping qualities of the crop, says H. C. Moore, extension specialist in potatoes at M. A. C. who gives the following general rules for handling the spud harvest:

"Potatoes should be dug when they are well matured, so that the skin is not easily broken in handling. Immature potatoes are easily bruised and skinned. Such stock takes on a dark color which renders it undesirable on the market. Furthermore, immature potatoes are likely to rot in storage, and the shrinkage loss is heavy.

"If possible, the digging should be done on bright, cool days and when the soil is comparatively dry. When harvested under these conditions, the potatoes will maintain a brighter color and will keep better in storage than when dug in warm, rainy weather.

"One of the main criticisms on the markets against Michigan potatoes is that many lots show too high a percentage of mechanical injuries. Growers are urged to use more care in digging. When digging with a fork or potato hook, pains should be taken not to stab the potatoes. "The use of the mechanical diggers is becoming more general throughout the state. When properly operated, these machines dig the crop with a minimum amount of injury. The shovel point should be adjusted deep enough to avoid cutting the tubers.

"After the potatoes have been dug leave them on the ground for an hour or so to dry and toughen their skins."

Rains Cause Damage to State Bean Crop

Recent heavy rains have subjected the Michigan bean crop to considerable damage in many of the bean growing districts, beans on the ground in process of harvest being dried only with difficulty and the standing crop also showing damage, according to Prof. J. F. Cox, head of the farm crops department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Bean elevators are said to be receiving beans unusually high in moisture—in some cases as high as 24 or 25 per cent. These beans must be dried down to 17 per cent in order to comply with standards of the Bean Growers' Association and the government for shipment, and the fact that there are only 17 commercial bean dryers in Michigan means that facilities will be taxed to the utmost in handling this year's crop.

"There is great danger of spoilage in holding beans high in moisture," says Prof. Cox. "Hence, growers with beans in such condition will avoid risk by selling the crop as soon as it is threshed. Only those who have threshed their beans early, before the recent rains, or who will be able to dry their crop sufficiently before threshing, will have beans in condition for holding for sale at a later date. A large crop of good beans will be produced in the state, but a considerable percentage of it will be weather damaged and will need to be dried and given extra attention in 'hand picking'."

"If the moisture content of beans is above 17 per cent, a just deduction in price is made according to the moisture present. Usually a charge of 25 cents per hundred pounds is made for drying beans which carry from 17 to 25 per cent moisture, and 50 cents per hundred pounds for those above 25 per cent. Threshed wet beans must be dried slowly in artificial dryers in order to put them in condition for storage and shipment and to retain their cooking quality.

"Every effort should be made by growers to dry beans in the field as much as possible before threshing."

Farmers Lose From 50 to 60 Millions on Oats Crop

This year's crop of oats, like this year's crop of wheat, was produced at a loss to the growers, according to figures gathered by the department of agriculture. A study of costs on 4,000 farms indicated that it requires an outlay of 53 cents to grow a bushel of oats. The average price received by the farmer for this grain, it was indicated, is 48 cents a bushel. This means a loss to the producer of 5 cents a bushel. On the basis of last year's production of oats, the growers will lose something like $50,000,000 or $60,000,000 on the crop of 1923. The average price paid to the farmer on August 1, 1923, was 37.8 cents a bushel and at no time this year up to that date has the grower received above 45.7 cents a bushel, according to the department of agriculture.

Drift From Farm to Cities Continues

In a special bulletin issued by the department of agriculture there is contained information which corroborates the statements of Senator Borah (Rep. Idaho) and other Republicans and Democrats that the migration from farms is continuing. "Evidence of the drift of farm workers to cities is on every hand," says this bulletin, quoting A. B. Genuing, economist of the department. "There are many empty farm houses and unworked farms." Agricultural conditions in the East, Mr. Genuing reports, have been depressed because of drought and early frost. Among the crops which have suffered are corn, potatoes, cabbage and buckwheat.

Hillsdale Fair a "Hummer"

Again the greatest Fair on Earth has come and gone and many of the residents of this county and adjoining precincts are certain it has just a little eclipsed all former efforts in many departments. The weather which was furnished us by the Almighty has never been more ideal the week through. It seems as if the weather had been made to order, and the smiling faces of the younger generation all bore evidence that the Fair is just as popular as it ever was for "fun."

Candidly the whole show was a big success from the ever present merry-go-round to the red balloons and the freaks of midway. Not the least of these was the wonderful five-legged cow which posed all day long as patiently as if she were in pastures. A wonderful expression of surgical art we should call her. This Jangle of the department there were a large conglomeration of events which held grandstand crowds spell-bound every afternoon and had it not been for the unfortunate accident on Thursday afternoon we could say that everything was without a drawback. Driver Teachout of Jackson, an old veteran in the business, was thrown from his sulky and suffered fractured ribs and a broken arm, but we are glad to know he is convalescing. Bronson band, one of the finest in southern Michigan furnished the melodies for Thursday.

Treasurer Williams reports the receipts on Thursday as at least $10,000 more than any previous Thursday. Vegetable exhibits, in which Hillsdale county is preexcellence were as big as usual and the fruits also made an impression. The art department shows signs of weakening but we trust good action next year will build it up. The commercial exhibits of firms in and about the county were certainly profuse.

Lewis Barber with his thoroughbred English Beagles and Eugene McBain also won premiums which we hope to announce next week. J. M. Williams' Guernseys also called forth much comment. The boys club was a winner, and some of the stock shown here is unequalled—in fact worthy of a place at the International Chicago show. The Womens Congress always a popular institution, this year made good in every particular. Such speakers as Representative Arthur Williams of Washington, D. C. and others brought a large attendance. The regular election of Fair officers resulted in a re-election of all officers but one, the president. John French was elected to this office. C. W. Terwilliger secretary and J. M. Williams treasurer.

The following officers of the Womens Congress were elected: Pres., Mrs. Henry Fink, Cambria vice pres., Mrs. C. M. Barre, Hillsdale; sec'y., Mrs. O. B. Mosher, Hillsdale. Cement is a Comer

The other day it was our good fortune to view a real honest-to-goodness cement factory from the ground up and we noted the process from start to finish but the wonder still grows when it is realized that more and more of this article is coming into every day use not only on the farm but in road work and Government contracts where great dams and spillways are being constructed, bridges built, aqueducts and reservoirs made, in fact so many different uses it is not possible to enumerate them. For the past thirty years we guess the Peninsular Portland Cement Co. has been established at Woodstock in the extreme north west corner of Lenawee county where some investigators have found the most wonderful deposit of marl, for many years this lake has been dredged giving up its valuable products, but today the further-lake is furnishing the basis for cement making. A large steam dredge operating three engines is at all times busy scooping up the marl by means of shovels holding a wagon load of the soft stuff which is dumped into a barge from thence by compressed air it is sent through a mammoth iron pipe to the factory ashore, coming up in the form of blue cream-like mud. At the rear of the plant are situated gigantic iron tanks 20 feet high and 15 feet in diameter in which the liquid is stored and thoroughly agitated by means of a churn dasher worked by powerful gears. Here a certain proportion of lime stone is mixed with it and the whole mass placed in a large roller-like cylinder revolved by machinery. Inside of this boiler or mill, as it is called, are placed hundreds of steel balls five inches or less in diameter which grind the mass to flouriness. The compound is propelled by 300-horsepower electric motors. The compound is now ready for baking or burning in the rotaries or ovens which are porous cylinders of heavy ten riveted boiler iron 100 feet in length set on concrete abutments slantwise so that the front end lies close to the floor while the rear is elevated at least 12 feet. These ovens revolve at a slow rate of speed being mounted on rollers also propelled by motors.

The creamy marl is admitted to the upper end of these ovens, and terrific heat is maintained in them by means of powdered soft coal blown in by compressed air. It is necessary to line them with fire clay, otherwise they would burn out in three hours. As the ovens revolve the marl gradually goes toward the front end continually getting hotter and hotter until it forms red hot clinkers and drops by gravity into a conveyor where it is carried outside the building to cool. After this is accomplished the clinkers are fed through a regular grinding mill which forms the cement commerce and is packed in sacks and barrels. The men who work in the packing room protect their mouths and noses with sponges but it is impossible to prevent the dust entering the lungs where it forms cement cakes, and it is claimed the average life of these men is but fifteen years. They are mostly of the adventurist class, usually foreigners, and it is probable that most of them do not wait for the cement to do its work as their big wages usually leads to a rather dissipated life.

We first visited the boiler room and were surprised to find a great battery of not less than ten large boilers over the latest improved self-stoking smoke consuming furnaces. One can hardly realize the pent-up energy and the roaring, trembling shake of the steam which drives all attempts at conversation especially when the safety valve opens and relieves the pressure. These boilers are fed automatically by conveyors with slack coal and the duties of the fireman are mostly confined to watching the steam pressure, the water, and keeping the grates in shape. A long bar passes in front of each boiler which is gyrated back and forth by heavy gears and this constant jangle shakes the grates. The boiler room is flanked by two steel stacks about one hundred feet high. At present the only engine used to drive the electric generators is a powerful steam turbine, very small and compact, but a hungry animal for steam. We were informed that when necessary power to drive this turbine or rotary. We should have stated that the whole plant is electrified and steam power is merely used to generate the current for driving motors. Reserve power consists of two 300 horse power steam engines connected to generators which produce 600 volts, but as long as the turbine works they are not used. So much for the power.

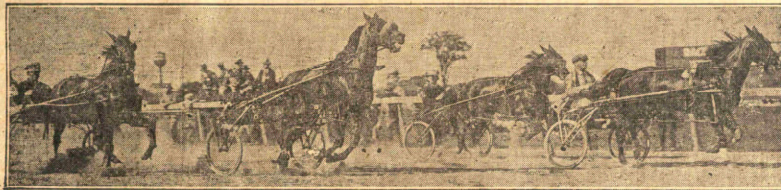

We found the official chemist on duty in the laboratory and he wisely us a little to the scientific end of the business. Each hour night and day samples of the blue mud are taken into the laboratory and analyzed chemically for proportions and binding strength. Some of the finest scales known to man are used here. They are made mostly of Holland steel and imported from Holland. When we consider it is possible to weigh a pencil mark we readily understand why America does not furnish such tools. The marl is baked into a cake in an electric furnace, it is then ground in a pebble, placed in a glass retort and given a dose of acid after which it is boiled, no vapor being allowed to escape by this means the chemist can tell the proper proportions of lime and other ingredients. Each car load of cement shipped is furnished with one of these tests and the formula guaranteed.

Another test is made by using little blocks of cement and sand containing one cubic inch. After drying and soaking in water for a certain time they are placed in a small machine which shows their tensile or breaking strength. The casual farmer who uses cement for his barnyard tank has a certain conception of the mighty machinery and investment necessary to produce it, and if he should visit the plant at Woodstock or pass by there in the night hours, he would see a sheen of electric lights, hear a sullen roar of heavy machinery and he would have to believe that the industry representing millions in money at our very door is one of the biggest in the country.

A Tale of a Troublesome Fraction

The drummer for the bottled goods concern gulped down a glass of ice water, with little appearance of relish, as he growled to his fellow passengers on the Pullman, "One-half of one per cent! Who except a frenzied fanatic would have dreamed of limiting the kick in liquor to that foolish fraction?"

The representative of the wholesale grocery sitting across the aisle reading a magazine, suddenly became interested. "Don't know much about the origin of that one-half of one per cent do you?" "Better learn the facts before you get excited over it."

"Facts!" snapped the bottled goods man. "What's that got to do with it? Everybody knows that idiotic definition originated with the drys who forced Congress at the point of a bayonet to put it into the Volstead Act."

"Nonsense, my dear fellow, every body knows nothing of the kind," retorted the man across the aisle.

"That definition has been issued by the Internal Revenue Department for over twenty years. It is merely a construction for the purpose of aiding the enforcement of the law and was fixed by the liquor dealers themselves."

"Expect me to believe that foolishness?" ejaculated the first speaker. "He's quite right," chimed in the commercial traveler for a big hosiery house, who was sitting in the next section, "I happen to know that the one-half of one per cent was fixed upon originally when near beers began to be made. Before that all beers had been classed as fermented liquors. The manufacturers of near beers began to raise the question with the Internal Revenue Department that near beers were not intoxicating liquors and should not be subject to a tax intended by Congress to apply to intoxicating liquors."

"Thank you for standing by," said the grocery man. "I was just going to remark that the Internal Revenue Commissioner, being perplexed as to what the government meant by the statute providing that all fermented liquors should be taxed, invited a group of specialists to inform him just how much alcohol a beverage must contain in order to be classed as 'fermented.' Dr. Max Henius, former head of a college for the teaching of brewing in Chicago, and honorary member of the United States Brewers Association, was chairman of the group and informed the Commissioner that if a beverage had in it one-half of one per cent of alcohol, it should be classed as fermented."

"What is more," proceeded the grocery salesman, "this one-half of one per cent was retained because it was practical and appealed to common sense. Laws are passed to protect the weak and not the strong. It would take an abnormal person to consume enough of a one-half of one per cent alcoholic beverage to become intoxicated, and therefore this per cent was adopted as a safe limitation."

The target of this fusillade of information wiped his perspiring brow, took another gulp of ice water, and tried ineffectually to close the conversation.

It is mighty interesting to know suggested the hosiery drummer, again breaking in on the conversation, "that this little fraction has proven so popular as a definition, it has been incorporated into the laws of most of the states which had prohibition before the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act came upon the scene. The real reason for Congress adopting one-half of one per cent as the standard was because the experience of the states that had tried it clearly demonstrated a higher percentage made prohibition enforcement impossible. With his self-confidence reduced to one-half of one per cent of what it had been when the conversation began, the bottled goods representative prepared to make a hasty exit from the car. As he passed through the door, he heard the strident voice of the grocery man fire this parting shot: "I am certain it will please you and your friends to learn what such a high authority as former Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court has said on this subject. Let me read it to you: 'While recognizing that there are limits beyond which Congress cannot go in treating beverages as within the power of enforcement, we think that those limits are not exceeded by the provisions of the Volstead Act wherein liquors containing one-half of one per cent of alcohol by volume and fit for use for beverage purposes are treated as within that power'. And here's another from Chief Justice Taft—"

But the critic of one-half of one per cent had vanished from view.

Eugene got Busy

Being handicapped after having lost an arm while serving at the Argonne Forrest with the 132nd Infantry did not stand in the way of the success of Eugene J. Iberg, of Highland, Ill. who before the war was a farmer having only a seventh grade education and who, since his discharge, has stepped into general management of the Highland Dairy Farms Company.

Upon his discharge the outset looked bad for Iberg who was unable to resume his pre-war occupation. But having an arm shot off at the left shoulder did not cause him to despair. He applied to the U. S. Veterans' Bureau and received a course in vocational training which he took at University of Michigan and the University of Illinois, where he was taught dairying. In connection with this course he also studied bookkeeping at a business college.

After two years and four months of training under the supervision of the Veterans' Bureau Iberg was given placement training as a bookkeeper with the afore mentioned company. In a few months time he was in charge of the other clerks in the company's employ. Later he was appointed to general manager.

Wounded Soldier Makes Good

Making a scholastic record which few have equalled, Arthur E. Johnson, 25 years old, who lives at Hinsdale, Illinois carried off the honors for 1923 at Armour Institute of Technology, Chicago, after he had entered the institution with only a seventh grade education and was forced to make up his high school credits while carrying a full schedule of courses.

Johnson, who is an overseas veteran, was wounded at the Argonne Forrest while serving with the 149 Field Artillery. Upon his discharge from the service he found that he was unable to resume his pre-war occupation as a truck mechanic, whereupon he applied to the U. S. Veterans' Bureau and was awarded vocational training. Although he was handicapped by lack of education, the bureau made arrangements for him to take a course in mechanical engineering, which after four years of faithful study, he finished with top grades.

In a few days Johnson expects to be employed by the Westinghouse Electric manufacturing company. He will work in the Erection Department of the steam division.

Legion Cooperation

One of the very pleasant features of the American Legion's work is in behalf of the kiddies of their fallen buddies has been the almost unanimous cooperation of the Legionnaires and members of the Auxiliary throughout the state.

It would seem, by the universal response that has been given to the appeal for work and for funds in launching this very worthy enterprise, that the cause was one that lies very close to the heart of all ex-service men. In a word, the boys are trying to do as nearly as possible for these unfortunate children what their comrades would have done had they survived the war.

Not to be outdone by the activities of the Legionnaires, the Ladies' Auxiliary, which is composed of wives, mothers and sisters of the Legion, have worked most devotedly in supplying creature comforts for the children.

One very noteworthy evidence of cooperation has been the fraternal spirit manifested by the men at the American Legion Tuberculosis hospital at Battle Creek. As a matter of course, the Children's Billit was under supplied with all the essentials for carrying on its work, and, on numerous occasions, it has been necessary to draw upon the supplies of coats, blankets, foodstuffs, and equipment at the hospital. Letters and telegrams reaching the Manag er, E. J. Welch, calling for supplies have never failed to receive instant attention. The boys at the hospital have even divided their canned fruits and jellies, which were contributed by the ladies of the state, with the little ones, which have been most heartily appreciated and enjoyed at the Children's Billit. After all, there is nothing that comes quite so close to the heart of humanity as helpless childhood, and the statewide interest in the American Legion Children's Billit gives assurance of an institution of unparalleled value, and a new departure in philanthropic service.

Essential to Profitable Farming

The Utility Express Truck $550 Chassis Only $100 Fits any Standard Truck Body

No business can succeed unless its product is profitably sold. Most farms have a fine production department but no sales department. They grow crops and stock bought by buyers who set the price.

One of the chief reasons for this unprofitable situation is the average farmer's poor facilities for moving his crop or stock to the place where he can sell or ship to the best advantage. Because of the time and expense of horse delivery millions of dollars worth of produce is sold annually on American farms. The saving of this waste would, in many cases, change a losing farm to a money-maker.

This low-priced, high-grade, reliable truck was designed as a money-saver and money-maker for farmers and business houses needing fast low-cost haulage of heavy or bulky goods. It fits any standard type of truck body. Ask any Chevrolet dealer for price of the style of body you require.

A number of short term prisoners who have been employed on state their freedom. The prisoners, according to the governor, like the work, like the way they have been treated—and are doing more work than free labor. Several of them have asked that they be allowed to work at regular wages and on their own terms. They have been paid at the rate of $12.5 a day. Most of them spent practically their entire pay for food and delicacies. Now they want a chance to earn a stake, at higher wages.

Fred H. Harris, city manager of Escanaba, was elected president of the League of Michigan Municipalities at the League's annual convention at Grand Rapids. Dean C. B. Celebrating the founding of the Order of Sisters of Mercy of Grand Rapids, 50 years ago, more than 300 clergymen, sisters and other church dignitaries attended a jubilee celebration at the city academy. A summarized report of crop shipments, completed by the state department of agriculture, shows that from July 1, 1922, to July 1, 1923, the state has shipped 1,567 cars of potatoes, 6,015 cars of apples, 6,020 cars of grapes and 1,560 cars of peaches were shipped by Michigan producers.

Governor Walton Wins a Bloodless Victory Over Oklahoma Legislators.

TROOPS PREVENT SESSION

Germany Surrendering in the Ruhr, Bavaria Revolts and Establishes Dictatorship—War Minister Gessler Made Dictator of Entire Country to Meet Crisis.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
 "CHOMWELL" WALTON and his troops won a bloodless victory over the legislature of Oklahoma when he wanted to assemble in special session for the purpose of investigating what they term the mistakes and illegal actions of the governor, Sixty-two members of the lower house attempted to convene in the state capitol Wednesday, and were driven out by the military. They offered no resistance, but at once prepared a petition to the Supreme court for a restraining order prohibiting Adjutant General Markham from interfering with the sessions of the legislature. They contended that they already were legally in session. Asked whether he would prevent such action by the Supreme court, Governor Walton said that would depend on the advice of his lawyers, who number fourteen. He added that there was no way by which the governor of Oklahoma could be removed except by appeal of citizens to federal courts or to congress.

On Thursday the governor extended absolute martial law over Murray county some of whose citizens had asked for protection from the Ku Klux Klan. He said martial law in the state would continue "until the klan gangs and newspapers get off my back and give me a chance to clean up the courts and the county from klan influence."

There wasn't a ghost of a show for the "rebel" legislators. They signed the call for the session and filed it with the secretary of state, and then proceeded toward the legislative chamber. But in front of the chamber a line of National Guardsmen through which no one could penetrate. Assured of a quorum, C. S. Brier, speaker of the house, directed the clerk to call the roll in the lobby. Immediately Colonel Key, in command of the troops, read Adjutant General Markham's order directing the members to disperse, and told the soldiers to start them moving and keep them moving until they were outside the capitol. The legislators later tried to meet in a hotel room for a conference and found it guarded by gunmen who, the governor admitted, were on the state pay roll and worked for him.

Campbell Russell, a former state officer, was arrested for circulating a cartoon depicting Walton as a dictator, and newspaper photographers who tried to get pictures of the scenes at the capitol also were taken into custody and worked for him.

It must not be supposed that Walton and his immediate supporters are alone in their fight against the "invisible empire" of Oklahoma. When the governor called on the people of the state to be ready to join the militia if they were needed to enforce his orders, it is said 30,000 men volunteered for service. Most of the newspapers are against him because of what they consider his unwarranted assumption of dictatorial powers. So far the national government has taken no part in the fight, merely sending the warning that federal buildings could be used only for federal business.

GERMANY surrendered again last week, and thereupon two more dictatorships sprang up. Having received the assurance of support from the premier of the Prussian state, President Ebert and Chancellor Stresemann announced that passive resistance in the Ruhr and the Rhineland was officially abandoned. First reit-ing the circumstances of the French and Belgian occupation, the proclamation of surrender continued.

The former province of the Ruhr and the Rhineland ceased and the economic life in occupied and unoccupied Germany became disorganized. If it were seriously to be feared that should the same line of action as hitherto be proceeded with, the creation of a regular currency, the maintenance of economic life, and extensive itself would be impossible for our people. In the interest of Germany's future, as in that of the Rhineland and the Ruhr, the danger must be removed. In order to preserve the life of the people and the state we are faced with the dire necessity of relinquishing the struggle.

"It depends on the powers which have invaded our territory and on their allies by adhering to the treaty of peace to Germany or to bring about by rejection of this peace all the consequences which would ensue with respect to the relations of the Rhineland. We invite the German people to stand closely together in the days of dire moral and material strife which are before them. Only thus shall be guaranteed all projects for dismemberment of the realm, and the nation recover its honor, life and liberty, which is its inalienable right."

Supplementing this, the chancellor told a gathering of newspaper men that if France refused to seize moment and made a second break off peace, he would as a last extreme break off all relations with the allies and let come what will, even though the allies march upon Berlin and occupy the whole of Germany by military force.

The first reaction to the surrender came in Bavaria, the center of monarchism. The ministerial council of that state met, listened to Premier von Knilling's explanation of his support of the dictatorship and unanimously credited him. It then named Gustave von Kahr, former Bavarian premier, as dictator and declared the German constitution set aside so far as Bavaria was concerned. Among the laws definitely announced suspended are all those guaranteeing freedom of speech, press, assembly, telephone, telegram, secrecy of mail, secrecy and sanctity of person, dwelling and property. Hatzfeldt, president of the Reichstag, Herr von Kahr is vested with powers to call troops and use troops, arrest any one he chooses, keep prisoners without trial and seize the property of any one he declares an enemy of the nation. The ministerial council also issued orders placing the railroad, the dictatorship, and declaring all officials subordinate to his will and that his orders are higher law than the laws of the national German government. It was announced that there was no appeal from his decisions.

Freemasonry at once called an extraordinary session of the cabinet in Berlin and it was decided that the national government would not recognize Bavaria. The cabinet in Berlin would oppose it with all the means in its power. President Ebert then proclaimed the existence of "extraordinary conditions" and appointed War Minister Otto Gessler military dictator, giving him practically complete executive power. A decree was issued restricting such conditions to rights of freedom of the press and the right of assembly, and authorizing domiciliary searches and seizures.

If the opportunity seems ripe, von Kahr may be expected to restore the monarchy in Bavaria with Crown Prince Rupprecht on the throne. In the meantime, the government is trying to take advantage of the mix-up but so far they have made little progress. The army is proposed to take other aid from the Russian soviet government has been proven by the Berlin authorities.

BULGARIA's communist revolution kept on "revolutionizing" last week, and at this writing the outcome of the struggle is altogether uncertain. The latest reports said King Boris and Premier Zankoff had left Sofia, where fighting was going on, and that 20,000 communists were advancing on the capital from the north. The war office announced that the decisive battle in the uprising was being fought of foreign missions. "Perhaps that masterpiece of philippics that Stevenson wrote to smash the traders of Father Dunn was inspired by his chance meeting with James Chalmers," writes Arthur Porritt, in "The Best I Remember."

All the time he was in Samoa Stevenson was at Gbordun, near Apia, and he took his view as to the proper treatment of the natives.

Now that he is dead the Samoan natives respect Stevenson's memory by a beautiful regulation. "By order of the chiefs no native must discharge a gun without earshot of Vallina," says Mr. Porritt. "Let the birds that sing around poor R. L. S.'s lonely grave might be frightened and suspend their requiem."

The Zenith of Perfection

The only furnace of its kind with full radiation and large air pan on the market has ever been made in the history of the stove industry. The joint use of bottom and top heat makes the stove air-tight, so the grate which is the only true keeping principle. It will be good for 20 years before it is to-day.

The Hot Blast Air-tight Florence will heat twice the space that can be heated by any other stove at one-half the cost. Twenty perfect four burner, that has even been made. All burners are patented and no stove manufacturer, dealer or user can copy or imitate until the expiration of patent without incurring liability or an action for damages.

If operated according to Directions

The No. 21 will heat one small room all winter with one ton of coal or less. The No. 20 will heat two or three small rooms all winter with 2 1/2 tons of coal or less.

British Pool to Replace Frost
That the fellowship in creative arts has become a permanent offering of the University of Michigan was indicated by the announcement of President Marion L. The visit of Mr. Bridges will mark the first extended visit of a British poet laureate to this country. Mr. Frost will return to Amherst College where he instructs in English.

Mrs. Carrie Bryant spent a couple of days this week with her niece, Mrs. Frank Kies in Moscow.

Hugh VanVleet and wife of Detroit visited Claude Sharp and family Monday and Tuesday.

Wm. E. Hodge of Brighton, was a guest Sunday, of his cousin, E. A. S. Allen at the Congregational parsonage.

T. L. Priestly from Redfield, South Dakota is visiting his sisters, Mrs. J. S. Blackmer and Mrs. Miller.

An auto 20 years of age recently passed through 16 different states on a trip. It is said the machine still clips off the miles quite rapidly.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Herndon of Detroit were week end guests at the F. L. Westcott home. Mrs. Herndon will be remembered as Miss June Boyd a former resident of our village.

Peter Benjamin spent Sunday in North Adams and he is employed by the Frost Gear Co. at Jackson. He says the drayman's job will have to take a back seat. He is sure he has it beat quite a lot for salary.

A birthday party was held at the home of Mrs. Alfred Haight last week Friday, 12 being present. An elegant dinner was served and a good time is reported. The November meeting will be held with Mrs. B. I. Lynch.

Henry Ford has recently purchased forty deeds of land in Monroe county for the right of way of his Detroit, Toledo & Ironville railroad which he means to relay and take out its kinks between Ohio and Detroit.

We are in receipt of the Riverdale Promoter published at Riverdale, Gratiot county, Michigan by Charles Manzer, formerly of this village. He has certainly improved its appearance wonderfully since we last saw it. Sixteen pages is the make-up of this paper.

Rev. Russell H. Bready formerly of Hillsdale but lately of Pontiac Methodist church has broken the record as a Methodist and has been city commissioner of Pontiac for some time. On account of his appointment elsewhere he will have to give up the job.

Owing to the criminal don-care attitude of the shipping clerks of a paper firm in Detroit, paper which we ordered last week did not arrive until Friday and the Advocate is delayed one day in consequence. The editor is right mad, the compositor is sullen, the typewriter squeaks, the office cat has been kicked, the engine is balky and the whole planetary system of this paper is on the bum this week.

David Stott, wife and son from Rollin, Missouri are visiting the former's brother, Wyman Stott, and wife, on their way to Northern Michigan. From there they will go to New Mexico and Springfield, Oregon. They are making the trip by automobile. Mr. Stott has not seen his brother for 35 years, and for 30 years he did not know whether he was living or not.

It occurs to us that emery wheels are rather dangerous tools to work with or around. William Beckwith of Algonac was recently sharpening some corn shredder knives on an emery wheel when it burst and one piece struck Mr. Beckwith in the head knocking him unconscious. He was taken to Hillsdale hospital but never recovered.

It might interest tourists and others who have to go east toward Detroit to know that the old territorial road is closed to traffic from Somerset to Clinton and it is impossible for autos to get through. The state of Michigan has decided to make the best road possible out of this stretch of pike, and it is estimated it will require two years to complete the job.

Thomas Meeks and wife of Saginaw and Mr. and Hayden of the same place have been visiting friends and relatives around here for some little time. Mr. Hayden who is now employed by a Saginaw printing firm, had the misfortune to break his arm and cannot drive his car back to Saginaw until the arm is sufficiently recovered. Mr. and Mrs. Meeks also visited Merwin Morton and family at Somerset Centre and friends at Albion.

World's Temperance Sunday

The North Adams W. C. T. U. wishes to announce that the world's temperance Sunday occurs Oct. 28 and at that time the three churches of North Adams will unite in a temperance service with a suitable program for the occasion. It is with a pardonable degree of pride the workers and others interested point to the accomplishments of the past ten years and society has advanced from a condition of maudlin intemperance to a degree of sobriety. Big deeds of diplomacy and a thorough overhauling of the official personnel of the cities throughout the country has been the result, and in this the W. C. T. U. has taken no small part. A sarcastic incident is the recent disturbances in quaint old Philadelphia (the city of brotherly love) where the saloon forces are making their last stand to uphold the rotten tenets of whiskeydom, defying both Governor Pinchot and the civil authorities. The day is at hand when they must surrender, and the masses don't call it giving up personal liberty either, as some wets would like to have us believe. It is hardly creditable that any city in this country would dare to take such a stand, much less the staid old Quaker city.

The Reception

On Friday evening last week the Methodist church assisted by the other denominations in our village gave a reception for the new minister, Rev. W. W. Gray and his wife. After the large crowd had congregated in the auditorium of the church, a program in charge of W. S. Sayles was opened by a piano solo by Mrs. Loie Livermore who displayed a pleasing technique. Invocation Rev. O. D. Dellinger of Jonesville. Mr. Sayles briefly outlined the object of the gathering and called upon R. C. Young, superintendent of the high school who echoed the sentiments of the district in praising the class of students now in training and Mr. Young seemed extremely well satisfied with our community in general. He spoke highly of the personnel in the faculty and student body, emphasizing the co-operation of school and church.

The church welcomed Rev. Gray and wife in the speech of George Rock and Mr. Rock certainly made them feel at home; his remarks were very well delivered. In behalf of the Sunday school Montie Shults, superintendent, spoke briefly, joining in the era of good fellowship extended.

The W. C. T. U. extended its best wishes and Mrs. Edna Robbins, the president, spoke words of cheer. The Ladies Aid was represented by Mrs. Lizzie Holcomb and they too join in wishing the pastor and his family the best of success for the year.

The Hoxie division of the Ladies Aid extended their compliments to the pastor and hoped that work for the Master would be mutual. Mrs. Mayme Pendell spoke for them.

The Epworth League made it plain that it was in this department would be carried to the goal and co-operation between the pastor and the young people of the church is the watchword. Loretta Wertz as president, paid the League's respects to Rev. and Mrs. Gray.

The choir hoped that relations for the new pastorate would be the best. Mrs. Laura Meeks represented the music.

The unity of purpose which has in years past been wanting, seemed to have returned as both other denominations in our village were very well represented. Rev. Reiser of the Baptist church laid down some cold facts regarding the trend of the times and stated that while he had never been very heavily interested in receptions, yet he felt it a paramount duty to attend and he had known Rev. Gray and wife only for a short time but he believed the relations for the work of God would be in the greatest harmony.

The Congregational church was represented by Rev. E. A. S. Allen who said he had known Rev. Gray previously and he was sure there would be a concerted effort on the part of all denominations for the uplift of the cross in our village.

A recitation was given by little Max Helmick and also one by Maxine Kime, both being highly appreciated by the hearers and Maxine was encored to which she kindly responded by another short recitation.

Interspersed through the program was congregational singing Mrs. H. G. Wells as accompanist. After the program refreshments of hot coffee and wafers were served in the basement and all returned home feeling an era of broadmindedness and success was ahead of church work in North Adams.

See a Real Historical Picture "The Crisis"

The High School is putting on a real good picture show at the opera house this evening, Oct. 13th. It is "The Crisis" by Winston Churchill and can not fail to please the most fastidious. Those who have seen it pronounce it one of par excellence. Remember that in patronizing this show you are also doing a favor to the school which will help to pay for the machine, which they surely need.

Scenes of "The Crisis" are laid in the days of the Civil War, featuring Abraham Lincoln in his great deeds of mercy.

New Epworth League Officers

The cabinet and Epworth League met last Wednesday evening and decided upon an entirely new line of work for the ensuing year. The following officers were elected: Pres., James Meeks; sec'y, Paul Wells; 2nd vice, Ethel Bohn; 3rd vice, Edith Bohn; 4th vice, Alta Rock; treas., Cora Lyon. Quite a large number were out and a good deal of interest is manifested. It is not right and is to be deplored that with so many young people in the vicinity of North Adams some kind of work is not inaugurated which will interest them all in building up the church and society in general. The new personnel of officials hope to be able to bring about these things before the winter is out. A new Bible study class is among the talk-of matters.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

Can This Be True?

Rev. M. L. Fox, in his Labor Day sermon, said some plain things about our schools and our teachers.

"Here are the figures showing the religious attitude of teachers which I have compiled after 25 years of experience," he said. "Fifty per cent of teachers are absolutely indifferent to the church and its work. Twenty-five per cent are merely passively religious. Eighteen per cent attend church infrequently. Seven per cent are active in the Christian work of the church."

These teachers are a product. They are the fruit of a system generally sponsored. They merely reflect the training they have had. The training force is responsible, and gets all the authority from a statute beginning, "We, the people of the State of Michigan, enact."

"It is time to begin to insist that head-training is not the sole nor the principal requirement for a teacher. There is no other person who has such influence on boys and girls, young men and maidens as a respected and admired teacher. It is not within the power of the teacher to urge pupils to attend the church, and to set the example by attending himself."

"It is almost inconceivable that when these young people enter the schools from 75 to 90 per cent of them are religiously indifferent. The conclusion is that while trained in mind they were not only not trained in heart, but lost a large measure of the heart training they brought to the school with them. If our educational system is doing this for us, something about it is terribly wrong."

"I do not advocate putting religion in our schools," he said. "Given a teacher with proper ideals exemplified in his living, however, other things being equal, our educational product will be safe."—M. E. Christian Advocate.

In some of our western states, the legislatures are taking up in good earnest the problem of religion in the home as one of the most effective aids in the business of state government. South Dakota has recently given official expression to sentiments in this connection which other states would do well to emulate. Recognizing the fact that although one cannot make a people religious by legal statute, the South Dakota legislature, after considering the situation fully, adopted the following resolutions:

"That the people of South Dakota be enjoined to at once address themselves to renewed effort to restore the balance between the spiritual and the material, that our children be reared up in the precepts of fundamental righteousness."

"That the churches and Sabbath schools be constrained to intensify their work, and to extend to every child within their respective spheres of influence."

"That parents be adjured to exert every effort to restore the old-time influence of the home, in molding the lives of their children, for the development of conscience and morality; that the Family Altar be restored, and that in self-sacrificing love the little ones be trained in the simple virtues of truthfulness, honesty and respect for the rights of others."

"That the schools promptly reform their methods so that the rudimentary studies as well as the sciences be taught only as subordinate to righteousness. That the emphasis be placed upon morality good conscience, respect for parents, reverence for age and experience, and that all learning is but the handmaiden of eternal goodness."

"That it is the judgment of the legislature of South Dakota that only upon the lines herein suggested can the true balance be restored and the crime wave checked and civilization preserved."

We heartily commend these timely suggestions to the consideration of other legislatures. If such an expression, proceeding from a sincere desire for the best welfare of the people, be welcom ed in South Dakota, surely it should be equally acceptable in other states.

Meanwhile we heartily congratulate our South Dakota friends upon the moral courage and fidelity of their statesmen, who have proved to the world that they are mindful of the highest interests of their people.—Christian Herald.

We are happy to state that the Belle Isle bridge in Detroit which the city has been engaged in building for the past five years, is to be completed the 15th of this month.

With the advent of this magnificent piece of engineering work it is figured the Belle Isle steamers will not be profitable to run next season so these pleasure boats we understand will be discontinued. This will prove a big disappointment to thousands who like to come to the city and to ride on the river. The entrance to this bridge is so far from the business center so to be almost isolated and it will be an injury to the city in every way to quit these boats.

Cost of the bridge is around the $3,000,000 mark and its companion piece, the Scott Memorial in the river at the head of the island is not progressing very rapidly. This memorial is to be erected from funds bequeathed by a rich saloonist who died some years ago. It should not be built. This enormous sum of money should be used to care for widows and orphans of the "booze" trade in Detroit. They might as well erect a great marble portal supporting a statue of Bacchus with a bottle of Walkerville whiskey, welcoming the sojourner to the city as to erect the Scott memorial.

Applies of Hesperides!

Thir other day we got into the apple orchard of John Stone near Hillsdale, not with malice aforethought, but purely by accident, and it certainly was a sight worth driving over to see. There are probably 10 acres in this plot covered with both apple and pear trees and almost all varieties known to trade are found here, and such sights we never before witnessed. Almost every tree hangs to the ground and many are broken down under the strain of bearing so much fruit, which condition is brought about by spraying on one twig no larger than your finger we counted 30 perfect apples and no more could find a place on the branch. Mr. Stone estimates this year's crop, at 20,000 bushels, and he'll probably have enough for his own use too! It is practically a 95 per cent yield. Mr. Stone employs 20 persons picking and grading the fruit. At one spot in the orchard the crates of picked fruit occupy alone about one-quarter of an acre. We are of the opinion that no other part of the state can furnish such an exhibit, although many growers have practiced spraying a long time. Mr. Stone is an old war horse in the business and if he can raise the incompable Michigan apple no one else need try.

To John Stone and W. S. Pullen of Hillsdale we shall assign the honor of accelerating the apple crop of the hills of Hillsdale county which 25 years ago had fallen almost to zero through neglect. These gentlemen have demonstrated fully that southern Michigan is the natural habitat of the rich juicy apple so much demanded by England and the Continent.

Chas. Bradley and wife visited at Fred Baker's Sunday.

Watch out for the first snow of the season. It'll be along directly.

Howard Welch of Ypsilanti was a guest on Saturday and Sunday of Miss Mavis Jones.

Ed Buck and wife and Herman Michelson and wife of Hillsdale were in North Adams Sunday.

No more the humble bumper will froth to the rim, "them days is gone forever" except in Philadelphia.

Mrs. R. R. Stranger has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Miles Bleech, and family in Jackson.

Plan to eat your supper at the Black Cat Inn at the M. E. church, October 26. Hallowe'en attractions.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Finton and son, Lawrence of Battle Creek were callers at Fred Baker's Sunday.

The Womens club banquet will be held in the parlors of the M. E. church on Monday evening, Oct. 15th at 6:30 sharp.

George Fullerton and wife expect soon to leave North Adams for the winter and will go to Pontiac to reside for an indefinite time with their daughter, Mrs. A. L. Bell.

Mrs. Perry Holkins was in Grand Rapids this week to attend the Grand Rapids Fair. D. E. S. Mrs. Holkins as M. of Alpha Chapter, No. 258 was the official representative.

Mr. and Mrs. L. L. North and children, Mar shall and Jeanette spent Thursday and Friday with Mr. North's sister, Mrs. J. Jones. The family are moving from Ft. Wayne, Ind. to Madison, Wis.

Note in another column the advertisement of Flint & Stewart who are operating the cider mill in this village at the old Creamery building back of the depot. It is not necessary for you to go out of town to get your apples pressed.

Mr. and Mrs. Orrie Mack and family of Hillsdale and Miss Lena Bates of Toledo were callers at the Fred Baker home Sunday and visited with the family. They reported the trees laden with splendid fruit of every variety.

Harold Young and wife were in Jackson Friday. Lucius Corbett accompanied them on his way to Lansing where he will remain part of the coming winter. He also expects to visit in Cleveland and later to visit his brother, A. P. Corbett.

Elmer Helmick who met with an injury on August 29th last, was fortunate in having an insurance in the Woodman's Accident of Lincoln Nebraska and he drew $22,700 from them on account of being incapacitated for work. His case was claim No. 137694.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Cole went to Detroit last week to reside indefinitely with their daughter, Mrs. H. Bernhard. The poor health of Mr. and Mrs. Cole made this arrangement seem best for the coming winter at least. They have resided here many years and their departure will be regretted by all.

The S. E. class of the Congregational Sunday school was pleasantly entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Stranger Tuesday evening. A program was given and refreshments served. This was the annual meeting and the following officers were elected. Pres., L. W. Hersh; vice pres., Mrs. Myrtle Shepard; secretary, Mrs. Bertha Stranger.

Samuel Clay for many years a resident of Hillsdale, a cabinet maker died last week at the Soldiers Home at Grand Rapids of old age. He was 94 years of age and had the unique distinction of having fashioned a casket for his own remains when the trumounded soldier, however, a son of the old man passed away and he was interred in the casket. Clay was a 48er and like thousands of them returned without the wampum.

Horton and Hurt Got Their's

Chauncey Horton and Bertie Burt, two misguided philanthropic citizens of this county were on Monday afternoon gently disposed of and remanded to the mercy of the keepers at Jonia. Judge Chester finding it necessary to give both of these men one year in the state's reformatory. Judge Chester in his remarks stated he had found that the simple matter of fines did not seem to furnish the tonic necessary to alleviate sufferers from bootlegging and kindred diseases. Prison sentences only he said did the business and so he also tacked on costs of about $100 each which these gentlemen will be expected to pay. Maybe we are wrong; maybe we are right; but the costs or serve the full twelve calendar months—anyhow we don't care which—so long as it's fixed.

A. Talbot who was up for selling doctored meat, for the first time was fined $100 and $15 costs. Thus doth dishonesty go before a fall. Leslie Shaw pled guilty to carrying concealed weapons and was fined $100 and $15 costs, not like a Chinaman on his face, but he paid $50 and promised to not do so again.

Again, "Bill" Boyd comes before the bar of justice but is not much doing. Bill's attorneys generally succeed in establishing something.

Michigan keeps on taking away the licenses of auto drivers and late papers give the list as follows: Chas. Ancient Copper Totem For University

The University of Michigan has come into possession of a specimen of float copper which bears a distinct resemblance to the head of an Indian chieftain. The specimen was struck by a plow in the field at Houghton. The face was brought out by photographs of the copper taken by the mineralogy department. The slab is 42 x 32 inches and weighs about 480 pounds. Its upper surface is striated by glacial action and portions of the edge have been rounded off by artificial means.

Dr. E. H. Kraus professor of minerals has expressed the belief that the copper had broken away from the rock in which it is found, thus becoming float copper, and that it has been subsequently glaciated. Dean Kraus suggested that the copper might later have been found by an Indian who, recognizing some facial features emphasized them by hammering, and set it up as a totem.

The Dazzling Headlight Nuisance

Our motor laws need a little tinkering at present and we hope some gentleman in the legislative halls at Lansing will take it upon himself to see what can be done. Of course we know there are so many rules and regulations now that it really makes a man's head swim to read them to say nothing of trying to obey them.

Have you ever met a machine coming toward you with the brightest of the bright lights, including a spot vray up on the side of the windshield which struck you squarely in the eyes? More than likely you have and more than likely you have condemned the driver behind it to the warm regions because he did not cut out the glare. As a matter of fact most of the night accidents we have learned of recently were caused by just such glaring lights and how to get next to the nuisance and remedy it is another question. Not all cars that run the roads now have dimmers, but there is no earthly reason why a man cannot shut off his spot light if he has one and this should be required by law and enforced to the letter. In many sections of this country the road is narrow and built on high embankments and to veer a couple of feet too far either way means a serious mishap and perhaps a spill, yet autos driven by speed maniacs at night after night traverse these main roads at about 35 miles per hour speed. Our legislators will do well in making a law iron bound for these cases. We know many motorists who make a practice of driving at night solely by the spot because it makes a long bright ray ahead and does not pull so heavily on the juice of the battery, but such as these should be compelled to shut off the villainous spot and switch on the headlights, or better still, side lights. It is just as foolish for a man to drive with ever a lamp illuminating making his head end look like an electric carnival, as it is to drive with no light. He who would light the whole country is usually some spread eagle with considerable tin to spend for batteries, and he should be haled into court every time he does it. Probably we had said enough before but we like to add just this little jot and tittle.

Womans Club Banquet

A pleasant social event of the week was the annual Womans Club banquet held in the parlors of the M. E. church on Monday evening at 6:30. About 60 people were seated at the tables which were prettily decorated with hollyhocks and myrtle, and the rooms gay with clusters of bright hued autumn leaves. A fine 3-course banquet was served by the Ladies Aid Society of the church, after which the following program was very well given:

High School Movies

Next Saturday evening, October 20th, will occur a good program of pictures under the auspices of the High school. "The Little Pirate" featuring Baby Mary Osborne is the main attraction. It is all about the loving parents of a child who have laid away certain securities to be used for the little girl's education; they mysteriously disappear, the child gets lost and in play emulates the character of "Treasure Island" Digging in the sand they unearth what proves to be the real article wanted that was lost. Fine picture—good business.
One real of the Japanese earth quake advertising is not necessary for this calamity—we all know what it means to the poor Japs. It is certainly interesting, then too, we want to know how the people of Japan do and how they with our help will be able to recoup their losses. Come out and help the high school.

Potatoes Need Good Storage Conditions

The great annual losses in Michigan's potato crop could be prevented if proper storage facilities were provided and proper methods of handling were employed, is the opinion of H. C. Moore, extension specialist at the Michigan Agricultural College.

Growers, warehouse men and others must give the questions of harvesting and storage more consideration before best results can be obtained. The following are among the pointers which Moore gives on storing tubers. Detailed information can be had from the crops department, Michigan Agricultural College, East Lansing.

"Potatoes should be stored in a dark, frost-proof cellar that is well ventilated and where a uniform temperature of 34 to 40 degrees F. can be maintained. Before being placed in storage, potatoes should be carefully graded, and all cut, fork punctured or ill-shaped stock should be discarded.

"Potatoes that have been exposed to frost should not be placed in permanent storage, since they are likely to rot during the storage period. Every year considerable loss is also suffered by growers who place their potatoes in storage early in the fall while the weather is warm. Much of the early stock is immature, and when placed in large piles in poorly ventilated houses it is very likely to heat and spoil.

"During mild weather in the fall the windows and ventilators of the storage cellar should be left open nights so that the temperature can be lowered quickly.

Do not place potatoes in large piles without providing adequate ventilation for the pile. Potatoes must have free access to air or they will develop black heart, button rot and other types of breakdown, and they will be spoiled for eating and seed purposes.

"When filling large bins with potatoes, false partitions or ventilating frames that reach from the floor to the top of the bin should be placed at intervals of from six to eight feet."

Farmers Tell Next Congress Their Program

Prominent officials of the Michigan State Farm Bureau, the Michigan State Grange and the State Association of Farmers met at Lansing, October 9, to discuss legislation to come before Congress in December, took the following actions:

Re-affirmed previous endorsement of Government acceptance of Henry Ford's offer to complete and operate the U. S. nitrates plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala., for the production of power and cheaper fertilizer. Resolutions to that effect were presented to Michigan members in Congress, and telegrams of support were sent to Mr. Ford.

The farm organization officials unanimously opposed Senator Smoot's proposed consumption tax, which in reality is a Sales Tax under another name. Farmers insist that any sales tax would be pyramided by the various middlemen and ultimately paid by the consumer.

The farm organization leaders favor the census of 1890 instead of the census of 1910 as a basis for the three per cent immigration law. Such a change would increase the number of desirable immigrants from northern Europe and decrease the number of less desirable people admitted from southern Europe.

Price fixing of farm products was declared to be a dangerous policy and was condemned.

Ogemaw Farmers Dine on Scrub Bull Diet

The last scrub bull owned by members of the Ogemaw county cow testing association has met a glorious fate. He was barbecued early this month and provided best for a mammoth feast held on the farm of Enos Rosebrough, near West Branch.

More than 500 people including members, relatives, and neighbors of members of the cow testing association, gathered with their families to celebrate the passing of the last poor sire from the herds of the association. About 300 pounds of meat, 114 loaves of bread, and great quantities of trimmings went into the feast, the business men of West Branch cooperating in furnish the supplies.

Determined to rid the herds of their members of the last remaining symbol of unprofitable breeding members of the association clubbed together, bought the scrub, and invited in the countryside to attend to the last rites. So successful was the meeting in stirring up interest in better dairy practices that other counties of the state are already planning for similar barbecues, which serve the double purpose of a big community gathering and a definite stroke for better dairy cattle in the sections interested.

The Ogemaw cow testing association was reorganized for its second year's work following the barbecue. H. E. Dennison, extension specialist with the Michigan Agricultural College dairy division, led discussion on solution of dairy problems at the meeting.

Student Speeders Fine Exceeds Value of Car

Being fined for speeding is irritating at any time, but when the fine exceeds the cost of the car the situation becomes tragic. So think three University of Michigan students who were recently fined $18.45 for going too fast.

The students had each subscribed six dollars toward the purchase of a Ford of antique origin. On the maiden trip, planned as a speed test, the machine was spotted by an officer, and the three occupants were eventually brought up before Judge John D. Thomas. When the fine of $18.45 was demanded the driver offered the car and 45 cents in change. The judge took one look at the machine and demanded cash.

The owners point with pride to the speed of 33 miles an hour, with which they were charged before the court.

Co-eds Witness Japanese Quake

Witnessing of the Japanese earthquake from the deck of a steamer in Yokohama harbor was the experience of two University of Michigan co-eds who arrived in Ann Arbor last week. They are Miss Maria Lanzer, a graduate student, and Miss Susan Chen, a sophomore. Both are studying under the Barbour scholarships for women residing in the Orient.

Speaking of their experiences, Miss Chen said: At noon on September 1, we were all standing on the deck waiting for the "Empress of Australia" to leave the dock, when suddenly the bow of the ship seemed to jump, and we found ourselves flat on the deck. Warehouses tumbled in ruins, the piers had completely disappeared and the people, hopelessly mixed up with the cars, "rickshaws" and merchandise struggled frantically in the water.

The Empress of Australia was turned into a relief ship, remaining in the harbor for two weeks, until the 3,000 refugees who had been dragged aboard by the crew could be removed, according to the students. After two weeks of such experiences as were theirs, the young women requested rooms in the quietest dormitory on the Michigan campus.

State Editors Will Meet in Convention
October 18-20

Prominent journalists of the United States will be the guests of Michigan newspaper men here October 18, 19 and 20 when the University Press club of Michigan meets in its fifth annual convention.

Among the men whose names appear on the program are James Wright Brown, of New York, editor of "Editor and Publisher," and Frederick Roy Martin, manager of the Associated Press. Word has been received from David Lloyd George and Sir Frederick Jones, general manager of Reuters' News Agency of London both of whom are in America at present, will not be able to attend.

More than 200 editors and newspaper workers of the state will attend the convention. On Friday evening the convention will be the guest of the University Musical society at the Galli Carli concert, and on Saturday afternoon of the Athletic Association at the Ohio State-Michigan football game.

flies' late arrival this summer cannot fail to emphasize the better results so easily within reach by complete elimination of the pest. "Do so and cut typhoid to a minimum," declares Dr. R. M. Olin, state health commissioner. "By the same token keep your body clean, more especially your hands, and battle the typhoid germ through sanitation. And clean up that privy! Disinfect your cess pool!"

Most of Michigan's typhoid fever exists in the rural districts. This is largely due to the insanitary conditions attending the open privy and cess pool. Flies have easy access to these and spread disease by carrying the germs on their feet. Comparatively little typhoid is to be found in the cities and that which is reported there comes largely from the suburbs and outlying districts. Clean up, Mr. Farmer, clean up!

Hillsdale College Has A Theatre

Shades of Paris—What next! Staid old Hillsdale College, home of the pious on Pious Knob now has a real honest-to-god playhouse, a theatre—call it what you will. Just how this device of the Devil got into the ancient seat of learning tradition does not say, but certain it is hereafter the budding Gammus and Alphus will be allowed to perform their various acts, suit their various tastes.

The whole bunch are now puzzling their heads trying to discover some origin al unheard-of cognomen by which this playhouse in the garret shall be known, for such it is. Located in what was once the chapel of the Central building, third floor, this will undoubtedly prove of great interest to the student body. We are amused to note the circumstance inasmuch as Hillsdale College has always been what you would term a strict denominational school of the Free will Baptist variety. But of course we must make allowances for the trend of the times. There never was a time in the history of the world when all kinds of dramatic expression on the public stage were in demand or more popular. There is no reason why the student of such an institution should not be allowed the privileges which go to those of the younger generation attending other non-religious colleges. While it is an undeniable fact that two-thirds of the collegians attend shows and are bound to seek such amusement in questionable places, at times, yet the wisdom of such an arrangement is doubtful. There is nothing in pure dramatic art which is degrading—beyond like the card game it might bring evil associations—and such associations must be kept as far from the young in training as possible.

Whole cities sometimes go theatre mad, and this form of madness leads to disastrous crime and sin. Female virtues prostrated upon the stage, all manner of evil sometimes follows in the wake of the theatre, yet there is nothing wrong with the foundations of art, as said before. Question before the court—can the evil influence be overcome by familyizing the playhouse? The whole imbroglio puts us in mind of an ancient appearing in one of our leading magazines not long ago purporting to have been written by a person of high morals—deploring the difference in the social life of College Students of 40 years ago and of today. She (the writer) visited a famous girls' seminary somewhere in the East, and the modes of dress, the easy virtue of the young women in attendance, and the bawdy outward appearance of it all led this writer to classify the college life of today as little better than scandalous, yet she closed with the laconic statement:

"What can't be cured must be endured". And there you are!

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Bible From a Literary Standpoint

A great deal is being said in this progressive twentieth century about modernizing the Bible and bringing it up to date. We must infer that those who are dissatisfied with the King James version, have not been able to comprehend the height and depth of the great Book of Books from a literary viewpoint alone. In fact very few casual readers of the Bible realize that it is the basic foundation of all literature. It contains the history and the literature of a great people to whom we are indebted for a large part of the elements fundamental to our own civilization.

The foundation of the English law goes back to the laws given by Moses to the Jewish nation. If Blackstone found the foundation of law in Bible teaching, it seems safe to teach the Bible to the future citizenship of our nation. The earnest student will find that the Bible not only furnishes a foundation for history and law, but that one whole book and parts of other books contain poems of various kinds.

The Psalms include long and short lyric poems and there are a number of sonnet-like poems at the beginning of the Book of Proverbs.

One of the world's finest dramas is the Book of Job, in which the patriarch and his aged friends formally discuss the mysteries of life and where in the culmination of the drama God himself speaks out of the thunder storm, pointing out what all the rest had overlooked, that the mystery of the suffering of life is not greater than the mystery of the splendors of the universe.

Can more beautiful or sweeter stories be found in any modern literature than that of the girl Esther, and the story of the friendship between Ruth and Naomi?

Let us consider for a moment the testimony of philosophers, writers and statesmen. H. C. Wells, the great English writer, when asked recently to give his opinion as to the best ten books, which had been produced in all time, stated that the Bible was not a book, but a library, and gave as his first selection of the best book, The Book of Isaiah, and his second, The Gospel of St. Mark.

Bacon said, "There never was found in any age of the world, either religion or law that did so highly exalt the public good as the Bible."

"The general diffusion of the Bible," says Chancellor Kent, "is the most effectual way to civilize and to humanize mankind; to purify and exalt the general system of public morals; to give efficacy to the just precepts of municipal and international law; to enforce the observance of prudence, temperance, justice, and fortitude and to improve all the relations of social and domestic life."

"All of the distinctive features and superiority of our republican institutions are derived from the teachings of Scripture," said Edward Everett.

Horace Greeley said, "The principles of the Bible are the ground work of human freedom."

"The whole hope of human progress is suspended on the ever growing influence of the Bible," said William H. Seward.

"Hold fast to your Bible as the sacred anchor of your liberties," said U. S. Grant, "for to the influence of all this book we are indebted for all the progress made in true civilization, and to this we must look as our guide in the future."

Quoting from Greeley again, "It is impossible to mentally or socially enslave a Bible reading people. Now is the Bible less important in a strictly educational way. It is the model of the purest and the best English; it embodies the fundamentals of human experience and wisdom as no other book does. 'It contains,' says Landor, 'more specimens of genius and taste than any other volume in existence.' It is not generally known that the Bible is now printed in 770 different languages and dialects and that the work of putting it into still more strange tongues is being rushed by committees of clerics in all parts of the world. More than 660,000,000 Bibles have been printed in all languages throughout the world, since printing was invented in the 15th century. Figuring the population of the world at 1,500,000,000 all the Bibles printed if uniformly distributed would give a Bible to half the individuals now in the world and 80,000,000 people in the United States of America out of an estimated population of 115,000,000 own Bibles.

The success of a publication today is gauged by its circulation. Looking at the Bible from a standpoint of circulation, no other literary production can be considered in the same class.

Undoubtedly the laxity in reverence for, and observance of the laws of our land has its foundation in a lack of conscience which is the result of a lack of moral training. We need in order to insure public safety, to inculcate in the minds of all children respect for Divine law in order that they may respect the laws of the state and the nation.

Urgent Political Discussions in Churches to Revive Interest

The people at Wheatland Center have a fine church building but the attendance Sunday was very small. Rev. W. W. Gray is an experienced capable pastor and came all the way from North Adams to preach to a small percentage of the people living in the community.

George Burr Smith secretary and treasurer of the Labor Church Center of Hillsdale county urged the discussion of questions of practical Christianity as a means of securing a larger attendance.

He said in part: "It will be impossible to get young people who have gone through high school to through long sermons on the infallibility of biblical writings, which are at such variance, that they form the basis of a hundred or more different church creeds."

No high school graduate believes that the sun revolves around the earth which is implied by old testament writers, but all high school graduates have read in their histories of the martyrdom of the early Christians who handed down to us through torture and flame the teachings of Christ and they are conscious of the Holy Spirit which he promised if they have tried earnestly to follow those teachings.

"All are agreed, old and young, that the great vital task of the church is to help make 'Thy Kingdom come' This means political action unless we would idly pray the Lord's prayer."

M. A. C. Boy Wins at National Dairy Show

A Michigan boy, Charles D. Miller of Eaton Rapids, won first honors in dairy cattle judging for college students at the National dairy show in Syracuse, New York, last week. Miller was a member of the Michigan Agricultural College judging team which placed seventh among the 29 college teams entered.

Competing against 87 of the best college student judges in the country (there were three men on each team), Miller stood first with both Jersey and Holstein cattle and ranked high enough in the other breeds to lead the entire contest for the sweepstakes award.

While M. A. C. teams have stood high before in the national competition, this is the first time that the premier honors among individuals have been brought back to the state.

The Michigan club boys judging team also won high laurels at the big show finishing third among 20 teams from states scattered all over the country. Illinois and Connecticut won first and second places, respectively.

The Michigan team was composed of James Gallup of Gaasstra, Iron county; Starr Norrington, Northville, Wayne county; Roland Stein, Ann Arbor, Washtenaw county; and Glenn Livermore, Romeo, Macomb county. A fitting team at the same show was composed of Wayne Clark of Sand Creek, Lenawee; and Harland Andrews, of Adrian, Lenawee county.

Important Change in Rates on Livestock

The Michigan Live Stock Exchange advises shippers that no longer may a few calves be loaded in with a deck of sheep and the whole consignment be shipped at the sheep minimum weight of 12,000 pounds. Effective Sept. 28th freight rate tariffs were changed so that a few calves in with the sheep makes the whole car take the 16,000 pound minimum at the calf rate. Shippers should be governed accordingly.

George B. Smith Talks of Finance

The wealth of the Nation is becoming centralized through special interest legislation. Political campaigns will continue to be financed by two per cent of the population which controls 60 per cent of the wealth of our country unless an organization of the masses intervenes.

The Eighteenth amendment is becoming a scrap of paper, news papers are filled with ridicule of the League of Nations. While we are urged to spend millions in the perfection of the machinery of war, we are warned about the tributes being paid for the perfection of the only machinery for peace yet established in the world.

These are topics of discussion which will fill the people, save America and bring the Millennium which Labor organizations believe is practicable and possibly near at hand. Furthermore, such topics will bring people into the church and save souls which might otherwise fall into destructive unbelief.

Marjorie Kuhns is Sentenced

Mrs. Marjorie Kuhns who has been on trial for the murder of Zelon Lake at Jonesville was duly found guilty by the jury and Judge Chester sentenced her to life imprisonment in the Detroit House of Correction. Most of the evidence as far as we know was purely circumstantial and this is the first case in many years where a woman in Hillsdale county has been obliged to pay the life penalty on purely circumstantial evidence. Any juror who goes on the grid to pronounce this kind of a verdict on any person must certainly have to be pretty sure of his grounds.

The Movie for Saturday Evening

The high school is happy to announce it has an extra good program for the Moving Pictures of Saturday evening, October 27, "A Hoosier Romance" from the poem of James Whitcomb Riley. This comedy-drama is extremely well known and its adaptation to the screen is a splendid addition to the amusement column. The cast of this play includes Thomas Jefferson and Colleen Moore.
There will also be a Mary McAllister picture, especially good for children and withal interesting to grown-ups. This is one of the ways the high school has taken to pay for its new moving picture outfit and the teachers and students alike will appreciate your attendance. Remember every cent you put into these entertainments is going to tell in the education of the pupils in school and the village wants to keep abreast of the times.

Kaiser Bill Comes Back

It is rumored that the authorities at Doorn, Holland are watching Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm very rigidly as it is thought he is up to some kind of chicanery to get Germany back in the ring again as a world power. Both the Kaiser and his late wife are full of hope that some day their miserable fortunes will change and he will again be placed on the throne in Faterland. If the Allied nations allow this game to be put over they should be consigned to the boob squad indefinitely.
Visits have been made to the home of the ex-ruler by members of the Hohenzollern family and as this is the first time it has occurred considerable suspicion is attached to both the Kaiser and his wife. Plotting would certainly be in his line, and although he is old, yet Wilhelm is active.
Napoleon Bonaparte became an exile and his fortunes were fully as poor as the prospects of Wilhelm but he came back with sledge hammer blows, and it was not until he was isolated at St. Helena that Europe rested easily.

Plan State Apple and Potato Show

Apples and potatoes, two crops for which Michigan is famous and of which the entire state is justly proud, will have a special show of their own this fall.

The Michigan apple and potato show, established as an annual event, will be held in Grand Rapids from November 20 to 23, with choicest selections of the two crops gathered from all parts of the state.

A long list of cash prizes has attracted a record number of entries, and the prediction is being made that the show will be the greatest exhibition of its kind ever staged in Michigan, or any other middle western state, for that matter.

The show is planned in the interests of the two crops from a state-wide standpoint. Excellent quality of apples and potatoes produced in Michigan will be brought out, with the resultant effect of not only stimulating production of better fruit but also tending to increase consumption of the crops within the state.

Various cooperative potato and apple growers' associations, business men of west Michigan, railroad interests, and various state departments, including the Michigan Agricultural College, are cooperating in planning the details of the big exposition.

Special features, in addition to the straight showing of competitive fruit and potato samples, will be provided to add to the interest of the show.

J. P. Munson, prominent fruit grower of Kent County, is president of the apple and potato show, while

H. C. Moore, extension specialist at M. A. C., serves as secretary.

Our Government at Washington

It is with no small degree of joy we read that President Coolidge called a council of twenty-nine governors to meet in Washington not long ago and what he said to them is mighty good news to the world at large. It seems since Governor Smith of New York pulled off his high acrobatic act of trying to override the constitution of the United States there has been more or less misunderstanding among governors of the various states regarding their authority on the dry situation. President Coolidge thought it proper to summon them all to Washington and make this point plain. He assured them that this country and Government would be held responsible for each and every violation of the prohibition law.

He warned them that the government would back the Volstead Act to the letter and that they must act accordingly. Governor Groesbeck is standing pat all ready to proceed just as soon as he hears the plans of Washington. It is nice to read and much nicer to know that we have a president of America who means business and who is in office by mischance and we're glad it is a mischance, for when you find a man who talks right out in plain New England Puritan style as Coolidge does, it is significant that he isn't controlled by old party lines or political bosses. He wasn't nominated and elected by the force of dollars therefore, he has nobody to please but the people who are his subjects. As we remarked once before—watch his smoke. His attitude on the coal strike indicated his unfettered principles—long may he wave!

Trees in Your Dooryard

We are sorry to say that many of the people whom we know are very indifferent to trees located in their front yards, often ruthlessly laying them low after they have stood for fifty or seventy-five years as surveyors of shade and moisture to the ground and contributed many a happy hour to the generations of children who loved to linger in the shade on hot August days of summer. For some reason there is a mania among some people to cut down and destroy what God has placed here for our sole use.

ONCE IS ENOUGH

Evergreens make a splendid front yard tree if properly planted, and many a cord of wood and pound of coal has been saved through the cold temperatures of January and February by having a wind screen of these beautiful green trees.

Now is the time to set out evergreens so we are told by experts. To prepare the holes for, and to set out a half a dozen trees, is perhaps an hours' pleasant work—and the return, even this first winter, will more than pay the slight trouble and the moderate expense involved. Don't let your home go without at least a few evergreens for another year!

Among the varieties which are best for propagation might be mentioned Nordmans Fir and Koster's Blue Spruce. White, Red or Norwegian Pine. Why pines do not grow naturally in this county we have never ascertained, for if one is set out it seems to flourish and do just as well here as further north. We are of the opinion that forestry is being sadly neglected in Michigan and it should not be. A splendid row of mammoth pines or hemlock trees on the north or west side of your residence will create one of the finest screens from bleak winds known, and they grow quite rapidly.

Embalmer's Examination November 20-21

Examination for embalmers will be held in Lansing for two days beginning Tuesday morning November 20 at eight o'clock, according to letters sent out to undertakers, funeral directors and embalmers of the state by the Michigan department of health. Those desiring to take the examination at this time must fill out and return to the commissioner of health the proper application blank with an unmounted photograph of the applicant signed in ink on the back and properly certified to by a notary. A fee of ten dollars must accompany the application.

Remittance may be made by registered letter but personal checks are strictly forbidden. Application blanks will be mailed from the Michigan department of health upon request and they must be properly filled out and returned ten days before the date of examination. In signing applications, the name of the individual must appear in full and not the name of a firm.

The object of these examinations is to help maintain the high standard already set by Michigan in the field of embalming. Candidates will be required to take both written and oral examinations with demonstrations on cadaver. Oral examinations will be given in the order applications are received. The written examinations will cover such subjects as the anatomy of the human body, how diseases are spread, value of disinfection, the sign of death and the manner in which it is determined, methods of embalming and a thorough knowledge of shipping rules.

Teaching Patriotism

Part of the business of the Youth's Companion is cultivating a love of patriotism—the love of country; not long, but true. The Youth's Companion started the movement for putting the flag on the schoolhouse, it formulated the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag that is repeated today in practically every schoolhouse in the United States. It has for a long time, now, been running a series of patriotic covers picturing striking events in the nation's history. Painted by the best historical illustrators in the country they are reproduced in full colors at frequent intervals on the Companion's covers. It is worth a year's subscription to the Companion to have these scenes in our building of the nation pictured so graphically. They help greatly in fixing the memory of the event's related in the school history.

The 52 issues of 1924 will be crowded with serial stories, short stories, editorials, poetry, facts and fun. Subscribe now and receive:

A smooth, unbroken highway now stretches from Vancouver to Los Angeles, linking two nations and joining three states to Canada. The last of the cement completing the highway from Vancouver to the border town of Cloverdale, British Columbia, was poured in the presence of thousands of motorists who met there to attend the opening ceremony.

Roads Show Degree of Civilization

Gibbon, famous historian, wrote "The character and civilization of any community can be properly judged by the class of roads it has."

The community which can afford a good road and is content to wallow in mud, is, by this standard not thoroughly civilized. This may not be agreeable reading to those contented with bad roads, yet these very people will judge their neighbors by standards no more exacting. The man who can afford an automobile, a telephone, a lighting system, a warm house, and good clothes, and who walks, borrows his neighbors' phone, reads by candles, has a cold house and wears rags, is not called civilized by his neighbors.

A good road is as necessary for the enjoyment of the advantages modern civilization has to offer as is the ability to read (which was once the accomplishment only of the priest and the king). The abandoned farm is seldom or never found on a good road. The illiterate child does not live beside a good road. People who live on or near good roads get to town, see pictures, mix with their fellows, enjoy a rich social life, visit each other, buy and sell quickly and easily, are in touch with the world. Those who live on bad roads cannot even depend on the R. F. D. if rain or snow lays its prohibition upon the carrier.

This great country is away down the list among the literate nations; one of the reasons is the difficulty of educating either child or adult where mud prevents attendance at school.

Gibbon's measuring rod may be comfortable, but the facts seem to show it is accurate.

The Wet Program for Next Year

Recently there have been put out statements indicating what the programs of the prohibition and anti-prohibition forces next year will be, both here in Michigan and in the nation at large. They show that both sides are girding themselves for a fight to determine whether the Eighteenth Amendment and the Volstead Act, and Michigan's co-operation on prohibition enforcement shall stand or fall.

First comes a press dispatch from Washington, declaring that the submission of a constitutional amendment in Michigan to permit the sale of beer and light wines is "assured" for the election of 1924. This, on the authority of Robert D. Wardell, of Detroit, secretary of the Michigan branch of the association against the prohibition amendment. Wardell we are told, was promised the assistance of his national organization, and he predicts "an easy victory" for the wine and beer amendment. The Michigan branch of the A. A. P. A. will proceed at once to raise the funds for its campaign. Congressman Cramton, of the Seventh Michigan district, is informed that the wet forces have raised a fund of $250,000 "and will attempt to elect a legislature next year pledged to repeal the Michigan enforcement act."

It is certainly very kind of "our friends the enemy" to post us by forehand as to their program. Forewarned is forearmed. A fight in the open is preferable to one in the dark. The dry forces will be ready and give a good account of themselves.

Mr. Wardell says his folks propose to embody in the amendment to be submitted a provision to empower the legislature to impose a tax on all cereal beverages which will yield about $15,000,000 annually and replace taxes now burdensome. All of which is, of course, arrant nonsense.

As to the prospects, Mr. Wardell's optimism may gratify his people, but will hardly be shared by intelligent folk. In 1919, a similar wine and beer amendment was voted on in Michigan, and defeated by over 200,000. Hon. Grant M. Hudson, who was at the head of the Michigan Anti-Saloon League at that time, and now is Congressman from the Sixth district, voices the opinion of "our folks" when he declares that the rejection of such an amendment now is even more certain than four years ago—that it will be beaten worse than before. Mr. Hudson has no doubt the wets can get signatures enough put on their amendment; but to carry it is quite another thing. Christian advocate.

In its editorial column the Industrial Index notes that "road building has developed into a great—a really tremendous—industry in America. It is an industry with many ramifications—the mining of manufacturing of road-building materials; the transportation of these bulky commodities; the distribution of these materials by agents and jobbers; the professional engineers who have made a special study of this branch of construction; the activities of thousands upon thousands of road and bridge contractors; the armies of workmen who are out on the firing line of these innumerable projects. The investment in road building, when considered in its various aspects, is enormous. And it will grow heavier with each passing year."

It will, indeed, grow heavier. Road building is shortly to be the premier industry (not considering farming) of the United States. It will be as much greater than is automobile making, in the men and money required, as that industry, now the first in the country, is greater than railroading, which for so many years held premier place.

And as yet we have scarce begun to build roads! In all our years of national existence we have succeeded in building less than 300,000 miles of improved roads, although we have almost 3,600,000 miles to improve! Of course, the need of roads was not felt until the automobile demonstrated the economy of a new transportation, but the automobile is already old, men and women now in college do not remember when there were no automobiles!

It is not enough that this country build roads; it must build roads which connect with each other, thus securing the maximum use of each mile, and it must build roads that last. As the several states have found that only a central state highway commission can lay out and construct a state highway system to which counties and towns can build their feeder roads, so must the nation come to realize that only a central National highways commission can lay out and build (and forever maintain) a national system of roads, to which states can build, as a part of their own systems, those roads which will make the national system serve all the people.

Ten years ago any sort of Federal participation in road building was looked upon as a chimerical idea. Since 1916 we have spent hundreds of millions of dollars of Federal money for Federal aid roads.

Recently two French soldiers were bathing in the Rhine River. Since they were unable to swim, the soldiers were in a serious condition. A young German, who was watching, swam out and rescued both of them. The French Tribunal, to reward him, promised that anything he asked would be granted. He asked that the lives of seven men, who had been trouble to the French authorities, might be spared. The request was granted.

The Y. M. C. A. is What?

We believe there is a Y. M. C. A. in Hillsdale county at least we hear something about it once in a while in Hillsdale but not much outside of the city. What has become of this once powerful organization? Well, we pause for reply there is nothing forthcoming, not even a wee little peep.

Somewhat we note that since the World War this organization is far less popular than it was previously. Previous to the Hindenberg line we heard much of what was being done and was going to be done by the Y. M. C. A. and as the thing is so hushed you can hear a pin drop, we wonder if the Salvation Army lassie has swallowed up the whole business bag and baggage!

The other day we picked up a paper in which the great and only W. J. Bryan of Nebraska, was quoted and we sincerely hope he wasn't misquoted—said "The Y. M. C. A. is seriously concerned whether it shall become a religious organization, or just an institution for shower bath and athletic contests."

Find Model Bull Association Group

A bull association which comes pretty close to being a model of perfection in its form of organization and the quality of the animals kept by its members has been formed by a group of farmers in Livingston county.

A bull association is a cooperative enterprise among farmers of a district who wish to use better sires in their dairy herds than an individual could afford to own alone. By pooling their interests, such a group is able to secure animals of highest quality, and the Livingston men, who are keeping Holsteins, have set a high standard for the rest of the state in this regard.

The association has four "blocks," each with its own bull, while a fifth sire of even superior breeding is kept on one central point. The four bulls are rotated around the blocks at intervals in order that all members of the association will have some use from each.

The result of this plan is that definite lines of breeding will be developed in the community and a reputation built up for high class animals of the strain.

The central bull in the new Livingston Association, which is being kept at the D. H. Hoover farm, is Renfrew Homestead Piebe, son of the United States champion Holstein cow, May Walker Oilie Homestead. The four "block" sires are all related to the central sire and are of the same blood lines.

Membership fees in the original investment are not large because of the relatively large number of farmers who share the expense, while the annual up-keep fees are very small. The farmers on whose places the sires are kept are paid a regular maintenance fee out of the association funds.

Following the recent declaration of President Coolidge for prohibition enforcement, officers in Michigan have been getting after the soft drink sellers and other truck known to be bootlegging, and a lot of them have lost their permits in Detroit and other places, and so the "wets" are insisting something must be done. Ginger ale and soda water they say must be banned, cold tea is a mocker and cider is raging.

The Congregational church was filled to listen to the World's temperance Sunday program, which was very well rendered. Thru-out all the songs and recitations the importance of Law Enforcement was emphasized. The committee in charge wished to thank all who helped in making the event a success. A good offering was received for the Anti-Saloon League.

We copy the following from the Jackson News of Tuesday last: "Deputy Butts was driving out M-17 Sunday afternoon and was stopped by a man driving a Studebaker coupe who claimed the driver of a Ford roadster had tried to boot him so to speak, land only succeeded in reaching his fender, and asked Butts if he could get the party. Butts told the man to follow him and in a short time overtook the same roadster. The driver gave his name as William Wolff and admitted that he locked fenders with the Studebaker car but asserted it was the other man's fault. Wolff was told to report at the sheriff's department Monday morning which he did, but the person driving the coupe did not appear to make any charge and Wolff was released."

The Dry Program for Next Year

The dry program, as far as Michigan is concerned, is of course to fight any beer and wine modifications of prohibition as now embodied in the state Constitution and laws, and in the next place, to secure better cooperation of state and local authorities with the nation in enforcement of prohibition.

As to the dry program at Washington, Congressman Crampton, of Lansing, threw some interesting light in a speech he made the other day at the state convention of the W. C. T. U. in Adrian. Mr. Crampton is regarded as the house leader of the dry forces since Mr. U. Stead's retirement, and is qualified to speak. He declared emphatically that the next congress will be substantially as dry as the last "when the beer froth is blown off."

Even if, by any possible chance, Congress should pass a bill to modify the Volstead Act, says Mr. Crampton, "the supreme court of the United States will find it unconstitutional." It is well to put a pin in there. The Eighteenth Amendment prohibits "intoxicating liquors." The one-half of the one per cent alcoholic content, established years ago as the limit at the request of the liquor trade itself, is likely to be sustained by the highest court of the land.

Mr. Crampton to the W. C. T. U. ladies outlined the dry program for the next congress. Bills will be introduced to extend sovereignty twelve miles out to sea, instead of three; to establish the prohibition enforcement bureau supreme in itself, with elastic and concentrated powers; to eradicate politics in prohibition enforcement; to prevent congressmen from interfering in the hiring and firing of enforcement agents. Mr. Crampton himself favors the deportation of alien who violate the prohibition laws, but he did not include that plank in his congressional program.

Congressman Earl C. Kitchner of Adrian, and John C. Ketcham, of Hastings, spoke at the W. C. T. U. convention, in favor of the prohibition amendment and the Volstead law. The former predicted that Senator Couzens will not run on his five per cent beer platform. The latter pertinently urged that the fight against the liquor traffic be made "the moral equivalent for war," as bringing out the fine qualities of civility and sacrifice.

Meanwhile two gatherings at Washington have important bearing on the prohibition enforcement program. One is a citizenship conference called by a committee of 750 men and women of national prominence, to be held at Washington October 13-15.

The object of this meeting was to get at the real facts regarding law enforcement or non-enforcement, to "solidify moral sentiment" and "demonstrate the power of the law-abiding sentiment of America."

It is too early to give results of this conference; but Gov. Pinchot is expected to preside, and the brilliant array of speakers included such names as Senator Borah, William Jennings Bryan, ex-Governor Henry J. Allen, Bishop McDowell, Rabbi Wise, Warren S. Stone, Justice Florence Allen of Ohio, and Assistant Attorney-General Mabel Willebrandt. The other gathering is the conference of state governors called by President Coolidge to consider law enforcement.—Christian Advocate.

Scarlet Fever

Recent outbreaks of scarlet fever in a southern Michigan town have resulted in an epidemic. This is due to the fact that quarantine was but poorly observed, if not wholly disregarded. Two cases were reported by a citizen of the town to the Michigan department of health last week, but when the state medical inspector arrived on the scene, six cases were found. The disease had a ready field for spreading itself in the schools and a potential scarlet fever epidemic now is threatening.

Abject carelessness on the part of the local health officer is largely to blame for the situation. But for the efforts of a former health officer, the school probably would have to close their doors. The department of health has the matter under advisement and due punishment will be meted out. A fine of $15 and costs has already been levied against the persons disregarding quarantine.

The village of Addison was visited by a serious fire Tuesday morning. Loss $15,000.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the North Adams Library association held last Saturday evening the following officers were elected for the coming year: Pres., Mrs. Eva Wolcott vice pres., Mrs. Belle Blackmer; sec'y., Mrs. Gertrude Pierce; treas., Harold Young; executive com., Mesdames Bowman Pierce and Jones.

Ku Klux in Bad Again

The "Invisibles" are in bad again at Portsmouth, Ohio where 224 members of the Klan were arrested by police last Sunday because they wanted to break the laws of Ohio by parading in full regalia. It seems the Chief of Police previously warned them they would not do but to assist in the ceremony of laying a cornerstone of some church about 300 of them marched through the streets of the town, some in regalia, and they were met by a squad of officers and escorted to the police station where they were put under bonds to appear for a hearing on the charge of obstructing traffic. Very hard lines are laid down for the Klansmen in Ohio and we note that Michigan is following suit also.

Hallowe'en Pranks

As usual, the night of October 31st was fittingly observed with house movings and other little cute acts which appeal to a boy's sense of humor. Some was tried to make a veterinary out of Dr. McFarland by placing Dr. Caswell's sign in his front yard but about the only casualty we noticed was a Ford touring car nosing a maple tree on East Main street. The car was badly wrecked and the driver who happened to be Ward Barber was somewhat cut by flying glass. It is claimed that Hallowe'eners placed an obstruction in the street and in trying to avoid it, Mr. Barber's car hit the tree. It is said the machine will hardly be worth repairing.

Moving Pictures Saturday Evening

Under the auspices of the High school a good movie program is listed for next Saturday evening Nov. 3, at Knowles opera house. Stowe's famous masterpiece "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is to be given and you will find a world of entertainment in this age-old new drama of slavery days. Don't forget we need your patronage. Come in the evening and "Evil" laugh at the ludicrous pranks of lawyer Marks and share the contempt for the brutal Simon Legree. You used to witness this play by mediocre artists—come out and see how realistic it can be produced by high salaried screen stars. "A BROWN MOUSE"

SYNOPSIS—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, a young farmer, because of his poor position. He is intellectually above the average, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of the teaching profession, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is a better fellow by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of life. While the Iowa people are not, but there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself. As a result, he comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school teacher, as a joke.

The president followed usage when he said: "If there's no objection, it will be so ordered. Prepare the ballots for a vote on the election of teacher. For Secretary."

There was no surprise in view of the nomination of Jim Irwin by the blarneying Bonner when the Secretary smoothed out the first ballot, and the school board members, when the next slip came forth, "James E. Irwin, two," the board of directors of the Woodruff Independent district were stunned at the slowly dawning knowledge that they had made an election! Before they had realized, the secretary drew from the box the third ballot, and read, "James E. Irwin, three."

President Bonner choked as he announced the result—choke and stammered, and made very hard weather of it, but he went through with the motion, as we all run in our grooves. "The ballot having shown the unanimous election of James E. Irwin, I declare him elected."

He dropped into his chair, while the secretary, very methodical, drew from his portfolio a contract duly drawn up, his name and signature, and he calmly filed out, and passed over to the president, pointing to the dotted line. Mr. Bonner would have signed his own death-warrant at that moment, not to mention a perfectly legal document, and signed with Peterson and Bonner looking on.

"Sign there," he said.

Jim looked it over, saw the other signatures, and he signed.

"Now we adjourn," said Peterson.

"No objection," he so ordered," said Mr. Bonner.

The secretary and Jim went out, while the directors waited.

"What the Billy—" began Bonner, and finished lamely "What for did you vote for the school, Jim?"

"I voted for him," replied Bonner.

"Because he fought for my boy this time. I didn't want it stuck into me so hard. I wanted him to have one vote."

"Ah," wanted him to have one vote, too," said Peterson.

In this case, Jim directed the teacher, and the Woodruff district, as on account of Jennie Woodruff's "humph!"

CHAPTER III

What is a Brown Mouse?

Immediately upon the accidental election of Jim Irwin to the position of teacher of the Woodruff school, he developed habits somewhat like a mouse's or a hen's. That is, he walked of nights and on rainy days.

On fine days, he worked in Colonel Woodruff's fields as of yore. Jim's salary was to be just $300 for six months' work in the Woodruff school, and he was to find himself—and his mother, therefore, he had to indulge in his loose habits of night walking and roaming about after hours only, or on holidays and in foul weather.

The Simms family, being from the "mountains" of Tennessee, were rather startled one night, when Jim Irwin, home, stooped and errandless, suddenly appeared in their family circle about the front door. They had lived where it was the custom to give a "whoop" from the big road before one passed through the pail and up to the house. Otherwise, bow was one to know whether the visitor was friend or foe?

From force of habit, Old Man Simms started for his gun-rack at Jim's appearance, but the Lincolnian smile and the low slow speech, so much like his own in some respects, ended that.

"Stranger," said Mr. Simms, after greetings had been exchanged, "you're right welcome, but in our country you'd find it dangerous to walk in this way."

"How so?" queried Jim Irwin.

"You'd more'n likely get shot up some," replied Mr. Simms, "unless you whooped from the big road."

"I didn't know that," replied Jim.

"I'm ignorant of the customs of other countries. Would you rather I'd whoop from the big road—nobody else will."

"I reckon," replied Mr. Simms, "that we'll have to accommodate ourselves to the ways here."

Eventually Jim was the Simms' first caller since he had settled on the little brassy tract whose hills and trees reminded them of their own.

Low hills, to be sure, with only a footing of rocks where the creek had cut through, and not many trees, but down in the creek, with its oaks, elms and box-elders arching overhead, the Simmses could imagine themselves beside some run falling into the French River of Holland.

The creek bed was a withdrawing room in which to retire from the noisy black and white level cornfields of Iowa.

"The soil was so poor, in comparison with those black uplands, that the owner of the old woodlot could find no reuter but it was better than the soil in the mountains, and suited the lonesome Simmses much more than a better farm would have done. They were not of the Iowa people anyhow, not understood, not their equals—they were "poor," and expected to stay "poor," while the Iowa people all seemed to be either well-to-do, or expected to become so.

Jim Irwin asked Old Man Simms about the fishing in the creek, and whether there was any duck shooting spring and fall.

"We get right short of these little panfish," said Mr. Simms, "an Calista done shot two butterball ducks about 'tater-plantin' time."

Calista blushed—but this stranger, so much like themselves, could not see the rose suffusion. The allusion gave him a chance to look about him in the family. There was a boy of sixteen, a girl—the duck-shooting Calista—youngee than Raymond—a girl of eleven, named Virginia, and a smaller lad who rejoiced in the name of McGeehee, but was mercifully called Buddy.

Calista, equipped for her first hunt, to say, "Raymond runs a line of traps when the fur's prime," she volunteered.

Then came a long talk on traps and "rapping," shooting, hunting and the joys of the mountains—during which Jim noted the ignorance and poverty of the Simmses. The clothing of the girls was not decent according to local standards; for while Calista wore a better dress, a simple, and well-made, it was a little ragged. The boys were wearing quite shabby—said not without evidence to support his views—that she had been wearing when he arrived the same night.

losing the best hand I ever had, and I've been sorry."

"That glad news leaving you," said Jennie.

"He ought to do something except work in the field for wages."

"I've had no idea he could make good as a teacher and what is there in it if he does?"

"What has he lost if he doesn't?" rejoined Jennie. "And why can't he make good?"

"The school board's against him, for one thing," replied the colonel. "They're not a few folks who get a chance. They're the laughing-stock of the country for hiring him by mistake, and they're irritated. But after seeing him perform tonight, I wonder if he can't make good."

"If he could feel like anything but an underling, he'd succeed," said Jennie.

"That's his heredity," stated the colonel, whose live stock operations were based on heredity. "Jim's a scrub, I suppose, but he acts as if he might turn out to be a Brown Mouse."

"What do you mean, pa?" scoffed Jennie—"a Brown Mouse?"

"Well, in Edinburgh," said the colonel, "crossed the Japanese waltzing mouse with the common white mouse. Jim's peddling father was a waltzing mouse, so good except to jump from one spot to another for no good reason. Jim's mother is an albatross of a woman, with all the color washed out in one way or another. Jim ought to be a mongrel, and I've always considered him one. But he's a fellow fellow every once in a while out of his various-colored waltzing and albino hybrids, a Brown Mouse. It wasn't a common house mouse, either, but a wild mouse, and he may have been a Brown Mouse, as he had never seen. I ran away and hit and gnawed and raised him. It was what we breeders call a Mendel's law segregation of genetic factors that had been in the waltzers and albinos all the time—their original wild ancestor of the woods and fields. It Jim turns out to be a Brown Mouse, he may be a bigger man than any of us. Anyhow, I'm for him."

"He'll have to be a big man to make anything out of the job of a country school teacher," said Jennie.

Just Two Boys

That was all. Just two boys. Not different from most boys—plump, rosy little fellows, two and four respectively—manly, sturdy roustabouts, the like of which we pass daily on the city streets without a thought.

But these two boys were different, for they were at that moment being taken away from their mother. The mother of the American Legion Children's Bill was there, trying, at the same time, to reassure the weeping mother and make friendly overtures to the rather shy little boys.

But what is it all about? It is only another one of those tragic stories of suffering which are going on all about us and which we are too busy or too selfish to notice. This was but another one of the reasons why the American Legion of Children's Bill—a veritable haven of refuge for the widows and orphans of the World War. These little fellows, whom we will call Teddy and Eddy, are the sons of a soldier who was wounded in the World War, but like many others, was pronounced cured when discharged from the service.

This husband and father resumed his work and went well, while little ones were added to his family until suddenly the healed wound in his head again began to trouble him, and soon he became violently insane and was committed to an asylum. The little mother took up the burden of caring for her family, by working out through the day and returning to her household in the evening. By dint of strict economy she got along very well while weary months passed until the joyful news was received that her husband was to be released—that he was again well. But, as though the wound were never healed, not yet filled, the excitement incident to the return home of the afflicted man rendered him again violent, and it was only the intervention of neighbors that prevented him from taking the lives of his loved ones. This last blow was more than the overtaxed woman could stand and she yielded her little ones to the kind care of her husband's buddies at the Children's Bill. Of course, they would have been glad to have taken the mother along with her little ones, but because of lack of funds and room (the same old story), the mother was left standing desolate on the walk, while the taxi, bearing all that was dear to her in life, rolled away. Turned to the woman, after the taxid had disappeared down the street, we found her, crumpled like a wilted flower, in a dead faint on the walk, and our last glimpse of kind neighbors leading her into her cheerless home.

Yes, these were but two boys, but back of their lives is a story of suffering, which need not be, if all the kind-hearted and generously inclined people of the country would stop to consider. The heavy burdens which are crushing the life out of this poor woman might be lifted if each one would assist, even a little. It would go far toward healing the wounds that are now sapping the lives of our citizens.

Be glad that Teddy and Eddy are happy within the spacious confines of the American Legion Children's Bill, but make it possible by your gifts that the mother can there join her little ones.

Stock Show a Great Educational Event

The twenty-fourth anniversary in national live stock exposition will be held in Chicago December 1st to 8th. In reference to the corn law section of this world famous institution, Robert J. Evans, the well-known secretary of the American Duroc-Jersey association, has issued the following public statement: "A visit to the International is an education in livestock development that cannot be gained by a visit to any other fair or exposition. Breeders who are situated so they can bring their sons up to this show or their daughters, either will give them an opportunity to absorb a great incentive for producing better live stock, and they will get a more ample idea of the immensity of the purebred live stock business than they can get in any other way in the same length of time."

Mrs. Julia Petty, a woman 86 years of age living near Camden walked 24 miles thinking it was an August day and waded into Long Lake with the intention of committing suicide but a man who was near dragged her out and coaxed her to abandon the stunt for a while. She is apparently none the worse for the bath.

This is the way a professional liquor totter has summed up the booze situation in America today, and its dollars to doughnuts he's in the right: "Mike de Pike" Heiter of Chicago, jaunty, dapper and well dressed, says: "Sure, I sold a lot of whiskey but who sold it to me, and where are the guys who bought it? The law says they are as guilty as I am. I don't know to this day where the last lot came from, but the Federal government knows and the owners of that distillery are still out and free. It's as easy as eating a poached egg to stop it all. If the Federal government would only put the screws on the places where it leaks out and then check up on practically 90 per cent of the Federal agents who are getting their palms greased to the extent of millions per year, there would not be anything for the local police to do but pinch stickups and stop speeders. Hadn't I ought to know?"

The snug winter weather of the past two days has caused a slump in the summer underwear trade, and overcoats are numerous on our streets. Christmas is near with her cheering notes and family reunions. Let's go to it with vigor. Also December days will bring the ice creamer and the coal man and a list of other functionalities such as we must smile upon, then push along to the next. When we glance our eagle eye over the list of people who have "cranked up" "Lizzie" and departed for Florida, it causes a lump to rise right over the Adams apple and we just simply deplore our luck whereby we have to freeze in old Michigan when balmy times are within three days travel with the "bliver".

Community Hall is Talked of

A meeting was called for Wednesday evening, Nov. 7th at the high school building of the business men, relating to purchasing the Knowles opera house for the benefit of the high school. For some time it has been known Mr. Knowles was quite anxious to dispose of the property, as he is not interested looking after this class of work. Rather than have our opera house converted into a building for private interests it has been thought best to take it over as the property of the village and retain it in the present capacity as a community meeting place, but with no thought or intention of profit. Another meeting will be called soon to close up the matter. We are informed that the entire shares necessary for the purchase have been subscribed. Another meeting is called for Friday evening, Nov. 9.

Michigan Exhibits at Chicago

"Michigan farmers not only find competition at the International important and instructive, but their winnings have been a splendid advertisement for their seeds," says Rather in discussing the large number of entries from the state. "One out grower who exhibited at Chicago in 1922 sold over 900 bushels of certified Wolverine oats into one Indiana county, as a result."

Most of the Michigan entries come from varieties which have been developed by the Michigan Agricultural College seed of which is produced, under inspection, by members of the Michigan crop improvement association.

Entries for the International may be made through H. C. Rather, secretary of Michigan crop improvement association, East Lansing before November 7. Rather will act as Michigan representative at Chicago, looking after exhibiting and returning entries from the state.

Chicago has Most Remarkable Street in the World

Halsted Street in Chicago is one of the most noted streets in the entire world. Besides being the longest business street, it is lined by many famous institutions and colonies. Street cars run practically the entire length of its thirty miles, making its many interesting sights easily accessible to visitors at the metropolis.

One of the foremost institutions of interest along its entire length is the famous International Live Stock Exposition Amphitheatre, located at 42nd Street. Here is held annually the first week in December the largest gathering of agriculturists and live stock products found anywhere on the face of the globe. Visitors flock to this great gathering each winter to pay their homage at the shrine of the business and receive inspiration for the coming year in their chosen calling. This year the mammoth show will be staged from December 1st to 8th and with reduced railroad rates during that period, a half million visitors are expected to be present. Many of these will find time during the busy week of interesting events in the amphitheatre to visit the varied sights along the length of Halsted Street.

The famous Hull house, presided over by Jane Adams, is the center of the Jewish colony at 800 block, south. Nearby is the interesting Maxwell street, outdoor market which can be duplicated at no other place in the world.

The entire length of Halsted street is divided into colonies of different nationalities, each with their own newspapers, stores and churches such as will be found in their native countries. The largest colonies are the Jewish, Greek, Italian, Polish, Swedish, and Gypsy, but in all at least 30 nationalities are represented somewhere on the length of this famous street. In fact a person can get a miniature trip around the world without leaving Halsted Street, the cosmopolitan thoroughfare of America.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Rule of the Personal Liberties

Five Personal Liberties met in front of the court house. One cursed the Eighteenth Amendment, saying, "These intolerant ought to be driven out and our city left in peace."

The second cursed the automobile laws, saying, "Isn't a fellow's automobile his own? And don't we pay for the streets? Why may we not do as we please with our own?"

The third cursed the anti-narcotic laws, saying, "What presumption to deny to a man anything he wants to put into his blood?"

The fourth cursed the anti-gambling laws, saying, "How insolent! Why can we not do as we please with our own money?"

The fifth cursed all laws, saying, "I'm against any law that prohibits a man from doing anything he wants to do. What we desire planted in us for if not to be satisfied?"

A sixth man joined them, who said, "Gentlemen, I have been listening to your conversation and offer my services. You want all those intolerant removed, don't you? Well, I have a little box here that will do the trick. It is the latest discovery in radio. It radios power not sound." Pointing it at an automobile he sent it scurrying through the air, exclaiming, "That way, see! Turn it on the intolerant and transport them to—where they belong; then run the town to suit yourselves."

"Let's do it," chuckled the five doubling up with laughter. "I'll be some town then."

So all the preachers were quickly dispatched. And all the law-abiding elements. And all who enforced law. Not one was left in the town.

liberty for anybody. We are now convinced that this will be a better place to live in with you in it; that law does not take liberty away but gives liberty."

—G. M. Anderson in The Christian Evangelist.

Former North Adams Led Comended

From the October Michigan Central Magazine we clip the following notice and some will remember Otto Crapser formerly of Moscow township. He is a brother of Orson Crapser and has been employed by the New York Central lines in Chicago for 20 years.

"Below is a letter from A. R. Small, 207 East Ohio street, Chicago of the Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc., complimenting our Otto W. Crapser, City Passenger Agent, Chicago, for taking care of the W. H. Merrill funeral party, Chicago to Buffalo, Tuesday, September 18:

"Permit me to record with my sincere appreciation of the very fine courtesy shown by the New York Central Lines and yourself in particular, in arranging for the car which we occupied to Buffalo and return in connection with our very sad errand of transporting the body of our friend and former President W. H. Merrill, to Warsaw for burial."

Vegetable Storage Gives Winter Supply

The home garden may be made the source of a winter as well as a summer supply of vegetables, if proper storage facilities are made use of.

The following pointers on home garden storage are given by E. P. Lewis, of the horticultural department at the Michigan Agricultural College:

"Cabbage, beets, carrots, turnips and parsnips require cool, moist storage conditions. Potatoes demand the same low temperature, but somewhat drier atmosphere. Onions, when kept with a low temperature, dry atmosphere and free air circulation. Squashes and sweet potatoes require much higher temperatures with dry atmosphere."

"In selecting vegetables for storage, it should be borne in mind that many organisms, causing decay, enter through wounds or bruises on the surface. Therefore, only perfectly sound specimens should be selected."

"Three places are ordinarily used for home storage of vegetables: the cellar, the outdoor pit and a permanent outdoor cellar. The house cellar is probably the most common. Those vegetables demanding cool, moist conditions should have a compartment partitioned off from the furnace room. Often some medium, such as sand is ideal for the root crops. Cabbages may be wrapped in paper and placed on shelves. Squashes and sweet potatoes keep in an ideal condition in the furnace room."

"A well-drained place should be selected for the outdoor pit. Ordinarily a slight excavation is made and lined with straw. A layer of straw eight inches thick and an equal layer of soil is placed over the conical pile to be stored."

"The permanent outdoor cellar is usually constructed on a high and completely covered with earth except at one end, where the entrance is located. Ventilation is supplied by ventilators through the ceiling and cold air intake chambers through the floor."

Buffalo Again to Live Where First Discovered

The recent gift of three buffalo to the government of Mexico recalls the discovery and early history of these big game animals. The gift will be sent from the herd maintained by the United States department of agriculture on the Wichita Game Preserve, Oklahoma, to the zoological park in the city of Mexico, almost on the very spot where the buffalo was first discovered by Europeans.

The Biological survey points out that 400 years ago, when Cortez entered Montezuma's capital, on the present site of the city of Mexico while men had their first view of buffalo, a herd of which was maintained in the menagerie of the emperor. This was in 1521, when buffalo roamed in millions over the tablelands of northern Mexico and the Great Plains of the present western United States.

An early writer, Antonio de Solis who first described Montezuma's menagerie, declared that the greatest rarity in the collection was the "Mexican bull," which had crooked shoulders, a bunch on its back like the camel, and its neck covered with hair like the lion. It was in these terms that he characterized the American buffalo or bison.

As a manifestation of good-will toward our southern neighbor, a gift of three buffalo was tendered the Mexican government by the United States department of agriculture and the New York zoological society. Details of shipment are being arranged between Dr. W. T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Park, and Prof. A. L. Herrera, in charge of the zoological work of the Mexican government.

Mothers Advise Their Daughters to Rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to Keep Them in Health

A Mother's Advice Prevents Operation

Corona, N. Y.—"I had a terrible pain in my left side and had to go to bed every night. Doctors had to operate on me, but I must be operated on, but I do not believe in the knife and would rather suffer than go through it. My mother also did not believe in it and she made me take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because it had helped her. It has also helped me for I am better and able to resume my work. I recommend your medicine and give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. J. BURCH, Jr., 11 S. Railroad Avenue, Corona, N. Y.

A Sickly Child

Mahoningtown, Pa.—"I would like to say a few words about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About a year ago I thought it would be necessary for me to have my daughter out of school. She was losing weight, was nervous, and when she would come home from school she would drop into a chair and cry, and say, 'Mamma, I don't believe I can go to school another day.' I gave her Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now she is a healthy, happy, hearty, strong girl and weighs 120 pounds. She has no difficulty in doing her 'kvm' work, and she works at home every night and morning, too. I am a mother who can certainly praise your medicine, and if it will be of any benefit you may use this letter as a reference."

Mrs. GEORGE E. WHITAKER, 62 W. Madison Ave., Mahoningtown, Pa.

Every girl wants to be healthy and strong, and every mother wants her daughter to do well in school and to enjoy herself at home. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a splendid medicine for young girls at entrance to manhood. Mothers may depend upon it. Remember it is prepared from roots and herbs, contains nothing that can injure, and tends to tone up and strengthen the organs concerned, so that they will work in a healthy and normal manner.

For nearly fifty years it has been used by women of all ages, and these women know its great value. Let it help your daughter and yourself.

The Broomcase by Herbert Quick

CONVISED BY THE BOARD OF HEALTH

JENNIE IN POLITICS

SYNOPSIS—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin. But there are latest financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above the station, and has unusual ideas concerning the possibilities of teaching and farming for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an outcast. He looks by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latest powers in him unsuspected even by himself. He is a powerful man knocking at his door. Jim is not content for school town as a joke. The joke results in his election. He visits his scholars.

But, true to his belief in honest, thorough work, like a general preparing for battle, he examined his field of operations. His manner of doing this seemed to prove to Colonel Woodruff, who watched it with keen interest, something new in the world, that Jim Irwin was possibly a Brown Mouse. But the colonel knew only a part of Jim's performance. He saw Jim clothed in slippers, walking through rainstorms to the houses in the Woodruff district, as greedy for every morsel of praise as a hawkeye for shine; and he knew that Jim made a great many evening calls.

He did not know that Jim was making what our sociologists call a survey. For that matter, neither did Jim; for books on sociology cost more than 25 cents each, and Jim had never seen one. However, it was a survey. To be sure, he had long known everybody in the district, save the Simmes, and he was now a friend of all that exotic race; but there is knowing and knowing.

He now had note-books full of facts about people and their farms. He knew how many acres each family possessed, and what sort of farming each husband was doing—live stock, grain or potatoes. He knew about mortgages, and the debts. He knew whether the family atmosphere was happy and contented, or the reverse. He knew which boys and girls were wayward and insubordinate. He made a record of the advancement in their studies of all the children, and he knew the likes and dislikes of each. He knew their favorite amusements. He talked with their mothers and sisters—not about the school, to any extent, but on the weather, the horses, the automobiles, the sizzling machinery and the profits of farm work.

Really, though Jennie Woodruff did not see how such things related to school work, Jim Irwin's house was running full blast in west homes of the district and the minds of many pupils weeks and weeks before that day when he called them to order on the Monday specified in his contract as the first day of school.

Con Bonner, who came to see the opening, voiced the sentiments of the older people when he commented on the school as disorderly. To be sure, there were more pupils enrolled than had ever entered on a first day in the whole history of the school, and it was hard to accommodate them all. But the director's criticism was leveled against the preceding day's list of the children. Most of them had brought seed corn and a good-sized corn shov on view. There was much argument as to the merits of the various entries. Instead of a language lesson from the text-book, Jim had given them an exercise based on an examination of the ears of corn.

The number exercises of the little chaps had been worked out with ears and kernels of corn. One class in arithmetic calculated the percentage of inferior kernels at tip and butt to the full-sized grains in the middle of the ear.

All the time, Jim Irwin, awkward and uncouth, clad in his one-too-good Sunday suit and trying to hide his Lincolnian smile, the fact that he was pretty badly frightened and much embarrassed, passed among them, getting them enrolled, setting them to work, wasting much time and labor in a heavy-laden barge in a sea-way.

"That fellini never do," said Bonner to Bronson next day. "Looks like a tramp in the schoolroom." "Wasn't his best, I guess," said Bronson.

"Half the kids call him 'Jim,'" said Bonner.

"That's all right with me," replied Bronson.

"The room was as noisy as a rat

"It would be correlated with rural life. It would get education out of the things the farmers and farmers' wives are interested in as a part of their lives."

Jennie looked serious, after smothering a laugh.

"Jim," said she, "you're going to have a hard enough time of success in the Woodruff school, if you confine yourself to methods that have been tested, and found good."

"But the old methods," urged Jim, "have been tested and found bad. Shall I keep to them?"

"They have made the American people what they are," said Jennie. "Don't be unpatriotic, Jim."

"They have educated our farm children for the cities," said Jim. "This country is losing population. It's the best county in the world."

"Pessimism never wins," said Jennie.

"Neither does blindness," answered Jim. "It is losing the farms their dwellers, and swelling the cities with a proletariat."

"For some time, now, Jim had ceased to hold Jennie's hand; and their sweetheart days had never seemed farther away."

"Jim," said Jennie, "I may be elected to a position in which I shall be obliged to pass on your acts as teacher—in an official way, I mean. I hope they will be justifiable."

Jim smiled his slowest and saddest smile.

"If they're not, I'll not ask you to condone them," said he. "But first

CHAPTER V

The Promotion of Jennie.

If Jennie Woodruff was the cause of Jim Irwin's sudden irruption into the educational field by her scoffing "Hump!" at the idea of a farmland's ever being able to marry, she also gave him the opportunity to knock about the driver of the big motor, and perceptibly elevate himself in the opinion of the neighborhood, while filling his own heart with something like shame.

The first man who had said "Cut it out" to his driver, was Mr. Charles Dilly, a business man in the village at the extreme opposite corner of the square. Mr. Dilly was a candidate for county treasurer, and wished to be nominated at the approaching county election. He expected to use Jennie Woodruff as the idea of a farmland's ever being able to marry, she also gave him the opportunity to knock about the driver of the big motor, and perceptibly elevate himself in the opinion of the neighborhood, while filling his own heart with something like shame.

They met him in the street, and he was just a plain garden or field county superintendent of schools, no better and no worse than the general political run of them, but he had local pride enlisted in his cause, and was a good politician.

Mr. Dilly was in the Woodruff district to build a backbone against this confederation of the county superintendent, and he expected to use Jennie Woodruff to fight it with. That is, while denying that he wished to make any deal or trade—every candidate in every convention always says that—he wished to say to Miss Woodruff and her father, that if Miss Woodruff would permit him to be used for the office of county superintendent of schools, a goodly group of delegates could be selected in the other corner of the county who would be glad to reciprocate any favors Mr. Charles Dilly might receive in the way of votes for county treasurer with bailiwick for Miss Jennie Woodruff for superintendent of schools.

Mr. Dilly never failed to say to Miss Woodruff's abilities as an educator. The words have been heard, and she never asked herself if she knew anything about rural education which especially fitted her for the task. For she was not a popular and successful teacher—and was not that enough? So are the officials chosen by the voters and the education of the farm children of the district.

When Jim Irwin started home from putting out his team the day after his first call on the Simmes family, Jennie was waiting at the gate to be congratulated on her nomination.

"I hope you're elected," Jim said, holding the hand she had extended; "but there's no doubt of that."

"They say not," replied Jennie; "but father believes in working just as if we didn't have a big majority for our ticket. Say a word for me when you get your pastoral rounds."

"All right," said Jim, "what shall I say you'll do for the schools?"

"Why," said Jennie, rather perplexed, "I'll be fair in my examinations of teachers, try to keep out the little birds of the school, and visit schools as often as I can, and—why, what does any good superintendent do?"

"I never heard of a good county superintendent," said Jim.

"Never heard of one—why, Jim Irwin?"

Methodist Brotherhood Met at Jonsville

The semi annual meeting of the Hillsdale County Methodist Brotherhood Association was held at the Jonsville Methodist church Monday evening with some 125 members attending.

A delightful banquet, served by the Jonsville Methodist ladies was held in the church parlors. Rev. W. L. Pickering, pastor of the Jonsville Methodist church, gave the address of welcome. Rev. Ernest Gilford of Pleasant Lake, Ind., was the principal speaker of the evening, with his text, "Christ in Modern Business."

The musical program was furnished by the County Brotherhood chorus, under the direction of Francis T. Perkins. The North Adams quartet also sang several selections.

It was decided last evening that the next meeting of the Association will be held at Frontier during March or April of next year.

New License Plates

A small distribution of 1924 auto license plates have been received by the Branch Office in Hillsdale lately. The plates are nearly twice in size of those used during the past year, approximately double in weight, with black figures on a yellow background.

The office where application for 1924 licenses can be made will open sometime between the 1st and 15th of December.

No license plates can be issued until the applicant presents the certificate of title for the car he desires to license, and the application for registration must fully agree with the certificate of title, as to engine number, serial number, make of car etc.

This year there will be a stamp number—1-24 in the number for Hillsdale county, placed on the face of each title, indicating that a license for 1924 has been issued for this title, and helping to check against crooks who are constantly stealing titles and cars.

There was an unusually good attendance at the Woman's club which was pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Bertha Young Monday afternoon. Roll call was responded to with conundrums after which the following program was given: Paper, "The Automobile Industry," Ruth Durga; paper, "News papers and their Missions," Lizzie Holcomb; music, piano solo, Frances Young; an original story, "All on a Monday morning," Eva Wolcott; music, piano solo, Frances Young. The next meeting will be at the home of Effrieda Calhoun on Monday afternoon, Nov. 19.

Just to show that it pays to ad-

Over at Three Rivers while the congregation of the Baptist church were loudly singing a hymn a young lad lost his balance and fell into dipping tank back of the rostrum which was screened by a curtain.
One of the ushers hearing a splash went over and fished him out, already unconscious. This ended the services for the day.

Proving that he has not lost interest in the old home town and its activities, a gift of three books was received at the library last Saturday from Dr. and Mrs. R.
M. Kempton of Saginaw. Other gifts to the library are three volumes of Michigan Pioneer History from L. V. Harvey and a late book by Harold Bell Wright from Mrs. Josephine Thompson, all of which are very much appreciated.

The condition of our main streets in the village is now ideal and no one can criticize our pavement except as to cost. The whole area which has been graveled seems to have amalgamated down until it is practically one mass of hard as concrete packed by the traffic. In one or two places on East Main street already severe abrasions of wear are showing, and ruts are deep enough to hold water. This matter should be attended to at once, and it is rather discouraging to build so expensive a highway and see it wear out so soon. As we remarked before in five years time the expense of upkeep added to what the road has already cost will be a stunner.

Latest reports from Oklahoma of the Walton-KukLux scrape make quite good reading indeed.
From being a Catholicized and general outlaw Gov. Walton has at last been found to be a member of the Klan, and yet there are people who still yell "Catholic!" with all their lungs. They must have some charge to get the man so they pretend to be trying him for misappropriation of public funds, which probably was never thought of previous to the K. K. outbreak. This country has laid a mighty good foundation for a revolution and it won't be hatched up by the Soviets either. We have a few rats on both sides who are so mean they would let off their own fingers if by so doing they could damage an opponent.

CHEVROLET

Every Farm Needs Two

EVERY farm needs two automobiles, one of which should be a closed model Chevrolet.

The open touring car is best for general farm use, carrying passengers or perhaps miscellaneous bulky produce or merchandise, but for cold or rainy weather, and for church or social use the family needs a closed car, either a 5-passenger Utility Coupé as illustrated, or the 5-passenger Sedan. The extra large rear compartment is a feature of the Coupé.

These closed cars are very finely made, furnished, upholstered and trimmed. The windows are of plate glass and can be lowered, providing as much air as an open car, yet affording full protection against wind, rain, snow or cold when raised. With a second car on a farm, one is always available for those at home when the other car is out.

The low price of Chevrolet make the ownership of two cars feasible for most farm families.

FIRST U. S. MILITARY MEDAL

Government Gen. George Washington Decoration to Commemorate Evacuation of Boston.

The first military medal ever bestowed by the American government was one in gold to Gen. George Washington, to commemorate the evacuation of Boston by the British in 1776. Capt. Paul Jones was similarly rewarded after his famous fight with the "Serapis" in 1779, and the three men, Paulding, Williams and Van Wart, who captured Maj. John Andre in 1780, were given special medals by congress.

The first decoration, and so far as Col. Robert E. Wylie of the general staff of the U. S. A., and author of a work on military and civil orders, decorations and insignia, has been able to discover, which had a general application to enlisted men, was the result of an order issued in 1782 by General Washington. A soldier who wore on his facings, over his left breast, the figure of a laurel in purple cloth or silk, edged with narrow lace or binding, of Hessian News.

WIDENS MARKET FOR MEAT

United States Department of Agriculture Gives Hog Raisers Additional Outlet.

A wider market for United States meats, particularly pork, has been made available by the efforts of the United States Department of Agriculture and the State Department, the most recent evidence of it being the opening of The Netherlands to shipments of fresh pork. This new market, with the English market, which was opened to the same products about 18 months ago, now gives hog raisers a considerable additional outlet at a time when production is at a high point.

"JIM IRWIN, SPEECH"

SYNOPSIS—Jennie Woodruff refuses to marry Jim Irwin, young farm hand, because of his financial condition and poor prospects. He is intellectually above station, and has advanced ideas concerning the possibilities of school teaching as a profession, for which he is ridiculed by many. In short, Jim is an off ox. He books by himself and reads books and has a philosophy of his own. But there are latent powers in him unsuspected even by himself and opportunity comes knocking at his door. Jim is nominated for school teacher, as John J. the joke results in his election. He visits his scholars. Jennie is nominated for county superintendent of schools.

CHAPTER VI

Jim Talks the Weather Cold. "Going to the rally, James?"

Jim had finished his supper, and returned for a long evening in his attic den with the clock. But as the district schoolmaster he was to some extent responsible for the protection of the school property, and felt some sense of duty as to exhibiting an interest in public affairs.

"I guess I'll have to go, mother," he replied regretfully. "I want to see Mr. Woodruff about borrowing his Babcock milk tester, and I'll go that way. I guess I'll go on to the meeting."

He kissed his mother when he went a habit from which he never deviated, and another of those personal peculiarities which had marked him as different from the other boys of the neighborhood. His mother urged his overcoat upon him in vain—for Jim's overcoat was distinctly a bad one, while his best suit, now worn every day as a concession to his scholastic position, still looked passably well after several weeks of schoolroom duty.

It seemed more logical to assume that the weather was milder than it really was, on that sharp October evening, and appear at his best, rather than aware of the cold. Jennie was at home, and he was likely to see and be seen of her.

"You can borrow my tester," said the colonel, "and the cows that go with it. If you can use 'em. They ain't earning their keep here. But how does the milk testing fit into the curriculum of the school? A decoration?"

"We want to make a few tests of the cows in the neighborhood," answered Jim. "Just another of my fool notions."

"All right," said the colonel. "Take 'em along. Going to the speaker?"

"Certainly, he's going," said Jennie, entering. "I'm going meeting Jim."

"And I think I'll go along," said Jim.

"I wish we had room for you in the car," said the colonel. "But I'm going around by road to pick up the speaker, and I'll have a chop load."

"Not so much of a load as you think," said Jim, "going with Jim. The walk will do me good."

Any candidate warm to her voting population just before election; but Jennie had a special kindness for Jim. He was no longer a farm hand. The fact that he was coming to be a center of disturbance in the district, and that she quite failed to understand how his eccentric behavior could be harmonized with those principles of teaching which she had imbibed at the state normal school, in itself lifted him nearer to equality with her. A public nuisance is really more respectable than a nonentity.

She gave Jim a thrill as she passed through the gate that he opened for her. White moonlight on her white face suggested purity, exaltation, the essence of womanhood—things far finer in the woman of twenty-seven than the glamour thrown over him by the school girl of fifteen.

Jim gave her no thrill; for he looked gaunt and angular in his skimpy, ready-made suit, too short in legs and sleeves, and too thin for the season. Yet, as they walked along, Jim grew upon her. He strode on with immense strides, made slow to accommodate her shorter pace, and embarrassing her by his entire absence of effort to keep step. For all that, he lifted his face to the stars, and she noted out the great open spaces in the Milky Way, wondering at their emptiness and at the fact that no telescope can find stars in them.

They stopped and looked. Jim laid his hand on the shoulders of her white fur collar.

"What's the use of political meetings," said Jim, "when you can stand here and think of our way out, even beyond the limits of our universe?"

"A wonderful journey," said she, not quite understanding his mood, "but while we roam beyond the Milky Way we aren't getting any votes for me, to county superintendent."

Jim said nothing. He was quite established on the earth.

"Don't you want me to be elected, Jim?"

Jim seemed to ponder this for some time—a period of taking the matter under advisement which caused Jennie to drop his arm and busy herself with her skirts.

"Yes," said Jim, at last; "of course I do."

Nothing more was said until they reached the schoolhouse door.

"Well," said Jennie rather indignantly, "I'm glad you're interested in voters who are more enthusiastic about me than you seem to be."

More interesting to a keen observer than the speech was the peculiar things in the room itself. On the blackboards, with problems in arithmetic, metic, were calculations as to the feeding value of various rations for live stock, records of laying hens and computation as to the excess of value in eggs produced over the cost of feed.

Pinned to the walls were market reports on all sorts of farm products, and especially numerous were the statistics on the prices of cream and butter. There were files of farm papers piled about, and racks of agricultural bulletins. In one corner of the room was a typewriting machine, and in another a sewing machine. Parts of an old telephone were scattered about on the teacher's desk. A model of a piggy bank stood on a shelf, done in cardboard.

Instead of the usual collection of text-books in the desk, there were hectograph copies of exercises, reading lessons, arithmetical tables and essays on various matters relating to agriculture, all of which were accounted for by two or three hand-made hectographs—a very fair sort of printing plant—lying on a table.

The members of the school board were there, looking on these evidences of innovation with wonder and more or less disfavor. Things were disordered by the text-books recently adopted by the board against some popular protest had evidently been pitched, neck and crop, out of the school by the man whom Bonner had termed a heretic. It was a sort of contempt for the powers that be.

Colonel Woodruff was in the chair. After the specifying was over, and the stereotyped, though rather illegal, appeal had been made for voters

Frank Merrill and Deadshot Dick of the one party to cast the straight ticket, and for those of the other faction, to scratch the colonel rose to adjourn the meeting.

Newton Bronson, safely concealed behind taller people, called out, "Jim Irwin's speech!"

There was a giggle, a slight sensation, and many voices joined in the call for the new schoolmaster.

Colonel Woodruff, for the unwisdom of ignoring the demand, Probably he relied upon Jim's discretion and expected a declination.

Jim arose, steady and lank, and the voices ceased, save for another suppressed titter.

"I don't know," said Jim, "whether this call upon me is a joke or not. If it is, it isn't a practical one, for I can't talk. I don't care much about parties or politics. I don't know whether I'm a democrat, a Republican or a Populist."

This caused a rare sensation. The nerve of the fellow! Really, it must be justice he said, Jim was losing himself in a desire to tell his true feelings. He forgot all about Jennie and her candidacy—about everything except his real, true feelings. This proves that he was no politician.

"I don't see much in this county campaign that interests me," he went on—and Jennie Woodruff reddened while her seasoned father covered his mouth with his hand to conceal a smile. "The politicians come out into the farming districts every campaign and get us hayseeds for anything they want. They always have got us. They've got us again. They give us clodhoppers the glad hand, a cheap cigar, and a cheaper smile after election; and that's all. I know it, you know it, and you know it. I don't blame them so very much. The trouble is we don't ask them to do anything better."

"I want a new kind of rural school; but I don't see any prospect, no change like this election goes, for anything in them. We in the Woodruff district will have to work out our own salvation. Our political ring never'll do anything but the old things. They don't want to, and they haven't sense enough to do it if they did. That's all—and I don't suppose I should have said as much as I have."

There was a stark silence for a moment when he sat down, and then as many cheers for Jim as for the principal speaker of the evening, cheers mingled with titters and catcalls. Jim felt as if he had made an ass of himself. And as he walked out of the door, the future county superintendent, who had been in high displeasure, and walked home with someone else.

Jim found the weather much colder than it had been while coming. He really needed an Eskimo's fur suit.

CHAPTER VII

New Wine and Old Bottles. In the little strip of forest which divided the sown from the sown wandered two boys in earnest converse. They seemed to be Boy Trappers, and from their backlands of steel-traps one of them might have been Frank Merrill, and the other Deadshot Dick. The boy who resembled Frank Merrill was Raymond Simms. The other, whose overalls were fringed, who wore a cartridge belt about his person, and carried hatchet, revolver, and a long knife with a deerfoot handle, who was studiously looking like Deadshot Dick, was our old friend of the road gang, Newton Bronson. Newton put down his hand, and set upon a stump to rest.

Raymond Simms was dimly conscious of a change in Newton since the day when they met and helped select Colonel Woodruff's next year's seed corn. Newton's mother had a mother's confidence that Newton was now a good boy, who had been led astray by other boys, but had reformed. Jim Irwin had a distinct feeling of optimism. Newton had quit tobacco and beer, usually stating to Jim that he was "in training." Since Jim had shown his ability to administer a knockout to that angry chauffer, and his own hobby, delay peculiarly a proper person for athletic confidences.

Newton's mind seemed gradually filling up with new ideas. He attributed much of this to the clear mountain atmosphere which surrounded Raymond Simms, the ignorant barbarian, driven out of his native hills by a feud. Raymond was of the open spaces, and refused to hear feld things that seemed out of place in them.

As the reason for Newton's improvement in manner of living, Raymond, out of his own experience, would have had no hesitation in naming the school and the schoolmaster.

"I wouldn't go back on a friend," said Newton, seated on the stump with his traps on the ground at his feet, "the way you're going back on me."

"You got no call to talk thataway," replied the mountain boy. "How'd I go back on you?"

"We was got to 'trap all winter,' accursed Newton, and next winter we were got to go in the north woods together."

"You know," said Raymond soberly, "that we can't run any trap line and do what we got to do to help Mr. Jim."

Newton sat mute as one having no rejoinder.

"Mr. Jim," went on Raymond, "needs all the help every kid in this settlement can give him. He's the best friend I ever had. I'm a poor ignorant boy, an' he teaches me how to do things that will make me something."

"You know," said Raymond, "that you'd think mahogany small of me, if I'd desert Mr. Jim Irwin."

"Well, then," replied Newton, seizing his traps and throwing them across his shoulder, "come on with the traps, and shut up! Whar'll we do when the school board gets Jennie Woodruff to revoke his certificate and make him quit teaching, hey?"

"Nobody'll ever do that," said Raymond. "I'd see in the schoolhouse air with my rifle and shoot anybody that'd come to 'thow Mr. Jim out the school."

"Not in this country," said Newton. "But it orto be either a justice keepin', or a gun keepin'," replied the mountain boy. "It stands to reason it must be one 'r the other, Newton."

"No, it don't neither," said Newton dogmatically.

"Why should they 'thow Mr. Jim out the school?" inquired Raymond. "Ain't he teachin' us right?"

"Yenne, this man Jim Irwin needs to be lined up."

RED HAIR IN MEN AND WOMEN

Altogether Charming on the Fair Sex. Says Writer, but Seldom on the Sterner.

An English writer has recorded the following observations about red hair: "With apologies to any male friends of mine (I cannot remember any) who may have been entitled to the name of Rufus, I am bound to say that I never knew any man who would not have looked better with hair of any other color," says Prof. Saintsbury in "A Scrap Book."

"On the other hand, red hair in girls and women is often a thing much more often than not—perfectly charming. Break-down red, with no gloss, is ugly enough, no doubt; but then all half—except a very becoming black—requires gloss. Every other shade, from the lightest auburn to the darkest auburn chestnut, can be borne with grace, and, long before it, the Greeks. The Romans were not like red hair, but the Romans were people of very doubtful taste in many points of esthetics."

There's All the Difference. Reading the silly magazines as one does on vacation, we meet the best just now is articles by husband on "How My Wife Has Hindered My Career." You don't see women beating their heads against the vacuum of life. Why? They are the practical sex. When a woman finds her husband a hindrance she doesn't talk. She acts.—Chicago News.

The average man is charitable to ward all women except his wife.

We Miss Him You!

What has become of the oldest resident who used to predict a light winter from the signs? Well, he has gone the long, long trail, at least not much of that prophesy business is heard now-days about the absence or the abundance of nuts or the thick fur on the rabbit's back or any of these old familiar sayings with which we were formerly clothed. Of course the old pioneers are passing (peace to their ashes) and soon there'll not be much to remind us of the early days of Michigan. We used to know an old settler who generally made his observations something like this: "Forty years ago to-day it snowed on the unpicked apples, then it froze but the snow protected the fruit and, within a couple of days we picked the finest crop of apples in our recollection" etc., etc. How these old men could exactly fix the date of so many happenings we fail to understand, but they did. This fall as yet we have not heard a single guess as to what the winter was going to be, but all take it for granted there'll be enough cold weather.

We are in receipt of the Onsted Outline published at Onsted by Rev. Ellsworth Abel Selah Allen. This is Vol. I No. 1 and consists of six columns eight pages. Onsted after having been without a paper for some time can probably appreciate the efforts of Rev. Allen and will make it worth while.

R. Dean Williams and family who have been residing at Cleveland, O. for some time where Mr. Williams has managed the marketing of the Greendale products, manufactured here, have returned to North Adams on account of selling out the Greendale business in Cleveland. They will reside here the coming winter while Mr. Williams will probably be in Lansing much of the time.

Operations have begun on the North Adams Drain for the purpose of taking care of the water which usually settles on the Congregation at church yard and adjoining lots. The job of construction was let to Wyman Stott of this place and work will be pushed to completion. A catch basin has already been excavated in front of the Grange Hall. The course of the drain determined upon will pass along the east side of E. S. Knowles yard thence to the street and in front of the lots of Grange Hall, Mrs. Edna Hewitt, Forrest Weaver and Will Barker. It is estimated the cost will be some where between $500 and $700 of which the taxpayers must stand one half of one percent.

Obituary

Helen Foote Collins was born February 29, 1842 in Adams township, Hillsdale county, Mich. She was the daughter of James and Harriet Foote, being the third in a family of ten. She was married May 6, 1863, to Norman R. Collins of Adams. To them were born four children, a son, Elmer who died at the age of eleven and three daughters who are all living.

The greater part of their married life was spent at the farm home in Wheatland township, Hillsdale county. After leaving the farm they lived for a few years in North Adams until six or seven years ago when they moved to Homer.

After 58 years of married life their home was broken up by the death of the husband who passed away October 20, 1921.

Since that time Mrs. Collins has made her home with her daughter, Mrs. Deming, by whom she has been most tenderly cared for in her failing health.

On Friday evening, Nov. 16, 1922, the flame of life which had burned so feebly during the past days flickered and went out.

She was a faithful member of the Methodist Episcopal church at Homer. She was a true christian woman, always brave and cheerful in spite of frail health, a most self-sacrificing devoted mother. Truly "her children will rise up and call her blessed."

She is survived by her three daughters, Mrs. F. E. Deming of Homer, Mrs. V. G. Lamb of Warsaw Indiana and Mrs. M. E. Tripp of Hudson also 7 grand-children, all her brothers and sisters having preceded her to the Great Beyond.

The funeral services were held at the home Monday at 11:00 a. m. Rev. W. P. Manning of Bronson a friend and former pastor, officiated, assisted by J. J. Colby of Homer. The burial was at the North Adams cemetery where a short service was held, many of the old friends and neighbors of the deceased being present.

Those from away who attended the services were Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Lamb of Warsaw, Indiana, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Tripp of Hud-

Death of Hiram Cole

Hiram Cole, an old resident of North Adams who has been suffering with rheumatism for three years who recently went to Detroit to reside with his daughter and family, died quite suddenly Sunday evening about 8:00. He had been feeling unusually well on the day preceding his death, but on getting to his room to retire he experienced within fifteen minutes, probably from rheumatism of the heart.

Mr. Cole had resided in his home here 42 years and was 78 years of age, a veteran of the Civil war and highly respected by all who knew him. He had been honored with township offices.

He leaves to mourn his wife, his daughter, Mrs. Henry Bernhardt, who has resided in Detroit for a number of years, and a grand-daughter.

Funeral services were held at the home of his daughter at 2:00 p. m. Tuesday, Nov. 20, and interment was at Detroit. Mr. Cole will be remembered here for his kindly genial disposition and neighborly acts and will be greatly missed by his numerous friends as well as a host of relative and friends.

India Wants Catnip Lure to Aid War on Cat Family

The catnip lure developed by the United States department of agriculture to help in trapping predatory animals of the cat kind has been heard of on the other side of the world. Evidence of this is a request from Highclere, Kodakmal Madura District, India, in the writer, after reading an article on trapping animals in an American magazine, asks for the best formula for making a lure for attracting members of the cat family, which are plentiful in his neighborhood.

The Biological Survey of the department developed this lure a number of months ago and is now using it extensively in the Western states in trapping cougars and bobcats, which prey on livestock and game.

BEAUTY OF GRATITUDE
By FRANK HERBERT SWEET

THANKSGIVING DAY should be the keynote of the year. No one is really thankful who is not really happy.

Praise spoken by the lips is very faint and hollow unless the heart re-echoes it.

Thanksgiving is a home day. The young person who accepts the invitation of friends to a form of merry-making which takes one from the family circle makes a mistake. There are enough days in the year for the ordinary good times. Save Thanksgiving for the home folks.

The girl or boy who looks on thankfulness as a duty is not likely to make much of a success of it. The beauty of gratitude is that it should be spontaneous, bubbling up from the heart like a spring, not pumped up to the surface with an effort that leaves one out of breath.

Protesting against the drawback provision in the Fordney-McCumber law and urging the enactment of that in the Dingley law, the Palm law and the Underwood law, in many instances are thoughtlessly carrying heavy burdens of mercantile credit. The cost to farmers of merchant credit often runs as high as 50 per cent annually. The United States Department of Agriculture has made surveys of credit and insurance conditions in North Carolina, in which eight hundred farmers were interviewed, and which showed that 425 were relying on merchant credit. The average cost was 26.5 per cent, figured annually. The average rate paid by white farmers was 21.5 per cent, while that for the colored was 32.3 per cent. This difference is attributed to the smaller average amount of credit used by the colored farmers, the greater risk involved in credit to them and to an inclination to take advantage of the less fortunate class.

MERCHANT CREDIT EXPENSIVE

Investigations indicate that farmers may be materially benefited by demonstrating to them the losses they incur through the use of merchant credit instead of bank credit. In conferences arranged by the Agricultural Commission, American Bankers Association, it has frequently developed that farmers in many instances are thoughtlessly carrying heavy burdens of mercantile credit. The cost to farmers of merchant credit often runs as high as 50 per cent annually. Widow Gets Husband by an Odd Proposal

Chicago—Mrs. Leo Garfinkle got a husband the other day by a sly hint to William Printer, proprietor of a cafe. "Why don't you get married again?" she asked Printer. "I have a good woman for you. I will arrange a meeting." "No, thanks," said Printer. "She might not be my style. Now if she were you—yes, that would be different." They were married a few days later.

A sad accident happened near Osseo on the farm of Elmer Hammond last week Tuesday when Arthur Cobb lost his arm by means of a corn shredder. The arm was so badly mangled it had to be amputated at the Hillsdale hospital a little later. He was 48 years of age and his chances of recovery are considered good.

A bill has been prepared by Congressmen at Washington and it is claimed with the approval of President Coolidge, to raise Civil War pensions from $50 to $75 per month and widows from $30 to $50. Most of the oldest pensioners of the late Bureau bill which President Harding vetoed, have been eliminated.

There is quite a difference of opinion in regard to the necessity or advisability of a Ku Klux organization in this community. So far as has been made public nothing has appeared that would keep out any good citizen barring perhaps Catholics, Jews and colored men. With these out the question arises, is it necessary for the others to join this secret order to become 100 per cent Americans.—Jonestville Independent.

The W. F. M. S. of the Methodist church will be held in the church parlors Dec. 5th. T. C. Ross and wife of Coopers-town, North Dakota, are spending a few days in North Adams with Alfred Relyea and wife. Mr. Ross says it has been 48 years since he left this village and landed in Dakota, having resided in Union City Mich., just before going west. The changes here are very noticeable. He is somewhat surprised to find a number of citizens here whom he knows. He remarked that he supposed he would recognize Buck's Hill out west but he actually passed without recognizing the locality so greatly has it changed. He says from the Jane Smith property on West Main at that time to the railroad there was not a house. John Lane's mill was running and a number of residences both east and west have been constructed since. He was a student of the high school and he used to help Gabe's house charge the soda fountain when John was a baby.

They also have installed a Coil and Plug Tester that auto owners will find is very handy.

A late report says that there is a scrap on between the State of Michigan and a man named Marr, in front of whose house the Indian bones were recently unearthed on the "turnpike" east of Cambridge, Marr says the relics belong to him so as he pleases with but the authorities think differently and as we understand it, they are trying to bunco him out of the collection with an eye to presenting them to the University of Michigan.

Saturday Evening Movies

The subject of the movies next Saturday evening Dec. 1, will be "The Little Rebel" from the Edward Pelepe stage success. E. K. Lincoln in the leading role is very interesting. This play is a gripping one and concerns the fortunes of a family of the South in our late war of the Rebellion, around which glamour hangs. The "Little Rebel" in the person of Virgie Cary, won the admiration of the commanding general of the Northern forces and saved her father from an ignominious death. However, this picture is not really a war picture but keeps us in the background and portrays incidents connected with the great struggle between North and South, always keeping the figure of a little child in the foreground. Dramatic, pathetic and entertaining.

In connection there will be a two reel comedy. Two Shows, first one beginning at 6:15 p. m. last one at 8:00. With 2 adult tickets 2 child's tickets free.

Letter From U. H. Filio

From our former townsman, U. H. Filio, now of Seattle, Washington, comes the following cheerful letter and we think it well worth publishing so our citizens can see what they think of us out on the Pacific coast. Mr. Filio has been a well wisher of the editor for many years and a subscriber to the Advocate always, and he voices his approval in the following words: "Dear Friend:—Having inquired of Mrs. Filio for recent copies of the Advocate, she informs me that my subscription has expired, so please find enclosed a p. o. m. or order for two dollars for renewing same."

The news of the Advocate is like a letter from home, and the fight you made to rebuild your business, after your loss by fire, should command the sympathy of your friends and the respect of your enemies. Your accomplishment of reconstructing your plant without the loss of a single issue, should prove to the people of your community that difficulties are only made to overcome, and that misfortunes are but stepping stones to further effort. Wishing you the best of success in the future I remain, Sincerely yours, U. H. Filio"

Death of Mrs. F. W. Stock

Mrs. F. W. Stock, widow of the late Frederick W. Stock, wealthy miller of Hillsdale, passed away at her home Saturday last after an illness covering several weeks. She was noted for her benevolence in and about Hillsdale and will be sincerely mourned by large numbers of people not only in Hillsdale, but the country round about.

She was 83 years of age, born in Germany, of a family of 15 children and the mother of eight children. She had been a resident of Hillsdale 54 years and was lauded especially among the poorer class whom she constantly aided.

Funeral services were held from the palatial home Tuesday at 2:30 p. m., Rev. J. W. Will officiating, and interment was in Oak Grove cemetery.

The Stock family means much to the city, and in fact the entire county, coming as they did in 1869, purchasing a run-down mill property of no importance and building it up to the top notch of business enterprise, also establishing mills in other towns. The fame of the Stock Mills reaches across the Atlantic, cargoes of flour going to England and Europe. The affairs of the mill Mrs. Stock personally managed up to a few weeks of her death.

The shrewd business policies of her late husband she carried out to the fullest extent, leaving a monumental enterprise to the care of sons grown gray in the work.

A. J. Hoffman Retires From Banking

At a meeting of the directors of the Citizens Bank, held Wednesday, Nov. 21, A. J. Hoffman tendered his resignation as Cashier, to take effect Jan. 1, 1924. Mr. Hoffman has been connected with the bank almost since its inception in 1905, serving as assistant under R. C. Cummings, and being elected cashier in 1911. The announcement did not come as a surprise to the bank officials as Mr. Hoffman's desire to be relieved of his banking duties has been known to them for some time. The newly elected cashier is William Owens who also takes over Mr. Hoffman's interest in the bank. Mr. Owens is very well and favorably known in this locality, having served as assistant cashier of the bank some ten years ago. Since that time he has held a highly responsible position as cashier for a Detroit newspaper. Officials of the bank are confident that they are placing the management of the institution in capable hands, and that the very high standing that the bank has enjoyed for many years will be maintained. Grace Doolittle will continue as assistant cashier which will meet with general approval. Mr. Hoffman will devote all his time to general construction work, having over $600,000.00 in contracts. His office will be at Lansing.

FRANK IS CHEERFUL IN SPITE OF TUBERCULOSIS

CHRISTMAS SEALS SPELL RELIEF FROM UNNECESSARY SUFFERING SO FRANK SMILES

Rest and heliotherapy (sun cure) constitute the treatment that the doctors at the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Howell have prescribed for Frank.

—typical eight year old American boy, is spite of his misfortunes, may always be found with beaming eyes and round cheeks upland in a good-natured grin.

A few years ago Frank went out to play on the ice. For a time he felt the tingle of healthful activity—he then he slipped and fell. He has tuberculosis of the hip with a discharging sinus in the groin.

Christmas seals fight tuberculosis. Buy them. Give Health.

But the lad is cheerful for thousands of Michigan's residents have in years past bought the Christmas seals that have helped to make possible the care he has had. Perhaps some day Frank will get well. Then he too will buy seals in order to help other victims of tuberculosis.

Spine and Lungs of Boy Affected By Tuberculosis

TOMMY TAKES A SUN BATH

"Back to nature" is Tommy's slogan as he sits in the open air at the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium at Howell. He is taking the sun cure for tuberculosis of the spine and lungs.

Tommy has bone tuberculosis. His head is sunken between his shoulders and his twisted body is crooked for all time. But Tommy is a plucky little fellow. As he sits in the sunlight with his companions—there are many children at the sanatorium in an almost similar condition—he gazes first into the sun and then his gaze falls on his companions—either or both have any promise for him.

How the Seals Help. Forty-two million Christmas seals are now on sale in the state of Michigan. Every seal that is sold is a blow against the disease that has injured Tommy's life and that killed 2,654 Michigan people last year. Everyone cannot take an active part in the fight against the "Great White Plague," but everyone can buy seals.

Standard Varieties of Our American Chickens

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
The standard varieties of chickens belonging to the American class are described in detail in a recent revision of one of the series of bulletins by the United States Department of Agriculture under the general title, Standard Varieties of Chickens. The breeds now classed as American are the Plymouth Rock, Wyandotte, Java, Dominique, Rhode Island Red, Rhode Island White, Buckeye, Jersey Black Giant, and Chantecler. These several breeds are commonly called general purpose fowls as they are usually good egg producers and yield carcasses well suited to the table. They are especially well suited for farm flocks and include some of the most popular varieties in the country. Birds of this type are in great favor with poultry packers. They lay brown-shelled eggs and have yellow skins.

Size most of these breeds are intermediate between the smaller egg breeds, such as the Leghorns, and the larger meat breeds, such as the Brahmas, Jersey Black Giants, however, are about as large as the meat breeds. Most of these American breeds are less active than the strictly egg breeds, but they are more active than the heavy kinds and are good foragers.

The Chantecler, which is a recent addition to the Standard, is well adapted to extremely cold regions because of its small comb and wattles and its heavy, closely feathered plumage.

Copies of this Farmers' Bulletin 1347 may be obtained without charge as long as the supply lasts, by addressing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Trace Poultry Diseases to Damppness in Houses
As winter approaches more trouble will be experienced in the health of the fowls than during the summer months. It is true that the poultry chicks are often overworked with bowel trouble and diarrhea, by cold, dampness and poor feeding. Really leggy chicks are a source in many poultry yards, can be traced absolutely to damp quarters and neglect. Koup, cancer, consumption and other diseases, all be traced to dampness. Cold draughts blowing through the houses and unnatural exposure to inclement weather. Nothing causes the ailments as quickly as damp, unhealthy poultry houses in which the fowls are compelled to stay.

Impaired, cancer and roup are all kindred diseases, which can directly be blamed upon those having charge of the fowls. If the birds have comfortable quarters, properly ventilated, with sanitary conditions, there is little danger of these ailments, unless they are caught by coming in contact with other ill birds. Rheumatism, gout and leg weakness are usually blameable upon hereditary conditions, inbreeding or unhealthy, damp quarters.

Poor Ventilation Will Weaken Poultry Flock
Give the layers the same air they would get if they were roosting out in the trees, but protect them from the cold.

Too low houses or restricted roosting quarters are liable to limit the amount of pure air as well as cause the birds to breathe in the fowl air. It is well to consider this in the use of cloth curtains for the roosting quarters.

Disease and weakness follow in the wake of impure air. That means the vitality of the laying stock will be lowered, which, in turn, diminishes the normal egg yield.

MUST HAVE GOOD MEMORY
Checker of Hate in Hotel Can Give No Adequate Explanation of His Power.

The checkers of hats in large hotels have remarkable memories. Doubtless many young men were employed and discharged before one was found who could learn to take 300 hats from men to the tables. They are especially well suited for farm flocks and include some of the most popular varieties in the country.

Conversations with those who display this wonderful and peculiar memory has always brought essentially the same reply. They have no system. They talk vaguely about something which, in psychological language is association between the appearance of the hat and the face of the owner—Serlin's Magazine.

Punished.
Jones was walking along the street, wearing a very high expression on his usually cheerful countenance, when he was accosted by his friend Brown.

"Hello, old man," exclaimed the latter. "You're looking very down in the mouth. What's the matter?"

"Yesterday," said Jones, "I refused a poor woman a request for a loan and in consequence of my act, I passed a sleepless night. The tones of her voice were ringing in my ears the whole evening."

"Your softness of heart does you credit," said Brown. "Who was the woman?"

"My wife," was the sad reply.

Feed the Brute.
"You can generally reach a man's heart through his vanity."
"Yes, or by feeding his vanity."

What's the Verdict?
The test of a mealtime drink is not alone how it tastes, but also what it does. Many a coffee-user finds wakefulness and restlessness after drinking coffee with the evening meal—and other health-disturbances follow on.

There's double pleasure and benefit in Postum; delightful taste, complete satisfaction, and agreeable friendship with nerves and health.

There's charm without harm in Postum. Let a ten-days' trial of Postum instead of coffee show you the marked improvement in health and comfort which so many others have found.

Sold by grocers everywhere!
Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tin) prepared simply by the cup with the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling for fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

Punished.
Jones was walking along the street, wearing a very high expression on his usually cheerful countenance, when he was accosted by his friend Brown.

"Hello, old man," exclaimed the latter. "You're looking very down in the mouth. What's the matter?"

"Yesterday," said Jones, "I refused a poor woman a request for a loan and in consequence of my act, I passed a sleepless night. The tones of her voice were ringing in my ears the whole evening."

"Your softness of heart does you credit," said Brown. "Who was the woman?"

"My wife," was the sad reply.

Feed the Brute.
"You can generally reach a man's heart through his vanity."
"Yes, or by feeding his vanity."

What's the Verdict?
The test of a mealtime drink is not alone how it tastes, but also what it does. Many a coffee-user finds wakefulness and restlessness after drinking coffee with the evening meal—and other health-disturbances follow on.

There's double pleasure and benefit in Postum; delightful taste, complete satisfaction, and agreeable friendship with nerves and health.

There's charm without harm in Postum. Let a ten-days' trial of Postum instead of coffee show you the marked improvement in health and comfort which so many others have found.

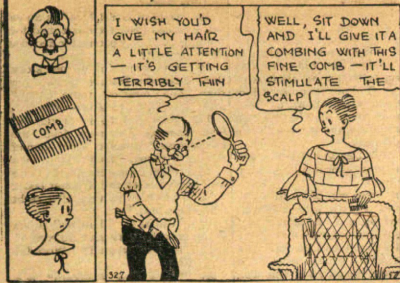

Sold by grocers everywhere!
Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tin) prepared simply by the cup with the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling for fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

State Cows to Have Own Roll of Honor

Michigan's best dairy cows are to have an honor roll of their own, membership based on actual production figures, under a new record of performance certificate plan being established by the dairy extension division of the Michigan Agricultural College in connection with the Michigan Farming association work in the state.

Cows awarded the certificate will be a select lot, earning the honor only after checking in a high official butterfat production record. All cows enrolled in the official cow testing associations of the state will be eligible to compete for the honor roll, but is estimated that only about twenty per cent of this number will be able to establish high enough marks to win the certificates.

Requirements for admission to the Record of Performance will be as follows: Heifers calving under three years old, 280 pounds of butterfat or more in the year; cows calving under four years old, 310 pounds or more; under five years old, 345 pounds; and five years old or older, 385 pounds.

In addition to the individual certificates, a year book will be published giving records of all "certificate" cows for that year. This will serve as a "blue book" of the best animals in Michigan cow testing as a source of information.

The Record of Performance will be supervised and controlled by the dairy extension division of M. A. C., as part of the organized cow testing association work in the state. Seventy of these associations are active in the state at the present time, with prospects that the number will exceed 100 by next spring.

Cows Need Rations When Pasture Fails

That supplementary feeding in the fall, to make up for failure of pastures to maintain a sufficient supply of milk producing food, is an important factor in dairy farm management, is the opinion of O. E. Reed, head of the dairy department at the Michigan Agricultural College.

"Dairy cows begin to slacken up in their milk production at this season of the year," says Professor Reed. "This is due to the fact that pastures no longer furnish a sufficient amount of feed."

"The remedy is supplementary feeding with a sufficient amount of other food of similar feeding value. All too often this remedy is not applied in time to check the decline, and the dairyman finds his cream check shrinking alarmingly."

"Good pasture is a balanced ration for the average cow, but when the pasture season is over a balanced ration must be fed if their milk flow is to be kept up. The kinds and amounts of grain fed to a cow will depend entirely upon the kind of hay and roughage fed."

"The following are two rations that will furnish a sufficient amount of nutriment for a day for a 1,000 pound cow that is producing 30 pounds (14 quarts) of average milk per day: (1) alfalfa 10 lbs., silage 35 lbs., corn or barley 4 lbs., ground oats 1 lb., cottonseed meal 1 lb., and total grain 6 lbs. (2) timothy hay 10 lbs., silage 35 lbs., corn or barley 4 lbs., ground oats 4 lbs., cottonseed meal 2 lbs., oil meal 2 lbs., and total grain 12 lbs.

Further information of dairy rations may be had by writing to Prof. O. E. Reed, M. A. C. dairy department, East Lansing, Mich.

Michigan Farmers Establish a Co-op Bean Picking Plant

Farmers Co-operative elevators affiliated with the Michigan Elevator Exchange have established their own bean picking plant at Port Huron. The organization of the new firm which is called the Michex Elevator and Warehouse Company, means that growers and local elevators who in the past have been entirely without picking facilities will no longer be left at the mercy of the old dealers and speculators.

A special meeting of the directors of the Michigan Elevator Exchange a central state-wide organization offering an expert sales service to more than 150 local co-operative elevators in Michigan was held at Port Huron Nov. 22. At this meeting the new bean picking company was organized and plans made which makes it possible to start actual business December 1.

PICKED EXPERIENCED MEN Experienced elevator men and bean dealers have been chosen to head this new venture in bean marketing. H. Horton, manager of the Kinde Co-operative Elevator, was chosen president. C. S. Benton, manager of the Michigan Elevator Exchange, vice president and general manager, and Neil Bass, grain salesman for the Michigan Elevator Exchange, was chosen secretary-treasurer.

They have leased a splendidly equipped elevator at Port Huron 130 cars of beans will be picked during the next 90 days, and this plant has a storage capacity of 60,000 bushels. An additional 10 or 15 carsload can be stored in the warehouse.

Every facility is installed in the plant for the economical and efficient handling and picking of beans. The equipment includes automatic loaders, a judson picker, three giant pickers, a polisher, a big dryer, and 100 hand picking machines, to put on the final touches to the picking operations.

BANKS CO-OPERATE

Financial backing for the handling of 20 or more cars of beans at once on negotiable warehouse receipts has been assured by co-operating banks. In order to comply with the regulations regarding bonded warehouses an official custodian has been selected. The man chosen for this important position is Milton Burkholder who has been granted a leave of absence from his position as manager of the Marlette Co-operative Elevator. Mr. Burkholder has had 21 years of experience as an elevator and is especially well qualified to make a success of his new duties.

American Tobacco Taste

The American appetite for tobacco continues to turn in the direction of the cigarette, according to figures made public recently by the internal revenue bureau, which disclosed that taxes were paid on 5,839,707,747 cigarettes during July, an increase over July of last year of almost six hundred millions.

As for cigars, taxes were paid in July on 589,176,020 large and 42,341,000 small ones, the combined total being about 9,000,000 more than the number taxed in July, 1922. The internal revenue bureau again takes the pulse of the nation in regard to its appetite. It discovers an increasing gnawing of desire for the cigarette the most conspicuous element there. This vile weed is not only destructive to health and morals, but is actually a curse to the land that bears it. This is known in Virginia, Maryland and Connecticut where it is grown. The tobacco crop exhausts the soil even when fertilizer is used. "Nature resents the perversion and misuse of its powers. Tobacco becomes a besom of destruction to a once fertile valley."

Fires originating from smoking are said to cost America a billion dollars a year. Nicotine is next to prussic acid, the worst poison in existence. One pound of tobacco is said to have enough nicotine in it to kill three hundred men.

This increasing appetite is an abnormal one, and registers the diseased condition of the body rather than a healthy one.

Dr. McKeever, well known as a student of adolescents, studied 100 boys ranging from 12 to 20 years of age, all of whom were smokers. He found that the best record of the smoker's heart was similar to that of a very tired person, that it responded to the influence of a smoke for a brief time, but that this inspiring period, passes sometimes in less than fifteen minutes. The smoker approximated the heart strength of a non-smoker only immediately after a smoke.

In 1897 at Yale, Dr. Seaver made a thorough study of the matter and found that of 100 highest ranking students, 5 were smokers and 95 were abstainers, although of the student body sixty per cent were smokers.

Dr. Meylan studied the same problem with the students at Columbia University, and came to the conclusions summarized as follows:

1. All scientists are agreed that the use of tobacco by adolescents is injurious; parents, teachers and physicians should strive earnestly to warn youths against its use.

2. It has been shown conclusively by this study that the use of tobacco by college students is closely associated with idleness, lack of ambition, lack of application and low scholarship.

Beekopers to Study in Special Course

The art of commercial beekeeping will be the subject of a special winter course just announced at the Michigan Agricultural College. The school, which will be held from February 11 through 22, is intended for those who desire to produce honey for sale, and will be of a strictly practical nature.

The annual production of honey in Michigan runs into high figures, according to Prof. R. H. Pettit, head of the M. A. C. entomology department, under whose direction the course is being planned. Hundreds of beekeepers are engaged in the profession, which ranks as one of the state's big agricultural industries.

Among the features which will be included in the study of the course are: rearing of queens, making of increase, control of swarming and diagnosis and eradication of foulbrood, marketing methods, and other major problems of the apian manager.

Demand from beekeepers of the state for a chance to study latest methods and developments in the industry led to the establishment of the course, according to professor Pettit.

Progress of the Children's Bill

About six months have elapsed since a little company of Legionnaires and Auxiliary members launched the American Legion orphanage work, commonly known as the Children's Bill.

These six months have been marked by steady progress and by almost continuous encouragement. Oak trees grow slowly and from small beginnings. The same is true of all great and solid institutions, and the American Legion Children's Bill is no exception to this general rule, so of course, it is not to be expected that a fully equipped orphanage could have been developed in that length of time. Nevertheless, a beginning of a great institution is established and growth beyond the most sanguine hopes of the promoters has been realized.

The beautiful grounds free from indebtedness, have been planned and graded and the first building, a commodious, home-like structure, capable of housing fifty little ones, is nearing completion. The foundation for two additional buildings are being laid, while a spirit of hopefulness and cheer prevails the entire organization.

In the meantime the children, cared for in various leased buildings, are well and happy, and those in charge are giving them, as far as possible, the loving care which they would otherwise be denied.

Of late the women's clubs through out the state are manifesting the keenest interest in this enterprise and the number of organizations and friends that are cooperating give assurance of continued success of the work.

Christmas Seals Helped to Make These Tots Happy

TWO KIDDIES AT A SUMMER CAMP

Every summer hundreds of under-nourished and sickly children enjoy the hospitality of summer camps scattered throughout the state. At these camps the kiddies are given an opportunity to play, eat and sleep in the open air, to eat the right kind of food and to get the proper amount of helpful exercise.

Summer camps are a part of the work carried on with Christmas seal sale funds. Every penny that is spent for seals is a contribution to the health and general welfare of hundreds of children. Every seal that is used becomes a weapon in the hands of skilled tuberculosis fighters. Buy Christmas seals and help make trail children strong.

Coffeyville, Kans.—Drillers for a laundry firm here have brought in a 1,000,000-foot gas well within a half block of the main street in the downtown business section and within 100 feet of the first gas well drilled in Coffeyville. The latter well, drilled in 1892, with a volume of 2,000,000 cubic feet, was abandoned as unprofitable several years ago when it still was producing a third of a million cubic feet of gas daily.

Thanksgiving Relativity

THE Thanksgiving idea is controlled by relativity. The men and women who established this strictly American festival three centuries ago were thankful because the famine threatened by the summer drought did not come. They found themselves possessed of plenty—that is, enough to eat. Indeed, to those who had endured the perils of the sea in the Mayflower and the hardships of the first winter in the Plymouth colony their Thanksgiving dinner was a rare feast.

Now, of course, everybody in this country has enough to eat. And if we had been through the things that the Pilgrims experienced a plenteous beef stew would seem wonderful. Providence has helped to preserve Thanksgiving relativity. It prevents turkeys from being too numerous, keeps the price of them so high that they are a holiday luxury and thus reminds the ultimate consumer of his benefits.

The Pilgrims had plenty of wild turkey, venison, duck, codfish and bass, all obtained at non-prohibitive rates. But they had no butter, sugar or coffee, and their bread was made of Indian corn. The general dinner, however, was such a contrast to the pitiful meals of the hungry months that they indulged in feasting and mirth.

A citizen of 1923 would not be happy if he were transported to the Pilgrim Thanksgiving dinner of long ago. He would remember what his doctor told him about eating too much meat. He would find that the duck had not long enough. He would not understand why the people were so generously grateful to the Almighty, for he had not been with them in the days when an ear of corn was the only dinner.

Nor would one of the good old colonists be happy in the large cities. What were Indian arrows as compared with flying taxicabs? What were the stocks beside a full dress collar? What is this pale, rather neat turkey meat as compared with the breast of a wild quail? "What can you be thankful for," the Puritan would ask; "he who has everything knows not the goodness of anything." And his neighbor at dinner could only tell him of the horrifying item in the newspapers saying that strawberries were $2.50 a quart!

It is hard, with the granaries of the country stuffed to bursting, to have this Thanksgiving on the old reasons. But there are things to be grateful for. There are no epidemics and there is practically no unemployment; so men have health and the chance to work. Men are out of the sloth of the Era of Inflation and working harder. The country ignores the howls of the bolshevik and the flatteries of foreign politicians. It gets along. With all its faults it is still the best part of this wicked world. Nor will we eat our turkey alone on this our own particular holiday. No hungry nation has asked us for help and seen us turn away.

U.S. LEADS WORLD IN AERONAUTICS

Report by Army Air Service Says Americans Excel in Speed Records, Etc.

Washington.—The Army air service in a report just issued here claims that the United States, which was so backward in aeronautics in the perilous World War days, has taken the lead over the rest of the world within the last year in development of the airplane motor and other phases of aircraft construction.

The air service declares that this superiority is demonstrated primarily by the fact that Americans have taken credit for all the world's airplane records during the last ten months.

Credit for improvements along technical lines which have made possible this record is given to the air service engineering division at Dayton, O., the bureau of standards and the national advisory committee for aeronautics.

The long list of records attained by army pilots have been achieved, the report states, because of the greatly increased efficiency of the new planes and engines. The increased efficiency, it is claimed, is the result of the combined efforts of private manufacturers and the engineering division in experimentation and research work.

In airplane design great progress has been made along the line of producing more efficient wings as well as greater structural strength. The study of the substitution of various metals and alloys for former construction materials has been exhaustive, with the result that a better grade of durability is being produced in new machines in any other country of the world.

Liberty Motor Triumph

To the improvement of the wartime Liberty engine is attributed the success of the transcontinental flight. Such a performance reflects to the credit of the engine with which the airplane was equipped, because a more severe and grueling test hardly could be imposed.

In the Pulitzer trophy race, the report says, there again was evidenced improvement in airplane engine design when the tremendous horsepower of the engine is compared with the fragile craft which it was required to drive through the air at nearly 250 miles an hour.

Keeping abreast with the world's efforts to develop a flying machine that could ascend and descend vertically the Army air service, the report points out, produced during the year the Botheast helicopter. This machine, built entirely within the service, is among the first successful machines of its type.

New Invention Will Steady Guns on Ships

Chatham, England.—Important experiments are being made here with a gyroscopic instrument designed to abolish the rolling of warships. The apparatus has been fitted to a ship in the Chatham dockyard.

Thorough tests are to be made at sea. It is generally agreed that if the invention proves a success it will have an almost revolutionary effect on naval warfare, because one of the greatest difficulties which the naval gunner has to encounter at present is the continual rolling of the ship.

The introduction of large bilge keels and other improvements in design, naval architects have been able to reduce the rolling very considerably during the last few years, but many difficulties still present themselves. The modern battleship is so enormously heavy that, once she starts rolling, a long time elapses before she recovers her balance.

Heirs to Sue for Lots

Valued at $75,000,000

Lexington, Ky.—Final arrangements for filing suit against present occupants of property in the heart of New York valued at more than $75,000,000, will be made by heirs of Robert Edwards at a meeting to be held here, it was decided by more than 100 heirs who gathered in a hotel here. It is claimed Robert Edwards owned 77 acres of land in what is now in the Fifth ward of Manhattan borough, but that he died intestate during the Revolutionary war after leasing the property for 90 years. When the lease expired the property was sold.

The Edwards heirs scattered about Kentucky and Ohio, have been investigating the situation for two or three years.

Boy Makes $2,500 on $24 Investment

Chicago.—How an office boy invested $24 and made a profit of 10,000 per cent was related by post office officials here.

A man tried to sell a Chicago business man a block of airmail stamps, on which an airplane was printed inverted by mistake, but the man refused. The office boy, hearing of the offer, bought the stamps for $24. Recently he sold them for $2,500 to Col. E. H. Green, son of Mrs. Hetty Green.

U.S. LEADS WORLD IN AERONAUTICS

Report by Army Air Service Says Americans Excel in Speed Records, Etc.

Washington.—The Army air service in a report just issued here claims that the United States, which was so backward in aeronautics in the perilous World War days, has taken the lead over the rest of the world within the last year in development of the airplane motor and other phases of aircraft construction.

The air service declares that this superiority is demonstrated primarily by the fact that Americans have taken credit for all the world's airplane records during the last ten months.

Credit for improvements along technical lines which have made possible this record is given to the air service engineering division at Dayton, O., the bureau of standards and the national advisory committee for aeronautics.

The long list of records attained by army pilots have been achieved, the report states, because of the greatly increased efficiency of the new planes and engines. The increased efficiency, it is claimed, is the result of the combined efforts of private manufacturers and the engineering division in experimentation and research work.

In airplane design great progress has been made along the line of producing more efficient wings as well as greater structural strength. The study of the substitution of various metals and alloys for former construction materials has been exhaustive, with the result that a better grade of durability is being produced in new machines in any other country of the world.

Liberty Motor Triumph

To the improvement of the wartime Liberty engine is attributed the success of the transcontinental flight. Such a performance reflects to the credit of the engine with which the airplane was equipped, because a more severe and grueling test hardly could be imposed.

In the Pulitzer trophy race, the report says, there again was evidenced improvement in airplane engine design when the tremendous horsepower of the engine is compared with the fragile craft which it was required to drive through the air at nearly 250 miles an hour.

Dissertation on Church Mergers

The Methodist church for years has been in a split between North and South and have been styled as real dissenters with each other, since some of the rules of the Methodist church South conflicted with the discipline of the North denomination but it has been recommended by the heads that some sort of unity should be established.

Work on this important matter has been in hand for some time and the Bishops are planning to bring the two factions under one management. When this is consummated new discipline will have to be substituted and some old things abandoned. Just how the matter can be fixed has not yet been thoroughly determined.

In New York City there is a famous dancing teacher, Miss "Billy" Tichenor, who claims allegiance to the Methodist church South, and this popular and vivacious young woman is not a little worried by the claims lest by the consolidation of the two denominations she will be forced out.

When this item came to our notice we looked at it with a little more than another look, then we read the article carefully and pinched ourselves so as to be sure we were awake, and we were—and there was a real good picture of Miss "Billy" in her stage togs, and believe us she is a sight for warm climates.

We mean to send this account to Bishop Henderson at once to inquire if he is aware there are such stars in the church.

In New York City it is quite common for actresses to appear almost completely naked before the footlights in a passion. Don't have to be in New York to find such shows, but to find a member of the Methodist ballet a member of the Methodist church in good standing, well—that is a new one to us.

The picture of Miss "Billy" represents a typical stage beauty with nothing but straps above the waist line and skirts to the middle of the thighs standing with the regular pose of the modern actress, so you see there is not much either above or below the belt line.

The item reads as follows: "Miss 'Billy' Tichenor, New York dancing teacher and actress of the Southern Methodist Episcopal church, fears she will become a woman with out a church if the northern and southern branches of her denomination are consolidated. She has asked the Board of Bishops whether the proposed consolidation will deprive her of membership. Senior Bishop Berry of the M. E. church North has said that actors and dancing teachers are barred from membership. No such ruling exists in the south."

If that is a sample of the Methodist discipline, we can well believe there will be no consolidation. If there are staid christian people in the south who adhere to such practices as this then they are not Methodists but should at once unite with the idol worshippers of India who keep a force of Nautch girls about the temples or the Japanese whose principal religious institution is the geisha or entertainers. It would seem that Christianity was advancing backward at a galloping pace.

We should much like to present Bishop Henderson with a photo of Miss "Billy" in her stage "undress" and inquire the verdict.

State Shows Well at International

Michigan entries at the International Livestock and Hay and Grain shows, held at Chicago last week, succeeded in winning a great list of honors and awards in competition with the best of the United States and Canada could muster.

Crop farmers of the state duplicated their triumphs of the last year, for four years, by pulling down far more than their share of the awards in the hay and grain classes. In complete returns on the various classes include the following among Michigan winners:

Twelve of 25 possible placed on soft red winter wheat, 16 of 30 on rye, 14 of 30 on barley, 27 of 30 on oats, first 5 on white wheat, first 3 of 5 on both peas and beans, 6 of 10 on soy beans, sweepstakes on hay. Final tabulation of Michigan winners will be made this week by H. C. K. Rather, executive secretary at M. A. C. and show manager for the state on crops entries at the international, and results in detail will be announced later.

Outstanding among winners from the state in the livestock classes at the famous show was the Junior and Grand Championship which fell to Perverche, two year old Belgian mare owned by the Michigan Agricultural College. Perverche was first in her class and later was awarded the two higher honors which marked her one of the great honors of the country.

Other winners of the college furred herd, as reported by R. S. Hudson, their superintendent, included ribbons on Belgians, Clydesdales, and Percherons, the M. A. C. horses ranking well up in the lists in very keen competition.

Forty ribbons were won by hogs from the state college herds, including a clean sweep of practically all honors in the dressed carcass classes, topped by Champion and Reserve Champion. A first and seven other ribbons on beef cattle, and six awards on sheep rounded out the M. A. C. winnings.

Aden Cunningham a Toledo hunter lost his life by exposure in a swamp near Jackson recently. His body was found frozen into the ice where he had been hunting ducks. The Mask Which Grew on His Face

PHILETUS SOLEMNLY could not understand why the children did not like him. He gave them good advice. He parted them upon their heads. He expressed the hope that they would be successful in life as he had been. He promised them rewards if they would behave themselves as he wanted them to. Yet they came to his school unwillingly and went home from it grudgingly. They were respectful, but unsympathetic.

It was with hope, but not without difficulty, that a friend persuaded Philetus to officiate as Santa Claus at the Christmas festival and to assume the traditional garb of the part. Philetus did not see much use in such fanciful doings, but yielded to solicitation and appeared upon the occasion with as much grace as a feeling of foolishness would allow. His spare form was now round, his sober garments had become gay, and the jolly mask that had been adjusted to his long face gave him quite a new expression.

As the joy among the children progressed and the spirit of fun and frolic mounted high, Philetus began to experience a change of heart. To his amazement he began having a good time himself and to feel like a real Saint Nicholas. For this reason, perhaps, he overexerted himself to such an extent that his mask fell off and it was revealed to the surprised audience that it had been contradicting the face of Mr. Solemly.

This was really the best feature of the evening, and it proved to have permanence about it, for, from that time, the Philetus phiz shortened, and broadened, and fattened, and colored up, until it came to look a good deal like the face of that old fairy who is always young and kindly.

So the mask that fell off left its imprint and stayed on, and Philetus, able to be merry, became the favorite friend of the children.—Christopher G. Hazard.

SPEAKING OF FUEL

A Christmas gift for the man with the average domestic supply of fuel. A magnifying glass, a pair of tweezers and the framed motto, "Keep the stove fire burning."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

MOTHERS' CHRISTMAS

After receiving her gifts, mother's Christmas will be devoted largely to washing an extra number of dishes.

A Late "It" Arrival Came Just in Time

VERYONE was watching, waiting, hoping. They all hoped "it" would surely arrive on time. They hoped "it" would not fail them.

"It" helped the Christmas season so much. Everyone and everything loved "it." The children loved "it," the grown-ups loved "it."

The trees of the forest loved "it." And then "it" arrived. It arrived late—almost when everyone was giving "it" up. But even though "it" came late, it was not too late for Christmas day. "It" came late Christmas eve.

And haven't you guessed what "it" was? SNOW of course!—Mary Graham Bonner.

Christmas March Was Played by Minister

THE minister had hung up his stockings, too. The spirit that put into a candy cane a hollow, a ball, in an apple and a water can the way to go, had added a mouth organ, most appropriate and perhaps most needed of all gifts, for what other mouth should be dissonant harmony? Then, after breakfast came the procession into the parlor and unto the wonderful tree. First, little Sarah, with the early and aided steps of her one year and the big eyes of her first Christmas tree. Then denore Helen, blowing her own horn for once, then big Sarah and all the uncles, aunts and cousins, then father and mother, then the minister, playing his new march upon his new organ.

When they were all seated in the happy circle they asked for the words that new tune and here they are:

If birds could sing in Christmas trees, If they could hum with happy bees, If they were sweet with all the spices Of all things beautiful and nice, They could not altogether be More full of love than this, our tree, Ours—March, march to the Christmas tree.

It has a loving gift for thee.

Then they all sang it, after which the beautiful tree yielded its fruit.—Christopher G. Hazard.

COFFEE ARRIVES BY WATER

Chicago—The arrival recently of a cargo of coffee at the Clark street dock of Reid, Murdoch & Co., marked the first of such shipments coming to Chicago by water from the South American coffee plantations.

The firm purchased the coffee in Colombia, transported it by mule to Grandot and thence entirely by water from this point in the interior of South America to the heart of North America where it was unloaded at the docks of the company in Chicago. This marks a distinct advance over the former methods of transporting coffee and has affected a material saving in cost.

In the future practically all coffee will be shipped to Chicago by water from Colombia, said John MacMahon, vice president of the company.

CHAPTER XII

At the Farmers' Institute.

Every Iowa county has its Farmers' Institute. Usually it is held in the county seat, and is a gathering of farmers for the purpose of listening to improving discussions and addresses both instructive and entertaining. The Woodruff district was interested in the institute, however, because of the fact that a rural-school exhibit was one of its features that year, and that Colonel Woodruff had secured an urgent invitation to the school to take part in it.

Such exhibits are now so common that it is not worth while for us to describe it; but then, the sight of a class of children testing and weighing milk, examining grains for viability and food seeds, planning crop rotations, judging grains and live stock was so new in that county as to be the real sensation of the institute.

Two persons were a good deal embarrassed by the success of the exhibit. One was the county superintendent, who was constantly in receipt of undesired compliments upon his wisdom in fostering rural "practical work" in the schools. The other was Jim Irwin, who was becoming famous, and who felt he had done nothing to deserve them. Professor Withers, an extension lecturer from Ames, took Jim to dinner at the best hotel in the town, for the purpose of talking over with him the needs of the rural schools.

"You've got to come down to our farmers' week next year, and tell us about these things," said he to Jim. "Can't you?"

Jim's brain reeled. He go to a gathering of real educators and tell his "trivial notions"? How could he get the money for his expenses? But he had that assurance which goes with supreme confidence in the thing dealt with.

"I'll come," said he. "Thank you," said the Ames man. "Here's a small honorarium attached, you know."

Jim was staggered. He tried to remember what an honorarium is. Was he obliged to pay for the honorarium? The chance to speak before the college professor, tell him save money and pay it.

"I'll try to take care of the honorarium," said he. "I'll come."

The professor laughed. It was the first joke the gangling innovator had perpetrated.

"It won't bother you to take care of it," said he. "but if you're not too extravagant it will pay your expenses and give you a few dollars over."

Jim breathed more freely. An honorarium was paid to the person receiving the honorarium. Then, what relief!

"All right," he exclaimed. "I'll be glad to come!"

"Let's consider that settled," said the professor. "And now I must be going back to the opera-house. My talk on soil sickness comes next. I tell you, the winter wheat crop has been—"

But Jim was not able to think much of the winter wheat problem as they went back to the auditorium. He was worth the appreciation of a college professor, trained to think on the way. Jim had been so long mulling over in isolation and blindness!

Calista Simms thought she saw something shining and saint-like about her former teacher as he came to her at her post in the room in which the school exhibit was held. Calista was in charge of the little children whose work was to be commended that day, and was in a state of exaltation to which her starved being had hitherto been a stranger. Perhaps there was something in her condition of fervent happiness to that of Jim. She, too, was doing none.

"Come and tell Us About Those Things."

Children outside the corded life of the Simms cabin. She journeyed over the children in her care, and would have been glad to die for them—and besides was not Newton Brown in charge of the corn exhibit, and a member of the corn-judging team?

To the eyes of the town girls who passed among the exhibits, Jim was poorly dressed; but if they could have seen the clothes she had worn on that evening when Jim Irwin first called at their cabin they could perhaps have understood the sense of well-being and happiness in Calista's soul at the feeling of her dress, and the "boughten" cloak she wore—and all of them, even without knowledge of this, might have understood Calista's joy at the knowledge that Newton Brown's eyes were on her from his station by the big pillar.

"Hello, Calista," said Jim. "How are you enjoying it?"

"Oh!" said Calista, and drew a long breath. "Ah! in enjoying myself right much, Mr. Jim."

"Any of the home folks coming in to see?"

"Yes, seh," answered Calista. "All the school board have stopped by this morning."

Jim looked about him. There they were now, over in a corner, with their heads together. He went toward them, his face still beaming with that radiance which had shone so plainly to the eyes of Calista Simms, but they saw in his face a gleam of exaltation over his defeat of them at the hearing before Jennie Woodruff. When Jim had drawn so close as almost to call for the extended hand, he felt the repulsion of their attitudes and sheered off on some pretended errand to a dark corner across the room.

"They resumed their talk."

"And as I was saying," went on Bonner, "I want to get this guy, Jim Irwin. Ain't he the cause of his gift in the school, I'd like to be on the board to kick him off; but if you fellows would like to have some one else, I won't run, and if I right feller is named, I'll line up what friends I got for him."

"You got no friend can get as many votes as you can," said Peterson. "I tank you better run."

"What say, Est?" asked Bonner. "Suits me all right," said Bonner. "I guess these three have had our fight out and understand each other."

"I don't like the way Colonel Woodruff run this school," said Bonner. "I rounded up that gang of kids that shot us all up to pieces at that hearing, didn't he?"

"I tank not," replied Peterson. "I tank he was just interested in how Jennie managed it."

"Well," said Bonner, "he seems to take a lot of interest in this exhibition about these things, I think he is the colonel. That decision of Jennie's was crooked."

"Well," said Hank Peterson, "talk of crookedness with Jennie! Woodruff don't get very far with me."

"Oh, I don't mean anything bad, Hank," replied Bonner, "but it wasn't an all-right decision. I tank she's stuck on the guy."

The caucus broke up after making sure that the three members of the school board would be as one man in maintaining a hostile front to Jim Irwin and his tenure of office. It looked rather like a foregone conclusion, in a little district wherein there were scarcely twenty-five votes. The three members of the board with their immediate friends, dependent on Calista, in a little district wherein there could muster two or three ballots each—and who was there to oppose them?

CHAPTER XIII

The Colonel Takes the Field.

Jim stood up, and alone with his thoughts after his rebuff by the on-cussing members of the school board. "I don't see," said a voice over against the column of light, "what there is in this to set people talking. Buttons! Cookies! Humph!"

It was Mrs. Bonner who had clearly come to scoff. With her was Mrs. Brown, whose attitude was that of a person torn between conflicting influences. Her husband had indicated to the crafty Bonner and the subtle Peterson that he was still loyal to the school board, but while consorting with the conservative Mrs. Bonner she evinced restiveness when the school and its work was condemned. Was not her Newton in charge of a part of this exhibit? Was he not her dependent, her champion of Jim Irwin, and a constant and enthusiastic attendant upon, not only his classes, but a variety of evening and Saturday affairs? And had not Newton become a better boy—a wonderfully better boy?

"Mrs. Brown's heart was filled with resentment that she also could not be enrolled among Jim Irwin's supporters. And when Mrs. Bonner sneered at the buttonholes and cookies, Mrs. Brown, knowing how the little fingers had puzzled themselves over the one, and young faces had become flouzy and red over the other, fared up a trifle."

"And I don't see," said she, "anything to laugh at. I'd like to help them."

Mrs. Bonner was far too good a diplomat to be cornered in the same enclosure with a rupture of relations. "The little things ought to be helped—at home and by their mothers."

"Well," said Mrs. Brown, "take them Simms girls, now. They have to have help outside their home."

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Bonner, "and a lot more help than a farm-hand can give 'em in school. I shouldn't wonder if there was a lot we don't know about why they come north."

"For that," replied Mrs. Brown, "I don't know as it's any of my business so long as they behave themselves."

Again Mrs. Bonner felt the situation getting out of hand.

"Ain't it some of our business?"

WHY MAN FAVORS RIGHT HAND

Was Necessary in the Days When the Heart Was Guarded by the Left Arm.

The Pathfinder finds an interesting theory of why we are right-handed. Most persons are right-handed. Only one in every twenty is left-handed. Why are people right-handed?

Many have been told that way, it's true, but why? This is a question that has puzzled you if you can't puzzle it out. Away back in the beginning the chief occupation of man was fighting. In battle he carried a shield in one hand and a weapon in the other. It was not much work to carry the shield, but the quick action required by the hand and arm which did the fighting was developed that arm. It also developed the nerves and the half of the brain that governed the right side of the body. Those who shielded their left side, thus protecting the heart—were the ones who usually came out victorious. From those the ages this selection continued, the right hand gradually becoming more proficient.

Sixteen years ago she was struck by the Ypsilanti train northeast of town and conditions arising from this accident caused her death. She was 48 years of age. Funeral services will be held Saturday, Dec. 29 at 1:00 at the home in Moscow. Interment in the North Adams cemetery.

Last Saturday morning about 8:00 an old barn located on Pearl street in Jackson burned into ruins but not entirely up. On the second floor firemen found what was thought to be the bones of a human being and it is said they were those of a woman. The first opinion was the bones were those of a cadaver which had been used for dissecting purposes but further investigation leads the police to believe there is something more serious to be learned. The barn is the property of Dr. Campbell and he has leased it to parties on Pearl street who used it for storing automobiles and paid little attention to it for some time. However it could be entered and the officers are now trying to find who carried a dead body up there and why. The owner claims to know nothing about the matter as he never went to the building since it has been rented. Whether this is newspaper propaganda or is really a bonafide case is not known.

He was the youngest child and only son of Lester and S. Jane (Noyes) Barker; was born Aug. 1, 1857 on the farm where he died and most of his life was spent. Pheasants are Savage

It is authoritatively reported that the government is about to abandon its efforts to increase the number of Pheasants in our woodlots as it is claimed they are doing the equal and partridge out of the country entirely. We have not seen a quail or a partridge for many moons but did not know what created the scarcity. These pheasants seem to be on the warpath continually for quails and such game besides the investigation shows they are not increasing as fast as is desired and it is believed they will not become climated here in Michigan or else hunters are potting them on the side extensively. There is now a shortage of game wardens all around the state and most attention is paid to such violations. We hope no careless hunter will take this to mean he can pot all he likes and get by because we personally know of at least two cases where fellows have gone out and bagged some fish out of season and they paid dearly, so beware!

Death of Albert L. Frantz

Shortly after he and family moved to Lansing where he has since resided, his wife having passed into the Great Beyond in 1918. Dainty Dress Accessories;

Georgette Party Frocks

IT IS quite a temptation to creative georgette and mink when the scrap bag reveals bits of lovely silks, laces and ribbons. If one will, one can make many a pretty penny, conjuring pretty things at home.

The dainty bodice, once ribbon banded, powder puff receptacle should prove an inspiration to those dainty with the needle. The little cap with the fitted piece of all-over lace, has the effect of a cunning Dutch bonnet.

LATEST IN DRESS ACCESSORIES

Rows of footing across the top of the head give a perky air, and there are ribbon streamers at one side. The other much-beset cap gives one the impression of having been inspired by the famous Charlotte Corday headpiece. There is a little pink tuft tucked net in conjunction with lace in this model.

Now that mid-winter children's parties are flourishing, little girls delight in wearing ribbon rosettes and bows which match or contrast their dainty frocks. The ribbon in the picture is interesting and well worth copying, as it is different from the stereotyped big butterfly bow.

These days we do not buy our handbags solely from the standpoint of their utility but also for their decorative value. Frills at neck and sleeves reaffirm the thought that plaiting is still very much in favor. Through a series of shirings the airy-fairy skirt is deftly attached to the waist portion.

Designers have a way of using two shades of the same color in the same dress, with charming results. A dress of faint pink chiffon is plaited from neck to hem in the fashionable straight-line model. It has a girle made of little satin rosettes of a deeper tone.

Another instance of the two-color scheme is that of a multi-colored dress with horizontal insets, red and row of a coral yellow chiffon, the same edged on each side with multi-colored silk lace. Little rosettes of the lace are placed at various vantage points.

PRETTY FROCK OF GEORGETTE

ing a receptacle for kerchief, purse and small belongings. No, indeed! Handbags are as capricious as millinery when it comes to style. A purse bag can mar the effect of the entire costume. It follows that we should be very discriminating in our selection. The models shown in the picture are the latest word in silk bags.

While debutante daughter is making her bow to society and mother's guests are filling their receptacles, banquets, club affairs and grand openings, what little sister and her playmates? True, school does take up the major part of the early youthful existence, but the future.

A Dainty Evening Gown.
Cream-colored lace over rich yellow satin makes an exquisite evening gown. The dress is accented with a wide salmon pink satin ribbon on each hip of the wide bouffant skirt.

A Simple and Useful Gift.
Suitable for a simple gift is a guest room bouquet that holds all the necessary pins, needles and threads. The newest ones are shaped like chrysanthemums and come in several colors.

Fancy Scarves.
Striped scarves of wool or silk are an attractive addition to the sports suit. They add a note of gay color and give an added protection just where it is appreciated.

Cottage Sets of Table Ware.
Stores show delightful sets of table ware either of dinner or breakfast. Such a set would make a most acceptable wedding present. The shapes and colors of these are unusually good.

VERY OLD GENTLEMAN wearing a long, white top and carrying a scythe, sat down on a stone. It was exactly five minutes before midnight on December thirty-first. The very old gentleman seemed to be waiting for somebody.

"Where is that young rascal?" he murmured to himself. "I have a few words to say to him which... ah... I see him coming now."

A rosy cherub of a youngster ran laughing to the old man's side. The elderly fellow patted him on the head and said: "Listen to me, my boy. I'm leaving now for good. In five minutes I must step out forever, and you must take my place. It's a job—a man-sized job."

"I began as young and eager as you. Look at me now! People are never satisfied. But you must not let their grumbling disturb you. If it's winter, they want you to hurry the months towards spring. In summer they cry for fall. The nights are too long and the days too short. What makes happiness for some brings distress to others. But this is not your job. All you have to do is to keep steadily on schedule. Minute by minute, hour by hour; never varying a second through storms and sunshine, heat and snow. Your responsibility is for the correct passage of time. This is your sole duty. Joy and sorrow may not change for a second the law you keep. This is the way of life. 'Hew to the line, my boy, and never give up.'"

The old gentleman smiled, arose from his seat and disappeared. The rosy cherub of a youngster danced into the New Year to the ringing of bells. There was a great welcome for him and he determined to fulfill his duty to the very last second.

and at your office, and never a word out of me, because I'm the most long-suffering woman alive and now you tell me that I'll never open my mouth again."

"All right, Dorothy, as long as you keep your mouth closed in anger I'll keep mine closed to tobacco."

Will thought he'd have an excuse to start smoking again next day, but that was where Dorothy fooled him. She suddenly turned into a model wife. To his most petulant outbreaks there came no reply. And Will became more and more reticent as the days went by and his coveted smoke failed to materialize.

She had always wanted to cure him of his dirty habit, and it was now or never.

Will's pride kept him to the full-time resolution. A week passed. He got up one morning feeling desperate.

"Whatevening by giving me this nasty coffee!" he growled. "Haven't you got sense enough to clarify it with an egg? I don't care if eggs cost a thousand dollars a dozen. I'm not going to drink this!"

Dorothy said nothing, but smiled sweetly upon him.

"For the Lord's sake, can't you make toast without burning it? And where did you get this grapefruit? Grapefruit? Huh! I'd like to see the fellow that I guess it's a cannon-ball more likely."

Dorothy went softly out of the room. Presently, as Will bent over his meal, two soft hands were placed over his eyes.

"Open his mouth and shut his eyes and see—"

"Oh, for heaven's sake quit your foolish tricks. I'm not a kid. Hey, what's this?"

"Open his eyes, you wicked monster!" whined Dorothy. "And now I can tell you what I think of you. You flend in human form, before I go home to mother. I've stood for all I'm going to stand from you. I hate you and I wish you'd never been born. Of all the wretched, worthless loafers who ever encumbered the face of the earth you take the cake—in your pipe a light now, darling?"

Dorothy perched herself upon his knee.

"Aren't we happy?" she cooed, as the fragrant fumes floated into the air. "Un—um—um!" said Will. "What delicious delicacy. Give me another cup. Say—I guess I've been pretty rotten to you."

"Hush, Will, you're always lovely. I've had that new pipe waiting for you for days, but I tried not to give it to you till you started nagging at me and good wife to you and looked after you like a slave while you've been indulging in your extravagances and filthy tobacco, and loafing about the house."

A NEW YEAR'S GONG

On New Year's eve in England, all in the old day.
The children went a-croaking,
All in the old day.
This chorus would you hear:
"God send you happy, God send you happy."
Pray God send you a happy New Year!

Our days are sadly modern.
Our ways are modern, too;
But hearts are still the same with love.
As once 't was used to do.
So take the old-time message,
Good friends, both far and near:
"God send you happy, God send you happy."
Pray God send you a happy New Year!

—Nora Smith.

Piloting and Control of Airplane

While Traveling 280 Miles an Hour Requires Skill

The piloting and control of a plane during the space at four miles a minute or better is a feat to compare the skill and resource of the most experienced pilot. It is a test of brain and hand, nerves of steel, instant judgment and every faculty on tip-toe—these are essentials for success. But in that "nick of time" for record speed at Mitchell field, Lieutenant Brown handled his plane with machine-like precision. "Not a hair of my head was out of place," he said. "I was in control of the plane from the moment I took the controls. The plane was a standard of measurement. Williams displayed that he had a full understanding of its meaning. Diving from an altitude of 10,000 feet to gain speed before he leveled off over the course, he approached to within ten feet of the ground, headed for almost certain destruction. One-fourth of a second more and the crash would have come. But in that "nick of time" Williams leveled off and sped away to a new world's record. He estimated the speed in the dive at 280 miles an hour.

WHAT ADVERTISING DOES

America has the best life on this earth because it has the best advertised life, says Colonel W. G. Edens of the Public Relations Commission, American Bankers Association. He goes on: "American health is the best in the world because American people are best informed in the ways and habits of health, largely through advertising. American business is the largest and most successful in the world because it uses advertising the most. American business men enlarge their business institutions in proportion as they advertise them. American buyers become more shrewd in spending their money in proportion as they read advertisements."

The press of the United States is regarded by many as the most powerful of our institutions. It must be numbered with the schools and the churches as one of the most powerful creators of knowledge and patriotism.

Advertising is what it is today largely because of the power and success of the daily paper. Nevertheless, it is true that the daily paper is as successful as it is today because of advertising.

The banking business has been benefited largely by advertising within the last dozen or fifteen years. Banking institutions have done more advertising than ever before. They have installed advertising departments which acquaint their communities with facts formerly regarded in the light of institutions. The banker publishes facts which build up confidence in his institution.

The result has been that millions of people who formerly would not place their money in the care of bankers, but who boarded it at home, entrusted it to friends, or invested it in wild speculations, now regard the bank as the safest place in the world. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been brought from their hiding places and placed in circulation, much to the advance of America and American institutions, as well as American business. Newspaper advertising has done more for American banks in the last dozen years than any other single agency."

TRUST COMPANY GROWTH

Nearly fourteen and one-half billions of dollars are the total present resources of trust companies in the United States. Institutions reporting number 2,478, as compared with 2,872 a year ago. The actual figures for the year ending June 30 last are $14,421,500,000 resources, as compared with $12,733,600,000 in 1921, representing a gain of $1,707,900,000.

Preliminary plans call for the waters from the springs to be brought into the city through wooden pipes. The waters from the geyser and springs are both sulphurous and radioactive, and it is hoped a medical spa in the Arctic may be established there.

WHERE THE RAINBOW TOUCHES THE GROUND

THE family cat died. The farmer who owned the cat, in digging a grave discovered a substance which proved to be marl. This farmer had been hauling limestone a long distance for his alfalfa fields. In conference with his county agent, he discovered that marl would take the place of lime in correcting the acidity of his soil. This experience led him to the use of marl that existed on his own farm and saved him much time and considerable expense in hauling.

Similar opportunities have existed and still exist. Many farmers in the middle west will recall what a pest sweet clover used to be. Now this pest is being used profitably as hay and pasture for livestock and as a crop to be plowed under for increasing the fertility of the soil.

Kansas is called the "Sunflower State" and those who have lived there will well remember how they have fought this weed. Today sunflowers are being grown as a crop as feed for chickens and it is also being utilized for or without corn as a suitable crop for the silo.

It is surprising to discover how many things which were frowned upon in days gone by are now serving a useful purpose. These changes have been brought about by observation and study. Brains count on the farm as elsewhere. The man who thinks while he is performing physical work is not only opening up the way for larger profits but he is removing the weeds from his life. Life is transforming what used to be a drudgery into a profitable pleasure.

BANKERS HELP THE KIDS

Northern Michigan Bankers are out to give the youngsters in their part of the country a lift on the road to better dairying. A group of bankers met with some of the agricultural men in their section and pledged their support in backing up calf club work.

Her Very Own Pig—A Boys and Girls Club Member

Virginia, Minnesota, Bankers have faith in "kids." Meeting with a committee from the Virginia Chamber of Commerce they formulated plans for the establishment of calf clubs and "Pure Bred Bull Associations." Banks all over St. Louis county have pledged their support to this work.

An Arkansas bank loaned a young steer $70, in 1920. The boy bought a purebred Poland China gilt from a breeder in a neighboring state. Balm, the first purebred gilt brought into the county for boys and girls club work, has turned her stock into money and other sow in the section. With this start that the bank gave the youngster he has been able to refute the claim that hog raising in his county was not profitable, for at the present time he has more than $1000 in his credit as a result of the original bank loan and investment.

REMARKABLE SAVINGS FIGURES

Remarkable progress in the savings habit in the United States is shown in figures presented to the recent convention of the American Bankers Association by Samuel H. Beach, president of its Savings Bank Division. In 1921, Mr. Beach showed, twenty six million people had savings accounts aggregating $14,615,000,000. In 1922, there was an increase of over four per cent, bringing the aggregate up to $17,300,000,000. Similar statistics for 1912 showed that the aggregate was only about half as much as in 1922 or only $8,428,000,000.

Mr. Beach's report on school savings banks showed that practically two million pupils are now participating in school banking systems, an increase of 24 per cent as compared with 1921 and 58 per cent as compared with 1920, while the total of the actual amount deposited last year was $9,818,000, as compared with $5,775,000 in 1921 and $2,800,000 in 1920, an increase of nearly 440 per cent in three years.

A Non Producing Legislature

"Non productive" is something like the word we would use for the last session of the Michigan Legislature which cost the taxpayers something like $16000 and a few resolved and dissolved. I've known men to sleep out in the woods to escape being nominated. But these days it's different. Talk about the office by-leave man. No office could do it. The crowd standing ready to take it would jump into the empty seat and when the office had come back from the vain search the place would be so chuck full there would not be room for the office and it would have to be moved into some other state or be abolished.—Parma News.

Times Have Changed

"How times do change," said an old line story teller and chronicler of the days gone by. "I can remember when it took a powerful pile of influence to get a man to run for office. I've known men to sleep out in the woods to escape being nominated. But these days it's different. Talk about the office by-leave man. No office could do it. The crowd standing ready to take it would jump into the empty seat and when the office had come back from the vain search the place would be so chuck full there would not be room for the office and it would have to be moved into some other state or be abolished.—Parma News.

The Origin of Pears in Michigan

Anyone who has visited the banks of the Detroit River recent years between Monroe and Detroit will marvel at the abundance and size of ancient pear trees growing all along the river and wonder how such trees could attain a size as large as some of these, many of them.

The pioneer history of Michigan tells us that the heavy clay soil in southeastern Michigan and northern Ohio seems to thoroughly agree with the nature of this species. The vicinity of the River Raisin in Monroe is another favorite haunt of these trees whose age no one seems to know.

Tradition says that some of the early French missionaries brought pear seeds, scions and saplings from Normandy in France and planted them all along the way from Monroe to Mt. Clemens. A number of years ago we were at Monroe and counted a number of these trees at least 10 feet in height, some of them at public places and some in private property. The owners said they had no idea how old they were but they never missed a season in bearing. 40 bushels of fruit was not uncommon and we rather pool pooled this state ment but afterwards found it was absolutely true. The variety of pear is not so large as our modern Bartlett and Winter but is considered very good and rich.

Although I never came across in any way these ancient trees are so hardy they never contract disease of any kind but go right on year after year for centuries bearing their crops.

To such men as Father Pierre Marquette and Cavalier De La-

Right or wrong the Legislature went home leaving things just as they were, and Gov. Groesbeck's $75,000 circus ended in a joke at 15 cents a roll and old Tuer Bor Circumspice pays the bill.

"That the troops may have an opportunity of attending public worship, as well as to take some rest after the great fatigue they have gone through, the General in future excuses them from fatigue duty on Sundays, except at the shipyards, or on special occasion, until further orders. The General is sorry to be informed that the foolish and wicked practice of profane cursing and swearing, a vice heretofore little known in an American army, is growing into fashion.

It is a vice so mean and low, without any temptation, that every man of sense and character detests and despises it." Thus spoke General George Washington, although tradition says he did not always practice what he preached. It has been claimed by some historians that when Washington caught a poacher with his boat in the General's private duck preserves on the Potomac Washington administered a severe cowhiding and cursed the offender roundly.

What is believed to be the first rubber pavement in the United States has been laid on a railroad crossing in Racine, Wisconsin. The section of rubber paving will be given a severe trial at this crossing used by thousands of automobiles and heavy motor trucks each day. A similar pavement in Princes street Edinburgh, has been used for more than a year, yet it has not been only a fraction of an inch in thickness during this period.

The old Genesee Mills property near Jonesville has been rejuvenated by Messrs Kimball and Palmer and is again open for business after an idleness of several years. This mill is located in a very picturesque locality but had been allowed to run down and deteriorate considerably. The new managers have put in very extensive repairs including the dam which required a carload of Portland cement and during the coming summer they expect to establish a regular tourist camp on the property where all sojourners will be welcome. Genesee Mills was the old resort of many of the pioneer farmers of this section who used to consider it a real pleasure to take a holiday and drive with their wheat to this point and spend the day picnicking and fishing. Cause the first trip were supposed to be very numerous there also eels and large turtles abound. There was a story current some time ago, that the millers experienced difficulty in starting the turbine wheel which ran the machinery and upon investigation it was found the wheel casing was literally jammed with chopped up eels which had gained entrance through the race and several bushels of these were removed to clear the turbine, after which suitable screens were provided to keep them out. Whether this is a pipe dream or not we do not know. However we know that the locality is considered very good for budding nimrods and many a good catch has been fetched home from the old mill.

Why Banks?

LESSON II

By J. H. PUELICHER, Chairman, Committee on Public Education, American Bankers Association.

Why does Government charter banks, simply to make money for stockholders, or because banks are needed by the public? Text books say, "A bank is a quasi-public corporation, chartered by State or Nation, to receive deposits and make loans."

STOCKHOLDERS — owners.

QUASI-PUBLIC — semi-public,—that is, owned by private stockholders, but regulated by government to see that the depositors' money is safely loaned.

STATE BANK CHARTER — privilege, grant or right to do a banking business under supervision of the State Banking Commissioner.

NATIONAL BANK CHARTER — grant to do business under supervision of the Federal Comptroller of the Currency.

SUPERVISION — the sending by government of examiners, at least once a year, into a bank without notice, to count its cash, examine its loans, bonds and mortgages, and see if its books are correct.

Banks can do only those things permitted in their charters. No business is more closely watched and regulated by State or Nation. Banks cannot, therefore, be run simply to make money for stockholders, but are chartered to meet the needs of the people and are held to that purpose by government supervision.

Robinson Crusoe Not a Myth

It is sometimes supposed that the story of Robinson Crusoe is a pure creation of the imagination but such is not true. One Alexander Selkirk in the year 1704 was wrecked on the island of Juan Fernandez from a big English man-of-war which foundered in a gale and lived there five long years as the following account will show:

A memorial tablet in memory of Alexander Selkirk, the real Robinson Crusoe, was erected on the island of Juan Fernandez by the officers of H. M. S. Topaze in 1868. It reads, "In memory of Alexander Selkirk, mariner, a native of Largo, in the County of Fife, Scotland, who lived on this island in complete solitude for four years and four months He was landed from the Cinque Ports Galley, ninety-six tons, sixteen guns, A. D. 1704, and was taken off in the Duke, privateer, Feb. 12, 1709. He died lieutenant of H. M. S. Weymouth, A. D. 1723, aged 47 years. It is set into hard rock in a beautiful spot about 1,700 feet above the sea, near Selkirk's Look-out."

The Political Encroachment of Catholicism

A politician recently appeared in these columns regarding the political encroachments of Catholicism in America, and the part for which the present administration is largely responsible. Now comes an even stronger statement to this effect from a purely Catholic source. It appeared as an editorial in the National Catholic Register and was reprinted by the Western Recorder (Baptist), Louisville, Ky., under date of January 9, 1919. We give it here not because it reflects upon one of our great political parties and the President who is at its head, but because it is vitally important that our people should be fully informed upon these questions:

"AS A CATHOLIC PAPER VIEWS IT, it is God's plan that the Holy Father of Rome should be the temporal and spiritual head of His Kingdom on earth. It is the same today as in the time of the first pope. The best way to accomplish this is through political power, through religious education and service. God has doubly blessed the Catholic Church of America by placing one of its most faithful sons at the right hand of President Wilson. Next to the President, Hon. Joseph Tumulty, Knights of Columbus thirty-third degree, wields the greatest political power any man in America and as a true Catholic he is exercising the great trust which God has given into his hands for the glory of the holy church. Through his tact and holy zeal he has created a warm friendship between the Catholic Church and President Wilson, together with the Democratic party. Other presidents have feared the power of the holy church, and have courted its support, politically, by granting it childish favors, which deceived no one. But this is the first time in the history of the country when the President and a great political party have openly sought an equal and honest alliance with the Catholic Church. And before seeking this political alliance, the President and his party have shown their good faith by works. Through the efforts of Hon. Joseph Tumulty, president Wilson has practically granted that education in the Philippines (I) shall be under the control of the Catholic church, and that religious activity in the great American army shall be under the direction of the Knights of Columbus. This means the addition to the church of one million young men, or at least their strong preference and sympathy for the Catholic church. We must make the most of this opportunity. President Wilson has also shown every encouragement and sympathy with the program of the church in bringing the war-orphaned children of Belgium and France to this country. These children are solidly Catholic and will be reared and educated in the faith.

All these things, moreover, show that President Wilson and the Democratic party are sincere in their friendship for the Catholic church. This is only as it should be, because the Democratic party is the one in which is found almost 90 per cent of the Catholics. By an alliance between the Catholic church and the Democratic party, the ideals of both will be made secure by creating a dominant political organization. This may be proved by actual figures. This country's normally Republican by about three million votes. There is not much doubt that the Catholic church can give the Democratic party two million more votes, secured by women's suffrage, because in their noble devotion to the cause, in their noble devotion to the church, the women of the Catholic church will vote for its interest.

The Catholics will soon have an opportunity to prove their appreciation of President Wilson's friendship, and at the same time increase their political prestige and strength. The Republicans are making a desperate effort to wrest control of Congress from the Democratic party, and in this way discredit the President. Their party machinery is quiet, but deadly. In elections that have already been held, they have made decided gains partly through the indifference of the Democratic voters. Every Catholic must awake to his duty and stand by his church and President Wilson. Your duty is plain. The Republican party is the recognized and open enemy of the Catholic church. Every recognized leader in its organization, from the lowest to the highest, is a member of the secret and pagan order of Masonry the ancient and most dangerous enemy of the Holy Catholic church and the true faith.—National Catholic Register.

LAURA WALWORTH, EDITOR

The Haunted Heart

It was something of a shock to Howard Sheldon when he discovered that his heart was haunted. The trouble began many weeks before election day. When with a group of friends, he discussed the different candidates for office. Judge Streising and Colonel Dalton interested them most because years were in the race for two of the highest offices and were touring the state together. Two such able orators easily drew the crowds and captured them too, by their apparent anxiety to help make America a really free country. A wave of delight swept through Dalton, carrying Howard and scores of others on its crest. All other candidates were completely overshadowed. The subtle charm of their oratory seemed to mesmerize the entire town.

For years Howard had been a staunch prohibitionist. His boyhood days had been filled with the horrors of drink, for until a few years ago saloons had made Dalton a hotbed of misery. The hatred of it all had filled his soul and he had fought the evil thing until America went dry. Then, prohibition being a certainty, Howard and his friends promptly fell asleep.

But while they slept the enemy worked fast and furiously and one day they awoke to find moonshine and mash coming from every part of Dalton while moonshiners and mashers were playing a cute game of hide and seek with the officers of the law. Barrels of liquor purged down the throats of Dalton's citizens and some who wanted to enter eternity by a still quicker route seasoned their moonshine with wood alcohol, Jamaica ginger and other equally stimulating liquids.

Howard was greatly concerned about all this. He constantly met men who tried to walk on both sides of the road and at once found that crimes of all sorts were being committed. Men were dying all about him from the effects of bad liquor and he wondered how such things could be in a dry country. So the candidates for office should be considered carefully. Howard thought, and whoever would promise to stop this drunkenness should have his vote. While he was still puzzling over the cause of all this moonshine, Judge Streising and Colonel Cook arrived. They were able to show him just where the trouble lay and they did so at once.

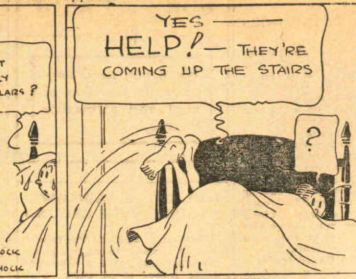

Prohibition was an utter failure. That was the secret. These men emphatically declared it and appeared to be overwhelmed with sorrow because of the moral breakdown of American citizens since the adoption of the eighteenth amendment. The Volstead Act was full of weak spots which they put their fingers on with no gentle touch. The remedy was easily applied, however, for with men like themselves in office they could easily dry up Dalton and America.

That challenged Howard's attention and he listened eagerly for the remedy. The Volstead Act should be repealed at once, they said, or at least greatly modified. Beer and light wines should be allowed the people. Then—bootlegging, private stills and all such evils would disappear.

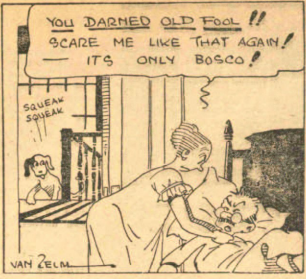

Each candidate spoke convincingly and with one hand on his heart and the other lifted skyward he swore that if he were elected to office a great new day would dawn for Dalton. In order to create a nobler citizenship a modified law admitting beer and wine was absolutely necessary. Men would then be free to drink or leave it alone and of course they would leave it alone. The only reason why people so delighted in drinking booze now was because there was a law against it. Men always longed for the forbidden thing and liquor being forbidden of course it was anxiously craved. If the law for bidding it were repealed why then—then! The orators thumped the desk and let the audience imagine the rest.

Howard pondered these statements carefully. That point of view was new to him and he be-

PEAK DECAPITATED BY QUAKE

Alpinists Find Huge Granite Block Undermined by Deep Crevices of Mount Gail.

Mount Gail, a peak 7,000 feet high, in the lower Engadine, has been decapitated by an earthquake. When the geologic observatory registered the earthquake shock it also reported slight shocks in the canton of Grisons, in Switzerland. Alpinists from Maloja who recently climbed Mount Gail found that its top, a huge granite block, undermined by deep crevices, had fallen into a ravine several thousand feet below.

Velocity of Light.

The first determination of the velocity of light was made by Rømer in 1676. The method was based upon the observation of the eclipses of Jupiter's satellites, phenomena of frequent recurrence and of observation. Assuming that light requires time wherein to move from place to place through space, the interval between successive eclipses would appear too short when the earth is approaching Jupiter and too long when the earth is receding therefrom. Rømer found in his observations that such was the case, and that the interval was conditioned by the rate of speed with which the earth changed places relatively with Jupiter. From these constants Rømer computed that light expended about 16 1/2 minutes in crossing the earth's orbit. His deduction is deduced a velocity of about 186,500 miles a second.

CHAPTER XIII.—Continued.

"Miss Woodruff," replied the professor, "has something to say about those looks toward truth, and something we need. Just how far he will go, just what he will amount to, it is not for me to say. But something must be done for the rural schools—something along the lines he is trying to follow. He is a struggling soul, and he is weak. I don't think he will make any mistake if you make the most of Mr. Irwin."

Jim slipped out of a side door and fled. He started home, and he was overtaken by the colonel, driving briskly along with room in his buggy for Jim.

"Climb in, Jim," said he. "Dan and Dolly didn't like to see you walk."

"They're looking for you," said Jim.

"There is a good deal to say whenever two horse lovers get together. But when Jim had alighted at his own door, the colonel spoke of what had been in his mind all the time.

"I saw Bonner and Hnokon and Ed doing some canvassing today," said he. "They expect to elect Bonner to the board again."

"Oh, I suppose so," replied Jim.

"Well, what shall we do about it?" asked the colonel.

Jim was silent. Here was a matter on which he really had no ideas except the broad and general one that truth is mighty and shall prevail; but he was not in the habit of making such a statement.

"I think," said the colonel, "that it's up to you, Jim, to decide the people here a chance to decide. It's really Bonner against Jim Irwin."

"What you need is a man to take that case," said the colonel.

"Well, I'm free to say I don't know that any one can, but I'm willing to try. I think that in about a week I shall have the word about it."

"I like to serve my country on the school board."

Jim's face lighted up—and then darkened.

"Even then they'd be two to one, Colonel."

"Maybe," replied the colonel, "and maybe not. That would have to be figured on. A cracked log splits easy."

"Anyhow," Jim went on, "what's the use? I can't be disturbed this year—and after that—what's the use?"

"Why, Jim," said the colonel, "you aren't getting short of breath are you? I thought you good for the mile, and you aren't turning out a quarter horse, are you? I don't know what all it is you want to do, but I don't believe you can do it in nine months, can you?"

"Not in nine years," replied Jim.

"Well, then, let's plan for ten years," said the colonel.

"That's all right. That would have to be a reformer at my time of life as a temporary job. Will you stick it for me?"

"I will," said Jim, "I'm a member of a person taking the vows in some solemn initiation."

"All right," said the colonel, "we'll keep quiet and see how many votes we can muster up at the election. How many can you speak for?"

Jim gave himself for a few minutes to thought. It was a new thing to him, this matter of mustering votes—and a thing which he had always looked upon as rather reprehensible.

The colonel, however, was not a person of opinion, no persuasion, no suggestion, and vote his sentiments.

"I can't say you can round up," persisted the colonel.

"I think," said Jim, "that I can speak for myself and Old Man Simms."

"That's all right," said the colonel.

"Fine politician!" he repeated. "Fine politician! Well, Jim, you round up yourself and Old Man Simms and I'll do what I can do—I'll see what I can do."

A Minor Case Half a Vote.

He needs me in the election tomorrow. What's the matter of your of man? Next? What for does he vote for that Bonner, and throw down an old neighbor?"

"I can't do anything with him!" exclaimed Newton irritably. "He's all tangled up with Peterson and Bonner."

"Well, said Pete, "he'd just stay at home if he would help some. If he votes for Bonner, I'll be just about a stand-off."

"He never misses a vote!" said Newton despairingly.

"Can't you cripple him some way?" asked Pete jeeringly. "Darned funny when a boy of your age can't control his father's vote!"

"I wish I could vote!" grumbled Newton. "I wish I could! We know a lot more about the school, and Jim Irwin beat a good teacher than he can."

off, or engaged in some deep dark plot.

"I s'pose you're off to trampin' the slews at the sight of a flock of ducks four miles off as usual?" stated Mr. Bronson challengingly.

"I thought," said Newton, "that I'd get a lot of rain bait ready for the pocket-poppers in the lower meadow. They'll be thriving up their mounds by the first of April."

"Not them," said Mr. Bronson, somewhat mollified, "not before May. Where'd you get the rain bait?"

"We learned it in the school," answered Newton. "Jim had me study a bulletin on the conditions of the rain-baiting of pocket-poppers. You use raisins with strychnine in 'em—and it tells how."

"Some fool notion, I s'pose," said Mr. Bronson, rising. "But go ahead if you're careful about handling the strychnine."

Newton spent the time from twelve o'clock to half after two in watching the clock; and twenty minutes to three found him in the woodshed, penknife in hand, a small vial of strychnine in his pocket, and the string tied to his right hand, and another exactly like it, partially filled with popper bait—raisins into which a minute quantity of strychnine had been inserted on the point of the knife.

At three-thirty Newton went into the house and lay down on the horse-shoe sofa, saying to his mother that he felt kind of funny and thought he'd lie down a while. At three-forty he heard his father's voice in the kitchen.

"What's the matter?" he asked. "You look like the devil."

"A grain issue from Newton's lips—a genuine groan. But his father's voice from the kitchen door was not so agitated. He was scolding the horses as they stood tied to the hitch-post. In tones that showed no knowledge of his son's distressed mood.

Rat Trap and Dry Mash

Feeder in Combination

A combination rat trap and dry-mash feeder is a rather novel addition to the poultry house. The feeder is a long box, 1 foot high and 1 foot wide, with a sloped and slatted top, through which the hens put their heads to eat during the day. To convert this into a rat trap, a 4-inch hole was bored in the end of the hopper, a short length of 4-inch stovepipe fastened in the hole, and a bag tied over the other end of the pipe and spread out on the ground. A heavy board cover was hinged to the feed box; this was kept open by means of a hook during the day, but the hook was released, and

A small prop with a string attached to it kept the cover open during the day, but the hook was released, and
